CITY MUST CALL HALT

DEBT INCURRING LIMIT.

Mayor's Tax Commission Recommends Radical Retrenchment.

Mayor McClellan's Advisory Commission on Taxation and Finance reported to him yesterday that the debt incurring margin of the city on January 1 last was about $31,000,000. This means that with the new taxes figured in the margin on July 1 will be about $32,000,000. It also means that the McClellan administration will have to begin a system of radical retrenchment. It means that many projected improvements, such as the new Court House, the Hudson Memorial Bridge and extensive municipal subways, will have to be sidetracked for the time being. The Hudson Memorial Bridge scheme is already under way, but the cost will be cut down materially. The bridge subway loop plan also is under way. The Seventh and Eighth avenue and the Lexington avenue subways, now being advertised, cannot be built unless private capital is willing to undertake them. The estimated cost of a four track subway is $40,000,000.

The normal year by year expenditures just about keep pace with the income derived from the annual increase in assessed valuations.

Certain improvements that are under way cannot be abandoned. Among them are those already named, the Riverside Drive extension, the Manhattan Bridge, the Bellevue Hospital and the Rockaway Beach Park. Scores of other projects have been launched, but these will have to wait.

The commission suggests legislation which may enable the city in 1910 to resume its policy of making large expenditures for needed improvements, but until the recommendations are enacted into law the city will have to go slower. The Mayor's commission consists of Edgar J. Levey, chairman; Lawson Purdy, Edwin R. A. Seligman, Francis Lynde Stetson, Morris K. Jesup and Joseph Haag, committee on taxation and revenue; Edward M. Shepard, John L. Cadawalader, Charles T. Barney, John J. Delany and Frank J. Goodnow, committee on the city debt and special assessments; Frederick A. Cleveland, Herman Ridder, Julian D. Fairchild, John Crane and John C. Hertle, committee on accounting and statistics.

After reviewing the constitutional provisions concerning the debt incurring ability of the city, the report presents a summary, as follows:

Net funded debt falling within the terms of the constitutional limitation	$437,771,239 72
Net contract indebtedness	57,346,237 36
Indebtedness for lands acquired	17,109,785 15
Indebtedness for judgments (estimated)	2,000,000 00
Revenue bonds	30,295,000 00
Total indebtedness	$544,522,362 23
Ten per cent of assessed valuation of real estate	573,848,724 50
Balance	$29,326,362 27
Proceeds of bond sales unapportioned	1,816,856 46
Margin available January 1, 1907	$31,143,218 73

The city's debt incurring capacity is enlarged each year by 10 per cent of the increase, if any, of the assessed valuation of real estate. Ten per cent of the increases of the assessed valuation of the last three years has been as follows:

1904	$26,399,295 30
1905	20,595,852 20
1906	51,698,494 40
Average for three years	$32,897,880 63

It is estimated that the increase in real estate assessments for 1907 will be about $500,000,000, 10 per cent of which would be $50,000,000. It is to be borne in mind, however, that the real estate assessments in this city have of recent years been constantly approaching more and more nearly the theoretical limit of 100 per cent, or full valuation; that the last few years have been years of great prosperity and enhancing values of real estate.

It does not seem to your commission that in estimating such increases in future years a higher average than $30,000,000 should be assumed for this item. This is, of course, merely a matter of opinion and can be nothing more. It is scarcely conceivable, however, that even under the stress of necessity the Department of Taxes and Assessments could in the next five years maintain an annual increase in real estate assessments as great as those of 1906 and 1907.

The report says that the yearly average of bond issues since 1902 has been $45,537,525 86. These bond issues do not, in the judgment of the commission, give an accurate idea of the new indebtedness of all kinds incurred in the period mentioned, and by including the funded and other indebtedness the commission finds that the average yearly increase due to new indebtedness has been $53,318,043 67. In the judgment of the commission:

Either the city must enter into a period of enforced economy in the way of capital expenditure, reaching even so far as the complete abandonment of such public improvements as are not to be regarded as absolutely essential, and a severe retrenchment in regard to even such important needs as schoolhouses and street improvements, or assessed valuations must be forced upward to a degree which your commission can but regard as unnatural and likely to result in hardship and injustice; or provision should be made for an amendment to the constitution increasing the city's power to incur debt.

While favoring the principle of exemption of debts incurred for self-sustaining public enterprises, we emphatically condemn any further measure of relief from salutary safeguards of the constitution which does not carry with it an equivalent protection for the taxpayers. No further progress along the lines of the constitutional amendment of 1905 seems either desirable or safe.

Your commission, therefore, has deemed it the part of wisdom to prepare a conservative plan for a proposed constitutional amendment, which, while exempting from the terms of the constitutional limitation bonds issued for self-supporting enterprises, would at the same time provide a nearly automatic scheme by which, should such an enterprise ever become non-supporting, the bonds issued to defray its cost would immediately be counted in estimating the city's indebtedness.

The expression of this idea in a form suitable for incorporation in the constitution has proved to be a matter of some difficulty. In our opinion, it is necessary that some tribunal should be named which should determine periodically what debts incurred by the city should not in a given time be included in determining the city's indebtedness, because of the fact that the undertakings for which they were incurred were self-supporting.

We believe that the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court is the proper tribunal, because that body has satisfactorily discharged a similar function in regard to the determination of transportation routes imposed upon it by the state constitution.

In conclusion, we find that the adoption of this amendment and its application by the courts would add to the margin of permissible indebtedness about $140,000,000, representing the exclusion of bonds outstanding for the following purposes and in the following amounts:

For subways	$45,000,000
For docks	56,000,000
For water purposes prior to 1904	39,000,000
Total	$140,000,000
