THE GENERAL MARKET REPORT.

New-York, October 10, 1894.

COTTON—After opening barely steady and unchanged to 3 points decline, the market sold off several points more, January working down to 5.95 during the forenoon, against 6.05 at the close yesterday. During the early part of the afternoon there was a rally of a few points, the price at 1 p. m. standing at 5.99 for January. The sales up to that hour were 108,000 bales. During the rest of the afternoon the market was fairly steady, closing steady in tone at a net decline of 6 to 7 points, and total sales for the day 147,600 bales. The principal feature of interest was the Government report on the condition of the crop, the general average condition showing a decrease of 3.2 per cent from the September condition. The condition on October 1 was 82.7, against 85.9 September 1 and 70.7 October 1, 1893. This was about what the trade expected, the estimates during the forenoon being for 82 per cent. The report had but little effect on the market. The Weather Bureau report of the conditions to-morrow indicates that the weather will be a little more favorable. Rains have been quite general on the Atlantic Coast, some frost reports continue to come in, but it is noticed that most, if not all of them, report a temperature considerably above 32, which is considered the killing point. Hubbard, Price & Co. have received a telegram from Pine Bluff, Ark., which reads as follows: "Weather favorable for picking. There has been no frost sufficient to injure the crop as yet, and accounts of damage from this source are much exaggerated. An explanation of the light receipts is to be found in the fact that planters are holding back cotton on account of the low price." Memphis reports this morning that there was frost in that section again last night, but the minimum temperature was 42 degrees. The estimate of the New-Orleans Cotton Exchange of the semi-weekly interior movement is for 140,000 bales, against 110,000 bales last year. The local temper is pronounced bullish, and the frost reports appear to be discounted. It is stated that high grade spot cotton has been bought at 5-16c above New-York quotations. The indications for the portward movement this week still point to about 290,000 bales, compared with 262,827 bales last week and 262,351 bales last year. Receipts at New-Orleans to-morrow are estimated at 10,000 to 11,000 bales, including 10,983 bales last week, 7,732 bales last year. Receipts at Houston, 10,065 bales, against 16,029 bales last week, 5,679 bales last year, and at Galveston, 1,795 bales against 1,771 bales last week, 2,375 bales last year. Concerning the bureau report, local authority says: "The bureau report of to-day gives the best average condition for October 1o for any year since 1882, and at the same time it gives an estimate of the yield per acre, which, if correct, would indicate a crop of 7,000,000 bales. It occurs to us," says this authority, "that this estimate of the cotton crop on October 1 from official sources is entitled to as much credence as the estimate of Mr. Neill on August 1, as in neither case can the parties making the estimate foresee what the weather will be from October 1 to January 1, and it is usually admitted that the outcome of the cotton crop depends upon the picking season more than upon any other portion of the year."
