FEMALE SENIOR EVENING SCHOOL OPEN.

A RUSH OF PUPILS ON THE FIRST NIGHT OF REGISTRATION—SUCCESS OF THE WORK.

The Female Senior Evening School, No. 239 East Houston-st., was reopened last night for registration. New pupils will be received for nine successive evenings, and the classes will begin work on October 1. In less than two hours after the doors were opened last night, more than 300 had applied for admission—about 150 being new pupils—and as there was every reason to believe that the number might increase to 500, it became necessary to close the doors. The term continues eighteen weeks, the following branches being taught: Reading, including spelling, definitions, grammar, historical and biographical reading; English and American literature, arithmetic, penmanship, composition, including letter writing; bookkeeping, single and double entry; drawing, mechanical and freehand; shorthand. Special classes will be formed for Germans, Russians, Bohemians and French, so that they may acquire a knowledge of the English language. Requests have been made by a number of the advanced pupils for classes in French and German, but no provision has been made by the Board of Education for instruction in these branches. The young women who make these requests declare that they are unable to obtain the positions that they otherwise might get without a knowledge of these languages. A demand for lessons in cooking and sewing became so urgent that the matter was placed by the Board of Education before the Board of Estimate. The allowance was not granted at the time of asking, but the large number of pupils who wish for instruction in these branches earnestly hope that the matter may be satisfactorily arranged at the meeting held this week by the Board of Estimate.

A matter which causes much dissatisfaction among both pupils and teachers is the fact that while there is an evening high school for men, the young women have thus far been unable to obtain one. A number of the pupils have continued their studies from year to year, hoping that an advanced education might be given them. All pupils in the evening school must be sixteen years old or over. The majority of the number present last evening were young, but a few were forty years old and over. One dainty little French woman, who is sixty years old, has been a regular pupil for six years. She began with almost no knowledge of the English language. She is now taking an advanced course in literature. Miss Mary Pierson, principal of the school, began six years ago with a corps of eight teachers. She now has twenty-five. Miss Pierson is most enthusiastic regarding the success of the work, and speaks in the highest praise of her pupils. The motto of the school, chosen by the principal, "Faithful Service Insures Success," seems also to be a personal motto with all, judging from results. Without exception, the pupils were neat, even attractive, in appearance, and the principal reported steady application to study and an evident enjoyment in the work on the part of the old pupils. The atmosphere of the school seemed to indicate a desire for knowledge, and a hearty co-operation on the part of all to carry out the excellent advice of the principal given to the pupils, as follows:

"Study, if you would give satisfaction in your present position. Study, if you intend to seek a better position. Study, if you want to make your home and family better and happier. Study, if you wish to gain respect among your friends and employers. Study, if you have any high, noble or lofty purpose for yourself or others; for 'knowledge is power.'"
