ON THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Friday, August 2—p. m.

People who rush to hasty conclusions were somewhat alarmed to-day when announcements of large gold withdrawals were made, and the bears in the stock market were able to influence values to their own liking. It should be remembered that the gold withdrawn to-day for export to-morrow was taken in great part by commercial houses and that none of the large banking concerns, which are usually heavy shippers of the precious metal, were interested in the movement and showed no disposition to become interested in it. It should also be remembered that the bond syndicate made good to the Treasury last week the amount of gold previously taken out for export, and that it stands ready to repeat the operation if such a course should become necessary. The bond syndicate controls sufficient gold to meet any drain made upon the Treasury by gold exports, and the chances are that if it did not control such an amount of gold it would prevent a drain upon the Treasury by easing up in its foreign exchange rates. The pressure for remittance on mercantile account is rather heavy just now, and some firms find it cheaper to send gold than to take the syndicate's bills, and they question the right of the syndicate to hold exchange at the present high figures; but the syndicate does not force them to buy its bills, nor does it interfere with them if they wish to export the metal. There is no necessity for uneasiness on account of exports of gold, and even if they should reach a large amount they would have no harmful effect upon the Treasury, which has an ample store of gold and will be protected according to the terms of the contract, which do not, as has been repeatedly said, require the syndicate to prevent all outward movement of the metal. The Bank of Montreal withdrew $1,000,000 gold to-day from the Sub-Treasury to add to its cash reserve, and two mercantile firms and a bullion house took out between them $1,350,000 gold for export to Europe to-morrow.

Until the pressure in the foreign exchange market is removed there will be no material gains in the stock market. General conditions, however, are too encouraging to make sharp declines, other than those brought on by professional trading, likely, and gold exports under present conditions should not have any material effect upon prices, which are only waiting for an end of the high rates of exchange, and the harvesting of crops before moving up. Exaggerated reports about gold exports were circulated this morning, unsettling the market, and weak holders sold. In the afternoon, when a better knowledge had been obtained about the gold withdrawals, there was a tendency toward higher prices. Over one-third of the total transactions were in Sugar Refining, which was sold for profits on the advance of the last few days. The Granger shares were down about 1 per cent, and the general railway list was lower. The Southwestern railway shares were inclined to resist the downward movement, and only lost fractionally. Distilling and Cattle Feeding opened weak, but rallied on the vacating of the Greenhut injunction obtained in this city yesterday. The old managers of the Distilling Company continue to object to the judicial sale of the concern, but their real motive is to influence the stock market to such an extent as to shake out enough stock to enable them to cover their short contracts on the Stock Exchange. An injunction was obtained in the Supreme Court yesterday by representatives of the Greenhut-Morris interests to restrain the Reorganization Committee from purchasing the properties of the company, and promptly vacated to-day on a proper presentation of the facts to the Court. From Chicago comes the advice that a New-York State judge cannot interfere with the sale ordered by the Federal Circuit Court. So there seems little probability of further objection on the part of the former managers of the company being successful. The stock market closed at lower prices, which were in most cases at a rally from the lowest figures of the day.
