THE DAY'S OPERATIONS IN STOCKS.

The bank statement, covering four days, showed a further contraction in loans and deposits, but an extensive loss in cash, and a decline in surplus reserve of $1,239,250. Money market rates in the four days of the week prepared the Street for a "bad" bank statement, and as far as the stock market was concerned the loss in reserve was without especial influence upon the day's dull and unimportant stock trading. In the greater number of issues fractional advances were made, but only in a few issues were transactions beyond the volume of a holiday market. Sugar Refining, American Tobacco, Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Manhattan monopolized the greater part of the buying and selling orders, but even in these stocks there was hardly enough doing to keep the ticker busy. Brooklyn Rapid Transit was sold down a point or more. The other local traction issues were under Wednesday's level the greater part of the day, while the general railroad list showed the irregularity that is generally a feature when traders are closing their contracts incident to the approach of a holiday.

The money market will doubtless control the stock market for some little time to come. If gold comes here from abroad in sufficient volume to relieve the situation the money market will be a bull card on stocks, while if imports are only moderate and bank reserves have to be increased by a severe further liquidation in loans the money situation will certainly not inspire renewed operations for a rise. Lower prices are not inevitable, but they are possible, and in view of the uncertainties surrounding the market careful traders will carry only moderate lines with big margins behind them. Short sales, however, are not certain to return profits, and as much caution is required on the short side as on the long side. It is a good market for turns, a good market to be "long" of for a long pull, and a market in which stocks are daily accumulating in the hands of rich people.
