ROMANES ON WEISMANN.

AN EXAMINATION OF WEISMANNISM. By George John Romanes, M. A., LL. D., F. R. S. Pp. ix., 221. The Open Court Publishing Company.

The method adopted by Professor Weismann in the publication of his theories of germ-plasm, of cell immortality, and so on, has kept his reviewers busy. For he has never maintained the same point of view in two successive publications. He has been his own sharpest critic. His minute familiarity with the whole field of biological research has kept him awake to every discovery that affected his system. Thus, though Dr. Romanes has had the advantage of previous controversy over the new theories, yet the chapters in this book are by no means continuous. Weismann is taken to task in one place for views which he is found to have given up in another. Except in the matter of terminology, he seems in his later works to have made a nearer and nearer approach to the opinions of Galton. He no longer maintains the absolute stability of his germ-plasm nor its perpetual continuity, and he acknowledges the transmissibility in rare cases of acquired characters.

Dr. Romanes argues that Weismann's whole theory of evolution has been demolished either by himself or by others, but that his theory of heredity has been at the same time improved, and "It only remains for him to withdraw the last remnant of his theory of evolution by cancelling his modified and even less tenable views on amphimixis in order to give us a theory of heredity which is at once logically intact and biologically probable." Dr. Romanes quotes with approval Weismann's own remark that "the question as to the inheritance of acquired character remains, whether the theory of germ-plasm be accepted or rejected," and adds on his own account that there has been no change in the question as to the inheritance of acquired characters in the last twenty years. The value of Weismann's theory philosophically, then, seems to have been negative. It put a stop to the excessive worship of heredity in the scientific pantheon, and formally, though in a somewhat circuitous way, attacked the belief in spontaneous generation, a belief which in various disguises has maintained its hold even upon men of science.

Dr. Romanes traces, curiously enough, the tendency of much modern science, a tendency that may well be compared to the one shown in the history of scholasticism. Weismann, as he points out, shows in his later works more anxiety to complete his system ideally than to limit it by the legitimate results of induction. One might almost suspect that he had it in mind to imitate the perfection of those marvellous deductive systems of the middle ages which proved everything they set out to prove simply by assuming the whole in the major premise of a syllogism. The same tendency is displayed in the writings of nearly all such naturalists as are too well assured of the sufficiency of the principle of natural selection. It is needless to say that speculation which takes this turn is no longer scientific in the meaning given to that word earlier in the present century.

GEN. BOOTH'S AUTHORITY IN QUESTION.

A CERTIFICATE OF MARRIAGE BY THE LEADER OF THE SALVATION ARMY IS RETURNED FROM THE VITAL STATISTICS BUREAU.

The authority of General Ballington Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in this city, to perform a marriage ceremony was questioned yesterday by Dr. John T. Nagle, Register of Vital Statistics. Dr. Nagle said he had received a certificate of the marriage of Adjutant Robert Bell and Major Elizabeth Chatterton, setting forth that the ceremony had been performed by General Booth, at Association Hall, on October 16. In signing the document General Booth had written "Salvation Army" after his name. Dr. Nagle sent the certificate back to General Booth, with a question as to the authority for performing the marriage ceremony.

General Booth said later to reporters that he was a regularly ordained minister of the Gospel. His authority to unite persons in the bonds of wedlock never had been questioned before.

Major Perry, of the Salvation Army, who has charge of all the legal business of the Army in New-York, was seen yesterday afternoon in his office, in the headquarters of the Army, in Readest. He said:

"I presume the objection to the certificate is caused by the fact that it was carelessly indorsed 'Salvation Army' after the words 'official position.' I do not believe that Dr. Nagle means to question Commander Booth's right to perform the marriage ceremony, for many certificates signed by our officers have heretofore been filed in New-York and other States."

HIS LOSS IN WALL STREET WAS SMALL

THE REAL REASONS FOR NATHAN STRAUSS'S SUICIDE STILL UNKNOWN—HIS WEALTH.

Among business men in Wall Street and in the dry-goods district yesterday there was any amount of speculation as to the causes which led Nathan Strauss, the New-York representative of the great San Francisco house of Levi Strauss & Co., to kill himself. It was impossible to trace any of Mr. Strauss's operations in Wall Street to a direct source. That he was an operator in the stock market for several years appears to be certain, and at times he is said to have speculated on a large scale. His operations were often successful, but the impression prevails in the Street that he had recently been on the wrong side of the market. He is reported to have been "short" of Delaware, Lackawanna and Western and of American Sugar Refining, and as these stocks have lately enjoyed a large advance, there was an opportunity for a stubborn bear to lose considerable money.

It is not often, however, that an experienced speculator fights long against a rising tendency of values, and it was not believed that Mr. Strauss's ventures in stocks were likely to be so disastrous as to tempt him to suicide on account of financial losses in this direction. Whatever might have been his loss, it is pretty certain that it was small for a man whose fortune ranged between $800,000 and $1,000,000.

Mr. Strauss had not only inherited large sums of money from his father and his uncle, but his salary as New-York agent for the San Francisco house was about $25,000. A Tribune reporter who went to the Grenoble Flats at Seventh-ave. and Fifty-seventh-st., yesterday, was told that no member of the family could be seen, and that no information regarding the suicide of Mr. Strauss would be given to the public. The store of Levi Strauss & Co., at No. 88 West Broadway, was closed, and a card on the door announced that the closing was on account of the death of Nathan Strauss.

The funeral, which is strictly private, will take place early this morning, at his home in the Grenoble Flats. Then the body will be taken to Salem Fields, and there temporarily laid away, until its final disposition has been settled. In all probability, it will find a final resting place at Elmira, the birthplace of Mr. Strauss.

UNFOUNDED REPORTS ABOUT THE MACHIAS.

A report published yesterday to the effect that the gunboat Machias was topheavy and in danger of turning "turtle" was criticised by officers as unjust and an unfounded cause of alarm to the relatives and friends of those on board the vessel. The Machias left the Navy Yard on Tuesday to make a forty-eight-hour trial at sea, under the direction of a board of which Commodore Walker is president. The object is to test her movements in a seaway, and to determine if there is any necessity for a readjustment of her weights. Soon after she returns she will start for China, and it was declared by officers yesterday that there need not be the slightest apprehension lest she should fail to reach her destination in safety. Her metacentric height, that point which determines the qualities of stability, was recently tested in the dry-dock and was reported as sufficient.

THE SOCIETY OF THE WAR OF 1812 MEETS.

The Society of the War of 1812, instituted in this city in 1826 by officers who had served in the War of 1812, celebrated yesterday, in the Governor's Room at the City Hall, the eighty-first anniversary of the battle on the Chateauguay, in Lower Canada. The Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, president of the society, was in the chair. Among those present were Thomas M. Stuyvesant, of Madison, N. J., one of the original veteran members who served in the defence of New-York Harbor in 1814. It was voted to restrict admissions to hereditary membership to proper descendants of commissioned officers and commanders of letters of marque and reprisal who had served in the War of 1812. Among the hereditary members present were Asa Bird Gardiner, Henry Chauncey, jr., Dr. Gouverneur M. Smith, James M. Varnum, the Rev. Alexander Hamilton, James M. Montgomery, George N. Gardiner, Charles Isham, Lieutenant Garland N. Whistler, Morris P. Ferris, Maturin L. Delafield, L. B. Smith, J. H. Morgan, John B. Holland, J. H. Townsend, George W. Olney, Charles A. Schermerhorn, David Banks, jr., John Du Pair, R. H. Gallatin, Rufus Hatch, Count Thaddeus Kosciuszko Chutkowski, and Joseph L. Delafield.

Directors were elected, and an adjournment was taken to January 8, 1894, the anniversary of the battle of New-Orleans.

KING'S DAUGHTERS IN ANNUAL CONVENTION.

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (Special).—Many women prominent in church missions and temperance work are attending the annual National Convention of the King's Daughters. Miss Smylie, of New-York, conducted the services this morning. The convention divided into four sections, which discussed severally the following papers: "The Country Girl Who Comes to the City," presented by Mrs. Whitney, of West Haven, Conn.; "The Mothers' Meeting," by Mrs. Ayres, of Brooklyn; "Assembly," by Mrs. Drumm, of Fordham, N. Y.; "The Girls' Friendly," by Miss Bessie Thompson, of New-York City. This evening a public meeting was held at Ascension Church, addresses being made by Miss Johnson and Mrs. Kenyon, of New-York, and Miss Baylor, of Virginia. There was a sharp contest over the question whether or not the chaplain should hold office for life; the constitution of the order says he shall. A committee was appointed to consider the matter. Some of the young women said the preachers at the meeting did more than their share of talking. Steps were taken for the formation of chapters of the society in Canada, Australia and the West Indies.

A NEW COMMITTEE AT WORK.

STOCKHOLDERS OF THE MADISON SQUARE BANK WILL TRY TO PAY THE DEBTS.

CLASH BETWEEN THEM AND THE DIRECTORS—EXPECTATIONS THAT THE RECEIVERS WILL SOON BE MADE PERMANENT.

There was a lively meeting of the stockholders of the Madison Square Bank at the office of Edward Lauterbach, the attorney for the stockholders' Committee of Seven, yesterday afternoon. About twenty-five of the stockholders attended it, and they were not in an exceedingly pleasant humor. The meeting started with an objection from some of the stockholders to the presence of the directors, but the directors insisted on their right, as stockholders, to be there. There were practically two meetings as a result of the objections of the stockholders—the directors in one room and the stockholders in another. The Committee of Seven presented a report of the efforts to re-establish the bank, and asked to be discharged on account of the attacks made upon some of them. The report was accepted, and the request to be discharged from further service as a committee on reorganization was granted.

Then a new committee was appointed. This committee consists of stockholders only. R. Stafford, the proprietor of the hotel at No. 1,252 Broadway, is its chairman. The other members are Joseph Scheider, Henry Comstock, Louis Schwarz and Joseph L. Butterwieser. The members of this committee resolved to do all that they could to protect the interests of the stockholders. The depositors were not mentioned. James D. Leary, one of the stockholders and a member of the first committee, said:

"The old committee had pledges to the amount of $400,000 to re-establish the bank. Of this amount R. T. McDonald subscribed $125,000, Frederick Uhlmann $125,000, and I subscribed $50,000. After the $400,000 had been subscribed, only $100,000 more was needed to put the bank on its feet again. The meeting at the Hoffman House on last Monday night was to raise the additional $100,000. Mr. Uhlmann, Mr. McDonald and I agreed to put in $25,000 each to make up this deficit, and we were planning to raise the other $25,000 when the arrests were made. The arrests, however, will not interfere with our efforts to pay off the indebtedness of the bank."

It was learned yesterday that the new committee would oppose any sale of the securities of the bank at auction at the present time on the ground that they are worth considerably more than can be obtained for them in the present state of affairs. The new committee will not oppose having the temporary receivers made permanent, but will aid the receivers in every way in straightening out matters.

Miles M. O'Brien, one of the receivers of the Madison Square Bank, said yesterday:

"I have been informed by the Attorney-General that he has already taken steps toward having the temporary receivers of the bank made permanent. As soon as we are appointed permanent receivers we shall advertise for all claims to be put in, and shall proceed immediately to the work of settling the affairs of the bank. Meanwhile, there is plenty to do in the way of investigation. We shall probably have something more to say about the bank's condition in a few days. I am informed that the Attorney-General will proceed as rapidly as possible to have the charter of the bank dissolved."

Assistant District-Attorney Davis, whom District-Attorney Nicoll assigned to the examination of the affairs of the Madison Square Bank, had a long conference with Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the receivers, yesterday. Mr. Untermyer went over the history of the bank from the beginning. To-day he will bring the books of the bank to Mr. Davis's office. Mr. Lauterbach also called on the Assistant District-Attorney. Mr. Davis said late in the afternoon that he was not yet in a position to know whether any further arrests would be made or not.
