GENERAL MARKET REPORT.

New-York, September 13, 1899.

COFFEE—The market for coffee futures presented quite a cheerful aspect to the trade evening up several points on Friday. Shorts were prompted to seek cover in much smaller volume than the average of late, as well as the unexpected demand from outsiders was in evidence. Some buying for the account was noticed, but generally speaking it proceeded with extreme caution, being disturbed by lack of knowledge as to the probable extent of the crop and the number of outsiders ready to enter the market. Despite large outstanding obligations and current low prices prevailed the sentiment is an aggressive one, and it is not the part of the bear to yield. At the close the market was quiet and steady, but unchanged. Total sales were 10,000 bags, including spot coffee, mostly for refiners' account, at 7¾c for fair cargoes and 6c for fair to good cargoes of No 7 Rio. The arrival of the steamer Normal from Rio yesterday with 15,000 bags for this country is reported. The Dutch sale at Amsterdam went off at about the above mark, leaving the market quiet. Good refining Java was quoted at 20c. The following is a comparative range of coffee prices in the local market to-day was as follows:

In reviewing the situation broadly, Hubbard Bros. & Co. state: The cotton trade on either side of the Atlantic is basing its opinions on foundations so entirely different that it seems not at all strange the markets move in different planes of action. One need only indulge in a casual reading of the foreign newspapers to become aware of the importance attached to Mr. Neill's opinions abroad, and the utter disregard of his information relating to show that the impression prevailed in the August circular is not the correct forecast of the coming crop. We realize the position of a foreign spinner, who, in the face of the best all around trade demand ever known, disregards the probability of any reduction in exports, and ignores the report of the Agricultural Department is believed abroad to be without any basis whatever, and it is further believed that beneficial and seasonable rains have fallen throughout Texas, and that the prospects are good for a large crop everywhere else. Against these influences, America, presents the undeniable fact that a drouth has prevailed over Texas for over a month, with the temperature higher and the rainfall less than during any August of which the Exchange has record, that a reduction in acreage throughout the cotton belt is admitted by every candid observer, and that the use of commercial fertilizers in the upland country was largely decreased. Whether these factors have any effect upon the production and yield of cotton the future will decide; if they do not, then we will have to admit that the conclusions of a generation are valueless. Our home spinners are not waiting for their foreign competitors to alter their views, but are buying tardily at relatively high prices, not for their only their raw material, but the profits they have in hand from the contracts for the delivery of their products for nearly a year ahead. In fact, the situation to-day presents a direct antithesis to the situation in September, 1899, when the great decline in cotton began. Then the spinning world, in the face of a panic, just visible, and the prospects of a crop beyond all precedent at that time, was a large buyer. Now the trade and consumption of the world are beyond the wildest dreams of a year ago, while the crop prospects cannot be compared with those of that time but of last year. Cotton Exchange special Liverpool cables: Spot cotton in good demand, sales, 12,000 bales, speculation and export, 1,000. American, 11,000, including 10,000 American. Futures opened steady at 1-64@2 decline and closed steady, net unchanged to 1-64@2 advance. Spot cotton, [illegible] January-February, 3.23c; February-March, 3.23c; March-April, 3.24c; April-May, 3.24c; May-June, 3.25c; June-July, 3.25c; July-August, 3.26c; August-September, 3.26c; September-October, 3.26c; October-November, 3.25c; November-December, 3.25c. Manchester: Yarns in more inquiry but any advance some hesitant. Cloths in moderate demand.

FLOUR AND MEAL—A rather steadier market for flour, without actual advance in prices, was the response to the improvement in the price of wheat. But buyers were kept at a wide distance, transactions were confined to small lots, and the market closed quiet. Rye flour and meal were steady. Quotations: Fine, $2.90@$3.10; extra, $3.10@$3.40; city mills patents, $3.60@$3.75; winter straights, $3.30@$3.40; winter patents, $3.60@$3.75; spring straights, $3.30@$3.40; spring patents, $3.60@$3.75; rye flour, $3.10@$3.25; rye meal, $2.90@$3.00. Corn meal: Kiln dried, $3.10@$3.20; coarse, $3.00@$3.10; fine, $3.10@$3.20; brandywine, $3.20@$3.30.

GRAIN—Receipts of wheat have been very large of late, and the market has been weak and lower. The receipts have been in excess of the requirements of the trade, and the market has been depressed by the pressure to sell
