THE DAY'S OPERATIONS IN STOCKS.

The recovery that began in the final dealings in Monday's market continued yesterday without important interruption the greater part of the day. In several instances advances were sharp, and at the close substantial improvement was shown in the majority of stocks dealt in. To understand the day's sharp recovery it is necessary to bear in mind that liquidation has transferred the greater part of the floating supply of stocks to the accounts of rich speculative interests and investors, while it has created a large short interest, made up in great part of operators who have been influenced to take the short side on account of the recent severe decline. The "shorts," who for a long time worked for lower prices, doubtless secured their profits in Monday's market, while their place was taken by the men who always come in at the tail end of a movement in the hope of making money after the chance for making money has gone by. This sort of a "short" is easy of removal. With stocks in strong men's hands, and with bargain hunters about, it was a simple matter to squeeze the short interest yesterday, especially in the speculative issues that had been under extreme pressure.

The opportunities of getting successfully out of the short side of speculation in times of National prosperity are extremely limited. The dealings on Monday supplied the chance that many bears had been looking for, and in the opinion of the best judges such a rare opportunity will not occur again this year. Money market conditions probably will not work against the stock market for any material length of time, as far as producing further important declines is concerned, although they doubtless will check active bull speculation. Money, it should be borne in mind, will go to the place where it is needed the most. The law of supply and demand rules the money market, just as it rules all other markets, and to suppose that high rates for money and a scarcity of funds at this centre will not attract a movement of currency this way is absurd and illogical. The prospects are that the banks' actual cash holdings will show an increase this week, and, according to the opinion of some well informed bankers, surplus reserve above legal requirements will exhibit an increase of upward of $5,000,000. Liquidation in stocks has caused a big liquidation in loans, and the banks ought to show at the end of the week an important contraction in their liabilities. There is about $100,000,000 more in cash in the banks at present than there was at this time last year, and people who want to borrow money and have good collateral to offer find no difficulty in securing accommodation.

The fact that so many people have in the last few days bought stocks outright, while brokers' inquiries for additional margins have met ready response, reflects a solid condition of affairs that ought to be encouraging to all investors and speculators who look for higher prices. Commission brokers felt more cheerful over the situation yesterday, owing to the ease with which liquidation had been accomplished and the lack of panic and real disturbance in the transfer of capital involved. The situation is intrinsically sound. Actual values have not been injured, and technical conditions have been vastly improved. In the final dealings bear traders attacked the market, and in some cases early advances were lost, but as a rule declines were not important.
