TO UNITE ALL AMATEURS

Gustavus Kirby Wants National Athletic Federation.

EVERY SPORT INCLUDED

President of A. A. A. U. Outlines Plan for a General House Cleaning.

An athletic organization of national proportions, whose principal object shall be to bring about some harmony in the conflicting definitions of an "amateur" in all American sports, is one of the purposes of Gustavus T. Kirby, president of the Amateur Athletic Union, and chairman of the advisory committee of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America. Mr. Kirby made this startling statement of his intentions at the recent annual banquet of the Middle Atlantic Association of the Amateur Athletic Union in Philadelphia. The radical progressiveness of the thought emphasized by Mr. Kirby seemed to escape the newspaper men present at the meeting and Mr. Kirby's ideas are given here for the first time.

Mr. Kirby has made a close study of amateurism and has been forcibly impressed with the inconsistencies in the definitions, as made by the various associations which control the different forms of sport. These definitions are so conflicting that an amateur in one sport is a professional in another. For instance, the strictest definition is that imposed by the Amateur Athletic Union and the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletics of America. In these associations an amateur is one who has never competed for a money prize or any valuable consideration or with professionals for a money prize.

There is no doubt that the ideals of the various golf, racquet and lawn tennis associations are quite as high as those of the Amateur Athletic Union. Yet these associations accept men who are professionals in other sports, of men, in fact, who have competed in other sports for money.

The Amateur Athletic Union and the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America rules proclaim that if a man is a professional in one sport he is a professional in all. This is the feature of amateur athletics which does not appeal to Mr. Kirby, and while he admits the difficulties which confront him he would like to bring about a better understanding between all the associations which attempt to define an amateur, so that all would be working toward one end, and whereby the rulings of one body would be accepted by another.

His plan is for one central body to be called, as he suggested, the Amateur Athletic Federation of the United States. This association would be made up of all the other national associations which now control different branches of sports. Thus, there would be one association for the control of track and field athletics, another for swimming, another for baseball, and others for tennis, golf, wrestling, boxing and all the other sports.

Mr. Kirby is broad minded enough to recognize that it is impossible and inadvisable to attempt to have one uniform definition of an amateur in all of these sports, because, although a man may be a professional in one sport, he may be quite as good an amateur in another sport as one who might claim to be an amateur in all, according to the Amateur Athletic Union definition.

Every one who is interested in the furtherance of amateur sports in this country hopes that Mr. Kirby may bring about the organization of such an association as he outlines. There is no doubt that there are many inconsistencies in the definition of an amateur as observed throughout the athletic world. Although James Thorpe, the Carlisle Indian, who proved himself to be the world's greatest all-round athlete at the Olympic games, was later declared a professional, he was no more a professional than several other members of the American team and members of foreign teams. It is a fact that no one will deny that a number of men who competed for the United States and for other countries in the revolver, rifle and trap shooting events would have been professionals if the Olympic Council had had one general definition of an amateur, the same as in track and field sports. Many of the men just referred to represented various trades, and while they were not nominally employed by their firms because of their marksmanship, as a matter of fact they held their positions for that very reason and their salaries went on while they represented the United States at Stockholm.

Mr. Kirby's suggestion would likewise solve the evil of summer baseball. It would make it necessary, however, to organize an intercollegiate baseball association, which would determine the definition of an amateur in baseball. If this baseball association were a member of the national federation all of its rulings would have to be accepted by the Amateur Athletic Union and the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America. It is a question whether or not Mr. Kirby's ideas will prove acceptable to the Amateur Athletic Union and the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America, which for many years have stoutly maintained that a professional in one sport is a professional in all. There is this merit in Mr. Kirby's suggestion—namely, that it deals with facts and not with theories. As things now stand, the gulf between the amateur and the professional is wide, and nothing is being done or can be done to eliminate the crooked amateurs, the men who play professional baseball in the summer under assumed names and then masquerade as amateurs for the rest of the season.

Mr. Kirby summed up his position in these words: "I have nothing against the professional who is an honest professional, but I do detest the dishonest 'amateur,' the man who poses as an amateur, but who plays summer baseball under an assumed name or practices other forms of deception which we all know about."

BIG MORNINGSIDE RUN LIST.

Seven teams from Philadelphia will start in the third annual five-mile run of the Morningside Athletic Club of Harlem this afternoon, with most of the New York Club teams as opponents. The course will be from the clubhouse, at 126th street and Morningside avenue, to Broadway, east on 155th street and down Seventh avenue to the starting point. Practically every club of the metropolitan district has entered runners.

SCHOOLBOY GAMES POSTPONED

Followers of scholastic baseball were sorely disappointed yesterday owing to the continuous rain, which forced a postponement of the ten games scheduled. Most of the games will be played on open days this week, with Manual Training and De Witt Clinton opening up on Marquette Oval, Brooklyn, to-morrow afternoon.

WEATHER MARS SHOOTING

Vanderveer Carries Off Lion's Share of Prizes at the Weekly Tourney.

In the driving rain of yesterday afternoon Ralph L. Spotts, a member of the American Olympic trapshooting team, won the clay bird championship of the New York Athletic Club over the traps at Travers Island. Notwithstanding the inclement weather, twenty-six gunners took part in the shoot. The winner made a total of 181 out of a possible 200 targets. His individual scores were 25, 22, 23, 22, 22, 22, 23 and 25.

Second prize went to J. H. Vanderveer, who recently won the championship of the Crescent Athletic Club. Mr. Vanderveer returned a total of 178. Then came Frank Hall and D. S. McMahon, with totals of 177. The pair had to shoot off for third prize, which went to the former gunner. E. M. Higginson, who won the total in 1912, did not defend his title, he being in Canada at the present time.

In addition to the title match, the gunners decided the usual weekly programme. J. H. Vanderveer won both the high scratch and high handicap prizes, the club trophy and the Spring cup. As he could not take both the high scratch and the high handicap cups, the latter trophy went to Frank Hall. A. E. Ranney won the Monthly cup, and G. F. Pelham captured the Travers Island trophy.

There will be no shooting at Travers Island next Saturday, as the Winged Foot gunners take part in the big Invitation shoot of the Larchmont Yacht Club.

FIVE TITLES CHANGE HANDS

Wrestlers Grapple in Keen Bouts in Amateur Tourney.

Five wrestling champions were dethroned in the final bouts for the metropolitan championships of the Amateur Athletic Union at the New York Athletic Club last night.

George Taylor, of the National Turn Verein, of Newark, who is also the national champion in the 108-pound class, and A. C. Anderson, of the Norwegian Turn Society, in the 135-pound class, were the two wrestlers who successfully defended their titles.

The new champions crowned were: 115-pound class, H. Junge, National Turn Verein; 125-pound class, W. Droege, East Side Y. M. C. A.; 145-pound class, C. Johnson, unattached; 158-pound class, R. Jaeckel, N. Y. A. C.; 175-pound class, J. Varga, Boys' Club, and 175 pounds and over, J. Gunderson, Norwegian-American A. C.

The judges were called upon to render decisions in three of the special bouts which went the limit of fifteen minutes. George Taylor, of the National Turn Verein, of Newark, caught a tartar in David Bronstein, of the Boys' Club, in the final tussle. Taylor had his opponent in several tight places, but the latter wriggled out of them. The judges awarded the verdict to Taylor.

Robert Jaeckel, of the New York Athletic Club, and Peter Smith, of the Twenty-third Street Young Men's Christian Association, battled for fifteen minutes for the 158-pound title. Jaeckel won.

The summaries follow:

BANTAMWEIGHT.

108-pound class (final bout)—George Taylor, National T. V., Newark, awarded decision on work over D. Bronstein, Boys' Club. Time, 15:00.

ARMY AND NAVY NOTES

New Battleship May Outclass Dreadnought Type.

TO BE CONSTRUCTED HERE

General Board Recommends Trying Some Features of British Battle Cruiser.

(From The Tribune Bureau.)

Washington, April 12.

TO CONSTRUCT BATTLESHIP AT NEW YORK.—The Secretary of the Navy will soon take up the question of construction of the battleship authorized just before the adjournment of the 62d Congress. At the instance of Representative Fitzgerald, the naval bill contained a provision requiring the construction of this vessel at a navy yard. Secretary Daniels will order the naval constructors on duty at the New York Navy Yard to prepare for the work. The material will be purchased under contract, after competitive bidding conducted by the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts. It is probable that the boilers and machinery will be contracted for separately after it is determined what type of motive power shall be installed. The design of the ship has been completed only tentatively. A general proposition has been furnished to the Secretary of the Navy by the Naval General Board. The details will have to be worked out by the Bureau of Construction and Repair.

The General Board recommends a departure from the design of the Pennsylvania and the adoption of a type described as a compromise between the battleship and the battle cruiser of the British navy. Some naval officers have been in favor of the latter type, but opposition developed among those who believed it unwise to depart radically from the design of the battleship. The conservative view adheres to the belief that the new ship should be a duplicate of the Pennsylvania. It is insisted that there should be no reduction in the protection of the ship, in view of the improvements in gunnery, the increase in the radius of action of submarines and the introduction of aerial attack. The last phase may render it necessary to add to the weight of armor by an increased protection of the deck or some other device which shall shield the vessel from aeroplane ordnance. The General Board design contemplates a vessel of twenty-five knots, a characteristic which some of the authorities believe is not of great consequence. There is a division of view as to the character of the armament, some officers believing it should be increased over any of the battleships hitherto constructed.

Out of the discussion may come a brand new type of warship, something that shall be in advance of anything in contemplation or under construction abroad. It has been pointed out that the Dreadnought type has now been in existence for ten years, and that it is safe to make an advance represented by increased displacement, so as to carry heavier armor and guns of larger calibre, if not more of them, than is represented by the battery of the Pennsylvania, for example. There is bound to be an animated discussion of the problem by the naval authorities before Secretary Daniels has an opportunity to pass on the several designs. It is expected that two or three months may be taken in these preliminaries. In that time, of course, some of the work of preparing the New York Navy Yard for the construction of the battleship may be done by those on duty there.

TWENTY-ONE GAMES ON LIST

University of Vermont Baseball Team to Have Busy Season.

The schedule of the University of Vermont has been announced by George A. Tredick, the manager. Twenty-one games will be played. The Far East will be included, too, for Tredick has arranged a game with the Chinese University of Hawaii team, which will be played at Burlington on June 19.

Two games will be played in this city. St. John's College, of Brooklyn, will be met in Brooklyn on April 17, and Fordham will entertain the Green Mountain boys on April 18 at Fordham. After meeting Fordham the Vermont boys will return to New England, and the big game—that with Dartmouth—will be fought out at Burlington on June 21.

The schedule in full follows:

April 17, St. John's College, at Brooklyn; April 18, Fordham, at Fordham; April 19, Yale, at New Haven; April 26, Middlebury, at Burlington; April 30, Brown, at Providence.

May 1, Harvard, at Cambridge; May 2, Tufts, at Medford; May 3, Trinity, at Burlington; May 10, open; May 17, Syracuse, at Burlington; May 22, Dartmouth, at Hanover; May 24, St. Anselm's College, at Burlington; May 26, Notre Dame, at Burlington; May 30, Tufts, at Burlington.

June 6, Holy Cross, at Worcester; June 7, Amherst, at Amherst; June 13, Cornell, at Burlington; June 19, Chinese University of Hawaii, at Burlington; June 21, Dartmouth, at Burlington; June 23, Williams at Williamstown; June 24, alumni, at Burlington.

BERKELEY BASEBALL DATES.

The schedule of the Berkeley School baseball team was announced by its manager, Henry J. Mahr, yesterday. Twelve games make up the list, beginning with the Kohut team on April 9 and ending with the contest with Cutler School on the home diamond on May 26. Nine games will be played abroad.

The schedule follows:

April 9, Kohut, at home; April 16, Loyola, at Loyola; April 18, Columbia Grammar School, at Columbia; April 23, Irving School, at home.

May 2, Kohut School, at Kohut; May 7, Greenwich School, at Greenwich; May 9, Hamilton Institute, at home; May 12, Carlton School, at Carlton; May 14, Barnard School, at Barnard; May 21, Columbia Grammar School, at home; May 23, Collegiate School, at Collegiate; May 26, Cutler School, at home.

BECKER WINS GOLF PRIZE

Beats Hunter at Nineteenth Hole on Pinehurst Links.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 12.—C. L. Becker, Auburndale, Mass., won the first division trophy in to-day's final round of the annual mid-April golf tournament here. He defeated Robert Hunter, of Weeburn, in a clean-cut nineteen-hole victory.

Becker was 2 up at the turn, but Hunter gained the lead on the thirteenth. After halving the next five holes Hunter lost the eighteenth and the nineteenth.

In the semi-final round this morning Becker defeated Henry C. Fownes, of Oakmont, Penn., while Hunter won from E. W. Erwin, of Kent, Mich.

J. V. Hurd, of Pittsburgh, was the winner to-day in the second flight, and H. A. Waldron, of Agawam, R. I., took the third.

The tournament ended to-day concluded the Country Club schedule which opened with the annual autumn tournament.

THE WEATHER REPORT

Official Record and Forecast.—Washington, April 12—Pressure continues low over the middle and south Atlantic states, as a result of which rains were general to-day throughout the Atlantic states and the Ohio and middle Mississippi valleys. There were heavy rains in the Atlantic states, from Florida northward to Southern New England. Another disturbance is developing over the western plateau, but thus far it has been attended by very little precipitation.

A general rise in temperature to considerably above the normal is in progress over the western plains states and the Rocky Mountain and plateau regions, while unseasonably cool weather continues over the great central valleys and the Gulf states.

There will be rain Sunday in the Atlantic states and the upper Ohio Valley, followed by cloudy weather, but probably without appreciable precipitation Monday. In other parts of the country the weather will be fair except that rains are probable on the north Pacific coast and over the west plateau region.

The temperatures will rise Sunday over the plains states, Sunday and Monday in the Mississippi Valley and the upper lake region, and Monday in the east Gulf states, the Ohio Valley and Tennessee. No decided temperature changes are indicated for the Eastern states Sunday and Monday.

The winds along the New England coast will be moderate to brisk, variable, mostly east; Middle Atlantic coast, moderate to brisk, variable, becoming north and northwest; South Atlantic coast, moderate variable, becoming northwest and west; East Gulf coast, moderate west and northwest; West Gulf coast, light variable; Lake Michigan, light variable.

Forecast for Special Localities.—For Eastern New York, cloudy in northern, probably rain and cooler in southern portion, to-day; to-morrow, cloudy; moderate to brisk shifting winds.

For Northern New England, unsettled to-day, to-morrow, fair, moderate variable winds.

For Southern New England, probably rain and cooler to-day; to-morrow, cloudy, moderate to brisk shifting winds.

For Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia, unsettled weather and probably rain to-day; to-morrow, cloudy, moderate to brisk shifting winds.

For Ohio and Western Pennsylvania, cloudy to-day, preceded by rain in southern portions; to-morrow, fair, with rising temperature, moderate north winds.

For Western New York, cloudy to-day; to-morrow, fair; light to moderate north winds.

For West Virginia, local rains to-day; to-morrow, probably fair.
