OBITUARY

DEODATUS HILIN NEALE.

Deodatus Hilin Neale died on Wednesday evening, April 5, 1893, at his home in Brooklyn. Mr. Neale was born on September 5, 1849, in England, and was educated to be a mechanical engineer. He was at one time chief draughtsman of the London and Northwestern Railway, and afterward assistant locomotive superintendent of the State railways of Cape Colony. In 1885 he came to the United States to report for "Engineering" (London), the exhibition of railway appliances at Chicago. In November of that year he joined the editorial staff of "The Railroad Gazette" in New-York. This place he resigned at the end of November, 1888, to take an appointment as Mechanical Engineer to the Railway Commissioners of New South Wales, and went to Sydney, where he remained until the summer of 1892. His services under the railway commissioners were of great value to the colony, and also to American manufacturing interests. He made a strenuous and successful effort to further the use on the colonial railroads of American locomotives, Pullman cars and the Westinghouse air brake. In November, 1892, he returned to "The Railroad Gazette" as associate editor, and occupied that place at the time of his death.

Mr. Neale was a man of more than ordinary intellectual powers; he was singularly well equipped in his profession, both theoretically and practically, and had a great store of broad and accurate information. He was a clear and concise writer, and his contributions to the literature of his profession have been of great value.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM C. SPENCER.

Baltimore, April 6 (Special).—Captain William C. Spencer, U. S. A. (retired), died here last night, aged sixty-nine. He was a son of William C. Spencer, a noted lawyer, and a nephew of John C. Spencer, secretary of War, during part of President Tyler's Administration. Being appointed a second-lieutenant in the 2d United States Infantry by President Pierce, in 1855, he served in the Sioux campaigns of 1856-57, winning a promotion to a captaincy. In 1861, he was assigned to duty as Captain in the 17th United States Regulars, with headquarters at Fort Preble, Maine. There he recruited five companies and went with them to join General McClellan on the Peninsula.

When the Federal authorities placed his uncle, Judge Carmichael, of Maryland, under arrest, because of his sympathy with the Southern cause, Captain Spencer expressed himself so freely concerning the action that he found it advisable to resign. While still under arrest he went to Washington, and, through General Ruggles, was placed in command of a company and fought in the second battle of Manassas. In 1872 he applied for readmission to the Army, but no action was taken by Congress until a year ago, when the bill placing him upon the retired list with the rank of captain was signed by President Harrison. For some time he was on the editorial staff of "The Baltimore News." His brother, Julian M. Spencer, is librarian of the Naval Academy.

GEORGE F. FOWLER.

Saratoga, N. Y., April 6.—George F. Fowler died last night at his home in Woodlawn-ave., this village, of congestion of the brain, aged seventy-six years. He had been ill only a few weeks. In 1856, he represented the 1st District of Oneida County in the Legislature. Subsequently he removed to New-York, where he practised his profession, the law. About thirty years ago he became counsel for the Adirondack Company and its railway, and then removed here. He was associated with Dr. T. C. Durant in that enterprise, and held the post of counsel until Durant sold the railway to the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company. By his researches in the Secretary of State's office and several county clerks' offices, Mr. Fowler became recognized as an authority on land titles in Saratoga, Warren, Essex, Hamilton and Franklin counties. A widow and a daughter survive him.
