BASEBALL MEN COMING AGAIN.

TO HOLD THEIR ANNUAL CONVENTION—MANY QUESTIONS MUST BE DISCUSSED.

The advance guard of the little army of capitalists who control professional baseball in this country will arrive in this city to-morrow to be early on the ground for the annual convention of the National Baseball League, which will be held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel on Wednesday. While all is now peace and good will in the baseball world, the club owners at the same time have much important work to do. The Board of Governors will meet in secret session in Parlor F at noon on Wednesday, but as all the club owners will be in the city before that time many deals will mature before the delegates meet in formal session. There is scarcely a club in the country which is satisfied with its team as it finished the season, and many arrangements are being discussed regarding the exchange of certain players.

Even the Boston Club contemplates one or more changes and several new faces may be seen on the champion team next season. The Pittsburg nine, which finished so well, contemplates making several changes, and the managers of that team anticipate exchanging several players.

PLANS OF THE NEW-YORK CLUB.

The stockholders of the New-York Club have been up and doing for some time, and the entire local organization is likely to be remodelled from top to bottom. No club should be handicapped with foreign stockholders, and the New-Yorkers are worse off in this respect than any other team in the country. The Giants are owned all over the land, stock being held in Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Chicago. It is the intention of the local stockholders to buy in all this stock, if such a thing is possible, in order to make the Giants a purely local institution, as it was before the organization of the Players' League. Most of the out-of-town holders show a disposition to sell at a fair price, and the League should use every effort to persuade the obstinate ones to get into line as quickly as possible.

Messrs. Talcott and Wheeler, as well as Cornelius Van Cott and E. A. McAlpin, are all working with this object in view, and their efforts should be crowned with success. New-Yorkers are well content to support their own but not other people's property, and the sooner the out-of-town stockholders realize this fact the better it will be for all concerned.

A SHAKE-UP IN THE BROOKLYN CLUB.

The affairs of the Brooklyn Club, while all serene in a financial sense, are considerably tangled in other respects. Many an old sore was reopened last season and the team across the river wound up the year with a general feeling of dissatisfaction between the management and the players. President Byrne, for instance, issued a manifesto that Thomas Kinslow, the catcher, should not play in the special series with the New-York team. The other Brooklyn players rebelled and gave Mr. Byrne to understand that Kinslow would play in the series, and he did, his good work going far toward defeating the Giants.

The stockholders of the club will hold the annual meeting of the organization at Jersey City to-morrow, and it rumor is to be believed there will be a lively shaking up all around. Richardson, who was suspended in August for insubordination, caused the first break between the players and the management, and as the season advanced the breach continued to widen. Richardson is unquestionably one of the best ball players in the country, and the club owners will make a mistake if he is not placed back on the team. There are also rumors that C. H. Byrne may retire from the club, but the stories cannot be traced to any trustworthy source. Foutz would hardly accept the management next season under the conditions which prevailed last season.

TO REMAIN AS IT IS.

Persons well posted in baseball affairs place little credence in the stories, generally emanating from the West, that the present League circuit is to be disrupted and two organizations formed on the old eight-club League and eight-club American Association plan. Nearly every club in the League made a handsome profit last season and none of them lost any money, for the first time in the history of baseball in this country.

The reorganization of the Association would bring about the old order of competition and exorbitant salaries to players, a condition which the club owners view with horror; in fact, it is known that the players will demand a general increase in salaries and the League men are now trying to devise some scheme to dodge this issue. Salaries may be raised materially in 1895, but the incomes for next year are not likely to be greater than this year.

THE WORK TO BE DONE.

Outside of the player question much other important work will be done before the League men scatter to their homes. The squabble over the Philadelphia gate receipts may go against the Quakers, for the simple reason that Messrs. Reach and Rogers have more enemies than friends.

The double umpire question will be discussed, but it will hardly be adopted. Disputed games will cause little trouble, as usual, and the Cincinnati-Washington forfeited game, which deprived Brooklyn of sixth place, may be the only one thrown out. The bunt hit is doomed, and stringent rules will be made regarding drinking in the ranks. Professional football may be discussed in an informal way, but nothing will be done just yet. Then the club owners will throw bouquets at one another, and go home to whet their appetites for their Thanksgiving turkeys.
