THE DAY'S OPERATIONS IN STOCKS.

Only a moderate business was transacted on the Stock Exchange yesterday, and changes in prices were not important. There was a slow improvement in values until the appearance of the bank statement, after which there was some pressure to sell stocks, with a decline in prices. The bank statement, as had been expected, was an unfavorable one. The loss of $8,972,900 in cash was about twice as much as had been counted on. The fact that the previous statement was made up on declining averages, and that the gold shipped abroad yesterday was paid for Friday, thereby figuring for one day in the week's compilation, does not fully explain the shrinkage in cash. Apparently there was in the week a withdrawal of funds of which no public knowledge was obtained. The decrease of $3,089,100 in loans was small in the circumstances, but it was the first decrease since the statement of January 11. The decrease of $11,821,600 in deposits was explained by the loss in cash and the decrease in loans. The decrease of $6,017,500 in the surplus reserve left the cash holdings of the banks at the small margin of $3,958,425 above legal requirements. A year ago the surplus reserve was not much larger, being $5,676,375.

Loans not being made on Saturday, the effect of the bank statement on the money market, and in reality on the stock market, will not be apparent until to-morrow. The belief of operators seemed to be that money would be somewhat higher the coming week. Likewise a contraction in loans was looked for. It was thought improbable, however, that there would be any pinch in money. The understanding is that an agreement practically exists among the principal banks for the regulation of the money market whereby any actual disturbance in money will be prevented. The necessity for liberating money from the Treasury is said to have been pressed upon Secretary Shaw, and he probably may be relied upon to lend his aid at the required time. Nearby points like Boston and Philadelphia have needed a good deal of money lately, and money sent from New-York to those places may be called back in an emergency. It is certain that if the money question has become at all serious not much more will be heard of gold exports.

The transactions in stocks were widely distributed. The largest trading was in Mexican National common, but the fluctuations in the stock were only fractional. There was steady buying of Pennsylvania, with a small enhancement in price. The excitement in Colorado Fuel and Iron subsided, but the price of the stock held up. There was next to nothing doing in the United States Steel stocks. The dealings in Amalgamated Copper were of fair proportions, but resulted in no material change in the price. Sugar Refining was quiet.
