AN EXPOSITION IN 1907.

It Will Be Held to Celebrate the Settlement in Jamestown.

In honor of the landing of the first English settlers at Jamestown, Va., on May 13, 1607, arrangements are under way for the celebration in 1907 of the 300th anniversary of that event. Under the authorization of the Jamestown Exposition Company, of which Fitzhugh Lee is president, the Chamber of Commerce of Norfolk, the Retail Merchants' Association of Norfolk and the Chamber of Commerce of Newport News, emissaries have been sent to solicit the financial aid of all those who are interested in the movement. W. H. Lumsden, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Norfolk, and Hugh Gordon Miller, United States District Attorney in Virginia, are in this city getting subscriptions to the stock. In order that the charter of the company be preserved, it is necessary, they say, to raise the greater part of this money before January 1.

This movement is receiving the hearty support of prominent men from all parts of the country. Ex-President Cleveland, in a letter to Mr. Miller, says:

Hugh Gordon Miller, esq.

Dear Sir: After reading the prospectus of the Jamestown Exposition Company, and giving more thought to the project it has in keeping, I am thoroughly convinced that the surfeit of expositions which have somewhat afflicted our country ought not in the least to interfere with the success of the exposition planned for the celebration of the first white settlement upon the domain now embraced within the limit of the country we proudly call the United States.

We have fittingly celebrated the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America. The 300th anniversary of the settlement at Jamestown is hardly less worthy of commemoration. A great nation cannot bring to mind its small beginnings and its stupendous growth through such a celebration as the Jamestown Exposition Company contemplates, without stirring in the hearts of its people the best patriotism and the sincerest devotion to the principles which have made their nation great. And such patriotism and such devotion, so completely underlie American institutions, that their soundness and strength are absolutely necessary to our strength and perpetuity. I hope, therefore, that nothing will be lacking to make the exposition successful as an agency for the stimulation of our national pride and the increase of our faith in free institutions. Yours, truly,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 22, 1903.

In outlining the plans of the exposition, the prospectus says:

A leading feature of the exposition will be a great naval and marine exhibition in Hampton Roads. We expect to have the greatest assemblage ever seen of monitors, battleships, armored cruisers, gunboats, navy and army transports, torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers, submarine boats and every other class of ship for seacoast defences or for naval warfare; also a great assemblage of private yachts, together with a large number of launches, sailing craft of all descriptions. Not only the ships of our own navy, but of foreign nations will be present.

The Jamestown Exposition Company, with the co-operation of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, proposes to rebuild a considerable portion of Jamestown as it was in Colonial days. In 1907 visitors may there see a reproduction of the scenes of the early conflicts and struggles of the infant colony. Indian villages will be located on the outskirts and employes in charge will be dressed in Colonial costumes.

A site for the exposition, embracing 330 acres of beautiful high land fronting about 5,000 feet on Hampton Roads, at Sewall's Point, Norfolk County, Va., has been acquired, and the work of preparing it for the erection of the exposition buildings will begin as soon as the organization of the company is effected according to the terms of the charter. The site selected is by far the best, not only by reason of its accessibility, but because the world renowned Hampton Roads offers advantages for marine and naval displays far in excess of any place on this continent where an exposition has been held. The determination on the part of the company to purchase and own in fee simple the land upon which the exposition is to be held is a departure from what has been done in the past by other expositions. This determination, however, has not been taken unadvisedly, but with the idea of thereby saving much that has been destroyed or wasted by other expositions, securing a permanent benefit to the State and safeguarding the interest of the stockholders. The exposition in its scope will be international, and its features will be historical, industrial and naval.

The Jamestown Exposition Company proposes to issue and dispose of at par $1,000,000 of non-voting preferred stock, bearing and limited to a preferred 6 per cent cumulative dividend, shares to be of the par value $100, and guaranteed as to both principle and dividends. Subscriptions to said preferred stock are payable as follows: Two per cent, or $2 a share, payable on demand of the executive committee of the company, and the remaining 98 per cent shall be payable in seven equal instalments, each 14 per cent, or $14 a share, on January 1 and July 1 of each year, beginning on January 1, 1904. It is intended to retire this preferred stock after the close of the exposition by paying to the holders thereof its face value and all accrued dividends due thereon.

To secure the subscribers of the preferred stock and the payment of all other obligations or indebtedness which may be assumed by or may come upon it, the Jamestown Exposition Company proposes to establish a guarantee fund of $500,000, represented by subscriptions to the common stock, less so much thereof as shall have been used to acquire the land, no portion of which fund shall be returned to the subscribers of the common stock until said preferred stock is retired and all of said obligations or indebtedness shall have been paid. Upon the payment in full of the respective subscriptions to said guarantee fund certificates therefor of common stock in shares of the par value of $100 will be issued, fully paid and non-assessable. Each share subscribed and represented in person or by proxy at meetings of stockholders shall, as to each matter before the meeting, be entitled to one vote.

Subscriptions to the said guarantee fund common stock are payable as follows: Two per cent on demand of executive committee; 6 per cent on January 1, 1904; 7 per cent on January 1, 1905; 7 per cent on January 1, 1906; 6 per cent on January 1, 1907 and the remainder of 72 per cent upon the call of the board of directors, after January 1, 1907.

All correspondence in connection with subscriptions to the stock of the company should be addressed to T. J. Wool, 3d vice-president, Jamestown Exposition Company, Room 325 to 331 Atlantic Building, Norfolk, Va.
