THE YULETIDE TRIMMINGS TRADE.

"Trade in Yuletide trimmings," said a wholesale dealer in Christmas decorative greens to a Tribune reporter yesterday, "was not up to the mark this season. Only a few wholesalers have come out with a profit, while some were glad to get back a new dollar for an old one, and others have 'come out at the little end of the horn.' The volume of business was as large as and probably larger than it was last year, but there was a much bigger stock, and a considerable surplus was left over, which is now worthless. There were about 110 carloads of trees received in this city, which contained a total of about 330,000 trees, big and little. Of these from eighty-five to ninety carloads were consumed in and around New-York, and the remainder were shipped to other cities and towns.

"The surplus of trees is comparatively insignificant, but the excess of evergreens, holly and other materials for making roping, wreaths and other devices is very large. It is impossible to estimate the total quantity of stock received, aside from trees, but it was many thousands of tons, and the quantity of roping would foot up to hundreds of thousands of yards. Since Christmas the Yuletide 'green-goods' dealers have been selling their material for a song, or literally giving it away to get rid of it. This season's experience will make dealers more wary, and it will probably be many a year before the market will again be so largely overstocked."
