FOR AND AGAINST DR. SMITH.

BIBLE INERRANCY THE ISSUE.

ARGUMENTS BEFORE THE PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY.

THE LANE PROFESSOR REPLIES TO THE CHARGES OF THE PROSECUTING COMMITTEE AND CALLS FOR THE ORIGINAL BIBLE MANUSCRIPT—MR. M'DOUGALL'S ELOQUENT REJOINDER.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.]

Saratoga, N. Y., May 25.—No one knows definitely at this writing whether or not Dr. Henry Preserved Smith is heretical. The General Assembly has not given its official answer to his appeal. The Committee of Prosecution made its final appeal this morning. Dr. Smith gave his answer to the arguments of his brother presbyters. Half a dozen representatives of the Synod of Ohio followed, the conservatives giving all their time to Thomas McDougall and the liberals using theirs individually. Then Ohio left the house constructively, and the 500 and more judges in the case began their consultation. For an hour they engaged in this open conference, and during that time forty-five commissioners spoke, thirty-three against Dr. Smith's appeal, eleven in favor of it, and one man spoke in favor of a part of it and against the rest, but this places him with the Smith men. The Synods of Atlantic, Baltimore, California, Catawba, China, Colorado, Illinois and India had been called, and half of the men from Indiana, when the gavel fell at 5 p. m. Twenty-one Synods, besides Indiana, remain to be called. Few of the elders responded to their names, only ten of the fifty-three so far. A significant fact is shown—only one elder so far has spoken in favor of Dr. Smith. A vote will probably be reached to-morrow, but not until late.

DRIFT OF THE ARGUMENTS.

The tenor of the addresses on each side may be gathered from the following from two members of the Chicago Presbytery. Dr. David R. Breed, arguing against the appeal, and therefore against Dr. Smith, said: "The question before this Assembly is not one of the appellant's attitude to the Holy Scriptures, whether it be reverent and sincere; nor of the spirit in which he has prosecuted his studies and conducted his professional work, nor is the question one of his private opinions, nor even of any personal sentiments which he may have expressed in private conversation. Neither is the question whether the appellant may remain in the Presbyterian Church as a private member, his good standing in this respect not being involved. The question relates to his public utterances, printed for the purposes of circulation and distributed both widely and repeatedly. Nor is the particular history of the delivery and publication of these utterances at this time germane to the question, but only their acknowledged or proved authorship. This Assembly having first ascertained that Dr. Henry Preserved Smith is the actual author of certain published theories and sentiments, and that he still adheres to them, one single question, as it seems to me, remains: Are these theories and sentiments in accord with the Holy Scriptures, and our Confession of Faith? If this question be answered in the affirmative, no other question follows; but if answered in the negative, then we ask: Can these sentiments be approved in the ministry of the Presbyterian Church, and shall one who declares his determination of declaring them be permitted to continue to exercise his functions as a public teacher? As a member of this court, and one of the appellant's judges, I rule out other questions. But after listening to the arguments in the case, I am compelled to answer the main question in the negative and to vote not to sustain the appeal."

Dr. N. D. Hillis, of Evanston, Ill., arguing for the sustaining of the appeal, spoke as follows: "With the full consent of my reason, judgment and conscience, and without any mental reservation whatsoever, I cast my vote to restore Professor Smith to the Presbyterian ministry. The prosecution concedes that he believes in and teaches the great truths of Christianity, to wit: Incarnation, Atonement and Regeneration; and that he holds to the distinctive principles of the Presbyterian faith and polity. He is charged with heresy because he affirms his ignorance touching the errancy or inerrancy of the original MSS. Now, how can it be a crime for Professor Smith to be ignorant of documents destroyed long centuries ago?

A CALL FOR ORIGINAL EVIDENCE.

If the prosecution were to produce the original MSS. and exhibit them in their flawless and perfect condition, no man will rejoice more over this great treasure than the appellant in this case. Is this Assembly to expel a man for heresy and forbid him to bring the truths of Jesus Christ, or conscience, duty and destiny, to ignorant and erring men because he refuses to affirm what the Confession itself does not teach, what the Confession does not affirm? The Westminster fathers threshed all over this theory of inspiration. When they could make no theory that in detail was perfectly satisfactory to all parties, they outlined this large, liberal statement of the Confession, covering many possible theories, of which Professor Smith's is one. Let us remember the Bible is not a treatise upon grammar, natural history or astronomy; it is a book of morals and redemption from sin. We need not be unduly alarmed about its permanency being affected by the higher criticism. Another generation may find little of value in the principles of new scholarship or may find much. Until all the facts are in, no man can decide. But the principles of Christianity are founded more surely than the mountains and stars. I cannot refrain from testifying to Professor Smith's fine spirit and noble manhood. How beautiful his bearing; how patient, modest and gentle under attack; his are, indeed, the fruits of the spirit. Are we to vote him out because we are unlike him? There is no heresy like the heresy of the heart. I believe in the rights and liberties of scholarship. I believe in freedom and toleration. For me to call Profesor Smith a heretic would mean for me to represent my Master. But with him also I believe that the Holy Scriptures are the only infallible rule of faith and practice."

GREETINGS FROM THE BAPTISTS.

The Presbyterians began their eighth day of business by friendly greetings from representatives of the Baptist societies now in session in Convention Hall. After the morning prayer meeting, Dr. Howard Duffield, of New-York, introduced President Strong, of the Rochester Theological Seminary; Professor Northrup, of the Divinity School of the Chicago University; President Hovey, of the Newton Theological Seminary; Dr. Mabe Field, secretary of the Baptist Home Missionary Society, and C. W. Kingsley, of Massachusetts. Dr. Strong made the first address, in which he said that the Presbyterians and the Baptists, both Calvinists, agreed in all the essentials of Christian faith. He complimented the Presbyterians upon their fidelity to the truth, asserting that they followed Luther's three "onlys"—the Word of God only, the grace of Christ only, and the power of the Holy Spirit only. He had no sympathy with that spirit of materialism which would lead God to the frontier of the universe, and then bow Him out of the world, thanking Him for His provisional government. Dr. Strong acknowledged the debt which he owed Dr. W. G. T. Shedd and Dr. H. B. Smith, who, he asserted, had done nearly as much for theological thought in this century as Jonathan Edwards did in the last.

Professor Northrup followed in a similar vein, and the visitors received a very hearty response from the Moderator of the Assembly. Before this part of the business was finished, Dr. Duffield moved that the Committee of Correspondence should arrange with a committee from the Baptist societies for a joint meeting, when expression might be given to the common Calvinism and the spiritual unity of the Church of Christ. This meeting is fixed for 9:15 p. m. Sunday. The audience rose and sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and then sat down to continue the heresy trial.

POINTS MADE BY ELDER SHIELDS.

The first address was made by Daniel H. Shields, the Elder of the Committee of Prosecution, which had secured the conviction of Dr. Smith in the Presbytery of Cincinnati. He was introduced by Dr. James, the second member of the committee, as a plain farmer. Mr. Shields reviewed the case from its inception, calling the attention of the Assembly to the fact that the case comes before the present judicatory just as it left the Presbytery, only that the judgment of the Synod, expressed by a large majority, is added to that of the Presbytery, and he used this as an argument for asking that the sentence should be reaffirmed by the Assembly. The appeal of Dr. Smith was then examined in detail. Mr. Shields asked where there was any authority for excluding any member of the Presbytery from his place in it when it becomes a court to judge its ministers or condemn erroneous opinions and teachings? If the rule sought to be adopted by Dr. Smith were to be carried out, no minister would dare lift his voice against any erroneous doctrine or teaching, for fear that at some future time he might be called to sit in one of the Church courts and pass judgment upon its author. The speaker urged the Assembly to repeat the decisions of former Assemblies, especially those at Portland and Washington. A false step now, he said, might destroy the Presbyterian Church which is now passing through the time of its trial. Will we preserve our integrity and our faith, he added, or will the hand write upon the wall, with regard to us, "Weighed and found wanting"? The Presbyterian Church still believes the Bible the Word of God.

DR. SMITH REPLIES TO THE COMMITTEE.

By the understanding adopted by the Assembly, Dr. Smith had an hour in which to reply to the committee. He was suffering slightly from hoarseness, but was able to make himself heard with ease. Without any attempt at oratory and no appeal whatever, with no peroration, he stood before his accusers and his friends for an hour, exhibiting the same gentle spirit which has been such a marked characteristic of the present session. He referred pleasantly to the committee's criticism of his phrase, "Analysis, sifting and cross-questioning," and added: "The member drew a dark picture of the audacity and wickedness of the creature who would cross-question the Creator. He showed the motive of the cross-questioner to be to discredit the witness, because cross-questioning is done by the opposing attorney, but I must confess to a little carelessness here. I never thought of that aspect of it. In my unfamiliarity with legal matters I had forgotten that cross-questioning is intended to discredit the witness. In my simplicity I supposed it was intended to bring out the truth. When I look at it, that seems to me, at least, an allowable meaning, and if you will examine the sentence in the pamphlet which has given so much offence, you will see it says nothing about cross-questioning the Almighty."

Dr. Smith then took up the criticism of the committee relative to his language about the chronicler, and said, in part: "No one can deny that the chronicler actually omits the darker features from the account of David's life. Now, I wish to take the full responsibility for what I have said. The evidence of the pamphlet does undoubtedly show divergence from the view set forth in the charge framed by this committee. All of these inferences being correct, it is yet true that I have asserted the following points: (1) The chronicler has omitted from his book sundry statements of fact; (2) the inspiration of the Scriptures is consistent with error of fact in their affirmations; (3) the inspiration of the Scripture is consistent with the idiosyncrasies of the writers which influence their utterances; (4) a part of the Book of Isaiah is by another prophet than Isaiah; (5) it is impossible on the basis of the facts as we have them to conclude that the Old Testament Scriptures are free from all errors of fact."

POINTS ON WHICH BOTH SIDES AGREE.

Dr. Smith discussed these points at some length, and then called attention to the points on which all agree. "When we get these before us," he said, "we shall see better where we differ. The points on which we agree are these: (a) The Bible contains matter directly revealed by God; (b) it contains other material not in the strict sense revealed; (c) this material is of importance for its bearing on the history of revelation; (d) this material was chosen by men acting under distinct influence of the Holy Spirit, which we call inspiration; (e) the result is a book which, in its totality, is the Church's permanent and infallible rule of faith and life." Dr. Smith reiterated that he had no desire to lay undue emphasis on his special theory. If there was any way of accounting for all of the facts which will allow Presbyterians to hold to absolute inerrancy they should know it. The question before the Assembly to-day is whether the theory of inerrancy of the autographs is fundamental to the Presbyterian system that a minister who does not hold it must be excluded from office. He would not question the right of the committee to hold certain theories of inspiration, and he did not think that his theory was so destructive that it should debar him from the ministry. He closed with the assertion that the heart of the whole case is that the inerrancy of the original autographs is a new doctrine. It is also an unnecessary doctrine. It defends nothing which is of value to the faith of the Church. It gives no surer hold on the truth of God.

The speaker treated it as a dangerous doctrine and as opening the door to the very foe that it is trying to shut out, substituting for the present rule of faith and life a lost and probably irrecoverable document, and he added that if the Assembly would reinstate him until those autographs were found, he would remain in the ministry for the rest of his life, without the fear of suspension hanging over him. His last point was that the doctrine itself was not formulated until last year, after he had been convicted, and that, therefore, it could not be retroactive in its effect. His closing sentence was a plea for toleration and forbearance.

MR. M'DOUGALL'S ARGUMENT.

Mr. McDougall said in speaking for the conservatives of the Synod of Ohio: "Dr. Briggs affirmed that he believed this Bible. He affirmed that he believed these standards. We were told about his scholarship and his high character, but, nevertheless, we said, brethren we cannot yield our judgment and convictions at the feet of so-called scholarship or high character. Now you can go and reverse this doctrine. You have the power. You may say, because of his sweet spirit and high character, that you will reverse this decision, and in reversing it reverse the decision at Washington, and in removing suspension from him remove suspension from Dr. Briggs. You may go down before the world and say as he says, say it so that you cannot be mistaken, that that decision at Washington was wrong, these deliverances were wrong; the deliverance at Portland was wrong.

"Now, brethren, that is this case. Now, bear in mind that we have decided in the case of Dr. Briggs, this supreme court, that the statement made by this appellant that Isaiah did not write the latter part of the Book of Isaiah was a fundamental error, vital and essential to the Presbyterian faith. And we decided what has not been mentioned, that the statement that Moses is not the author of the Pentateuch, which is in these specifications that this appellant holds that belief—that that, too, was a vital and fundamental error, and struck at the vitals of religion. That stands on your record. That is the solemn assertion of the greatest denomination in Christendom, to the faith in the Word of God. Will you reverse it? Will a wave of sentimentality sweep across you and divert you from the high and solemn responsibility and trust committed to your care? I affirm, brethren, in this great presence, what I said in the Synod of Ohio to a beloved brother: 'If the kind of a Bible and if the kind of inspiration, whatever that is, and if the kind of conception of God that is involved in that kind of a Bible that Dr. Briggs and this appellant and others believe in, is to be the faith of this beloved Church, then I cannot see how I can be any longer one of the sons of the mother who bore me.' No God but an inerrant God, and no word but an inerrant word from His hands warrants me or my children in risking my eternal destiny upon it.

THE DOOR STILL OPEN.

"Now one or two words in conclusion. Brethren beloved, my brother here has said this is an ex-post facto decision. Ah, brethren, the latch is still out on the door! His beloved and noble wife and mine played together as children. The two of us sat under the ministrations of the beloved brother, Dr. McKibben, and the two of us have shared in the common sorrows that in the mysterious providence of God have taken some of our little ones and sainted ones home to Himself, and as he tossed on the Atlantic in his sorrow, at no household was he more fervently prayed for, with his beloved wife, than at ours. Oh, that you would come into this household of faith and submit yourself to the decision of these thousand men of your Church, who say that your views are not their faith. Come now, my brother, the door is open; make full proof of your ministry, train our children in the faith as our supreme court has decided it, and we will rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Who has feeling? Do you think it is a light matter that Dr. McKibben has gone through the struggle and the persecution and the misrepresentation? Do you think it is any easy matter for those of us who are here behind our faith delivered to us in trust? Oh, no! Let the past bury the past. If this supreme court shall say to my brother, your appeal is not well taken, it should not be sustained, and he will say, having submitted to your judgment, 'I submit as a loyal Presbyterian,' we would call the Cincinnati Presbytery together in twenty-four hours on our return, and afford him the opportunity to make full proof of his ministry."

NIGHT SESSION AT TRENTON.

LAWS IN SPITE OF GOVERNOR WERTS.

MANY REFORM BILLS PASSED OVER THE EXECUTIVE VETOES—STIRRING SCENES UNEXPECTEDLY DEVELOP.

Trenton, May 25 (Special).—Senator Ward changed his mind about voting against the Newark and Jersey City Boards of Works bill at the last minute to-day. The Senator had stated that his constituents were opposed to the measure. When the farmer-statesman reached the State House to-day he was agreeably surprised to find a large body of his friends and neighbors in the Senate Chamber, and they soon convinced him that they were heartily in favor of wiping out the boards in the two large cities. All the important bills vetoed by the Governor were passed to-day by both House and Senate. There was a lively "deadlock" in the Legislature this afternoon, which lasted about three hours. Senator Bradley thought the house was holding a bill in which he was interested, and he refused to vote for any of the party measures until his bill was passed by the House. Several members of the House had bills in the Senate, which they insisted upon that body passing, and they refused to vote for any Senate bill until those in which they were interested were passed by the Senate. And so the deadlock came about. Both houses finally took a recess, and, after a talk over the difficulty, matters were adjusted, and all disputed measures were taken up and disposed of.

There was a lively time in executive session of the Senate to-day. Senator Skirm making strenuous objections to the confirmation of W. T. Hoffman, of Monmouth, as circuit Court Judge, and several Senators objecting to Thomas B. Carley as State Prison Inspector. Mr. Hoffman, hearing of the opposition, withdrew his name, but Carley was rejected. Governor Werts sent in the name of Wells Lawrence in place of Carley, who was promptly confirmed, as was also a large batch of appointees.

The incidental bill, over which a big fight was expected, was taken up and passed without debate. Among the bills passed over the veto to-day was the Crowley-O'Neil bill, the Custodian bill, the Newark Non-Partisan Excise Commission act, the repeals of the gerrymander and the joint resolution empowering the committee investigating the Thompson-Lippincott contest to spend $2,000.

Concurrent resolutions were passed to-day requesting Congress to place a lighthouse in Maurice River, and one asking that the life-saving stations be kept open during the entire year.

It is evident to-night that Senator Voorhees's bill reorganizing the courts of the counties throughout the State by making them elective will prevent the adjournment of the Legislature as soon as expected. It had been agreed that a recess should be taken to-night until October 2. The amended Courts bill passed the Senate this afternoon and was at once sent to the House, but the majority was divided on the measure and a bitter fight ensued. Those opposed to the bill prevented it from coming up until the evening session, and when it got on the calendar the end of the session took place. Those opposed characterized the measure as a too radical departure from the time-honored customs of the State, and those favorable to it told of the uselessness of the lay judges and of the enormous expenditure of the county courts. On the call of the roll 27 members voted in favor and 17 against the bill. Messrs. Watson, of Camden, Murphy, of Essex, Salinger, of Hudson, and Mallack, of Mount Holly, all said to be favorable to the passage of the bill, were among the absentees. Mr. Sporrs, who supported the bill on the floor in a vigorous speech, moved a call of the House. Speaker Holt dispatched the sergeant-at-arms for the absentees, and Mr. Sporrs and Mr. McEwan insisted that the call continue until the absent members are brought before the bar of the House. Both men insist that the call shall be continued all night, if necessary; and as the call cannot be suspended under the rules of the House except by a majority vote, the probability is that the House will remain in session till morning. Messrs. Salinger, Murphy and Mallack cannot get here except on the train leaving New-York at midnight. This being an accommodation train, the members cannot reach Trenton until 9:30 o'clock to-morrow morning, even if found by the sergeant-at-arms. The Senate has completed its business and is awaiting the action of the House to rise until October 2. It was expected that Judge Cross would be elevated to the Speaker's chair this evening, but Speaker Holt has not yet tendered his resignation, he wishing to remain in the chair until after the passage or defeat of the Court bill.
