MR. NOLAND ENGAGED TO MISS M. B. MILLER

Engagement of Dr. Henry Griffin and Miss Lusita Leland Is Broken.

Miss Lucia E. Hull, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Huntington Hull, of 21 East 82d st. and Tuxedo, N. Y., was married to Harrie T. Lindeberg, an architect of 12 West 44th st., yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Heavenly Rest. The altar was decorated with cut flowers from the gardens of Mrs. Grenville Kane at Tuxedo. The Rev. Dr. Matthews, assistant rector of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of about twelve relatives and intimate friends, and there was no reception.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a travelling gown of taupe taffeta, with a large hat of black straw adorned with white plumes. Mrs. Richmond Pearson Hobson, wife of the Representative from Alabama, was her sister's matron of honor and only attendant. Mrs. Hobson was dressed in white crepe de chine, with a hat to correspond. Seth E. Thomas acted as best man.

Mr. Lindeberg and his bride left immediately after the ceremony on an automobile trip. On their return they will spend the remainder of the summer in Tuxedo and in the autumn will live at 21 East 82d st.

At the church, in addition to the bride's parents and her sister, were Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hull, jr., Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, Mr. and Mrs. Seth E. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Dows and Henry G. Barbey.

S. N., who is attached to the President's yacht, the Mayflower. The church was decorated with palms, bay trees, white hydrangeas and Ascension lilies. The Rev. Dr. Matthews, assistant rector of the church, performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception in the royal suite of the Ritz-Carlton.

The bride was given away by her father. She wore a short gown of white chiffon, with a deep peplum of taffeta heavily embroidered in crystal beads, and a French cap of old lace, from which hung a veil of white tulle. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Elizabeth Hughes, of Indianapolis, was maid of honor. She was dressed in pale green chiffon with taffeta pannier and a hat to correspond. She carried a shower bouquet of cornflowers and small yellow rosebuds.

Paymaster Hervey Ransdell, U. S. N., brother of the bridegroom, also attached to the Mayflower, was best man, and the ushers were Lieutenant John J. London, Lieutenant Forde A. Todd, Lieutenant Elmer Langworthy, all of the Mayflower, and Dr. Richard Warner, U. S. N., who is stationed at Newport.

The bridegroom, best man and ushers wore the dress uniform of the navy. At the conclusion of the ceremony the ushers drew their swords and crossed them over their heads, forming an arch under which the bride and bridegroom, maid of honor and best man walked from the chancel.

Dr. and Mrs. Ransdell will take an automobile trip through the Berkshires and White Mountains, and after August 15 will be at home at the Wyoming, Washington, D. C. Dr. Ransdell is a son of the late Colonel Daniel M. Ransdell, who was for many years sergeant-at-arms of the United States Senate.

JIMMY GOT "KIDS" THERE, ALL RIGHT

P'leeceman Had to Help Ethel Through the Traffic.

LONG TRAMP FROM BROOKLYN, ANYHOW

But They Reached the Ferry in Time to Join the Happy Fresh Air Party.

Picture Jimmy, aged thirteen, and large for his age, striding down Barclay st. through the mist of yesterday morning, a diminutive bag over one shoulder, a size 8x12 (so-called) suitcase in his hand.

Galump, galump, galump, went Jimmy, head up and eyes on the goal.

Patter, patter, pant, pant, pant, trotted Ethel at his right hand. Ethel is six and has legs the length of a dachshund's and about the thickness of a spider's.

On the left, Annie, the eight-year-old of the family, stepped twice to every stride for Jimmy, and at every third step hobbed into a passerby, because of a marked penchant for noting the contents of store windows as she ran.

"Oh, Jimmy, take my hand," gasped Ethel between pants.

"How can I? Ain't I gotta carry your bag?"

"Then go more slower; I haf to run all the time," pleaded the owner of the six-year-old legs.

"Aw, hurry up. I gotta git ye there, ain't I?" returned the practical Jimmy, without once letting his gaze wander from the freight houses that loomed up at the end of the vista of Barclay st.

Just then West Broadway, with its stream of traffic, obstructed the course. Jimmy, seeing an opening in the line of trucks, dodged in and strode on, trucks to the right of him, trucks to the left of him and Annie behind him. But Ethel, half a dozen paces Jimmy's size, not here, in the rear, saw the traffic close in behind Annie's flapping pinafore and leave her alone and cut off from all her friends, in a strange land.

"Jimmy, Jimmy," she shrilled, her voice full of tears and her hand waving a frantic but unavailing signal of distress.

"Wait, wait for me. I'll get lefted. I'll get lost!"

Jimmy, of course, didn't hear above the rumble of the trucks. But all of a sudden the despairing young lady felt herself grasped from behind, lifted off her incapable feet and borne through the line of rumbling juggernauts before she could collect herself sufficiently to look around and see who was playing the good angel to her.

When she found her feet on the far curb and did get a chance to look, she blushed and cooed, "O-o-o-h, a pleeceman!"

But Jimmy of the seven-league stride was waiting to cut off any delay while smiles of thanks were scattered abroad.

"C'mon," he shouted, "or ye'll miss the trains, and I'll be late to work. Run."

"You carry me," begged the lass, mindful of the swift and easy passage across the street.

"How kin I lug you and this bag and the suitcase," protested he of the stride. "Think I kin carry ye all the way from Brooklyn? Besides, we're almost there. You grab her, Annie."

So Annie did, and they fell in behind Jimmy and let him break the flood of commuters just in from Jersey. Down the street they hurried, found a lucky lull in the trucking on West st., and burst into the Lackawanna Railroad ferry house in a flurry of fear lest they should have been "lefted." But they hadn't been.

"There they are! See 'em?" shouted Annie, breaking a long silence and smiling as though the weight of the world had been lifted from her shoulders.

"That's them," agreed the non-committal James, as he made for an official looking group in the centre of a multitude of restless youngsters.

It was "them." That is to say, it was the Tribune Fresh Air party for Scranton and Shickshinny gathering for the start toward the vacation land, where they—and Ethel and Annie—slept last night, and where they will play and grow strong during the next fortnight.

Jimmy, errand boy in a downtown office, was escorting his sisters, the only two children from Brooklyn in this party, to the starting place. That's the whole story, but there was a tragic side of it for Ethel.

FOR LURTON'S MANTLE

Heads of Bench in Wisconsin and Alabama Recommended.

(From The Tribune Bureau.)

Washington, July 15.—Alabama and Wisconsin came forward with candidates for the Supreme Court vacancy to-day, when the names of R. W. Walker, of Birmingham, and Judge John B. Winslow, of Madison, were offered.

Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, saw the President and urged the appointment of Judge Walker, former Justice of the Supreme Court of Alabama, and at present Presiding Judge of the Court of Appeals of his State. Mr. Walker was also a member of the Alabama Constitutional Convention in 1901, and two years later was elected a member of the lower branch of the State Legislature.

Judge John B. Winslow, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, is also being urged for the bench. Judge Winslow, who was prominently mentioned for the place several months ago when there was a rumor of Judge Lurton's resigning, has been a member of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin for twenty-three years, having been appointed a Justice on May 4, 1891, and elevated to the Chief Justiceship December 30, 1907. Prior to his service in the Supreme Court of the State, Judge Winslow served as Judge of the First Judicial Circuit for seven years, to which office he was promoted from City Attorney of Racine, which office he held for three years.

GILMAN RESIGNS FROM SETTLEMENT

Speech Lauding I. W. W. Men Not Cause, He and Council Insist.

Dr. Robbins Gilman, head worker of the University Settlement at Eldridge and Rivington sts., has tendered his resignation to the council of the settlement, and it has been accepted. Dr. Gilman's resignation was proffered last Monday, and will take effect on September 1. As yet no successor has been selected.

Dr. Gilman has been in charge of the settlement for the last five years, and the news that he was soon to retire caused rumors to the effect that he had incurred the displeasure of the council through his utterances several weeks ago in regard to the activities of the Industrial Workers of the World.

"The settlement is in a splendid condition at the present time," he said last night. "However, recently I have sensed a feeling on the part of some members of the council that a change in administration might be desirable, and I felt that I ought to clear the way by tendering my resignation.

"My speech June 1 at the intercity conference of New York and Boston social workers, when I was quoted as praising the Industrial Workers of the World, had nothing to do with my quitting. As a matter of fact, I was misquoted in the newspapers. I certainly did not laud the principles of the I. W. W. What I said was simply in praise of the conduct of the unemployed to whom the settlement gave shelter last winter."

Thomas M. Debevoise, chairman of the executive committee of the council of the University Settlement, insisted that Dr. Gilman's allusions to the I. W. W. had in no way hastened his resignation.

"As a matter of fact," he remarked, "we have many reasons for regretting his leaving us."

Dr. Gilman was born at Yonkers in 1878 and was educated at Williams College, from which he was graduated in 1899. He received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from New York University in 1902. For several years he was connected with a banking and brokerage business in Wall Street, and spent his leisure in social service work.

Upon their arrival here they will begin work on their production of "The Hawk," an adaptation of the Parisian success, "L'Epervier."

Medlyn Jane Summers has been engaged as a dancer with the "Ziegfeld Follies" and will make her reappearance on the stage Monday. Three years ago she deserted the footlights to become a bride.

MOOSETTES GET ADVICE FROM T. R.

Constitutional Convention Delegates Subject of Discussion.

COLONEL HOPES FOR SUFFRAGE PROVISION

Commissioner Davis Says She Is Progressive Because She Takes Middle Ground.

Colonel Roosevelt lunched with twenty-three women members of the state committee of the Progressive party yesterday at the Colony Club, but he did not sit at the head of the table. That position was occupied by Miss Anne Rhodes, manager of the State Progressive Service. Mr. Roosevelt sat at her right hand, with Commissioner Katharine B. Davis at his right. Miss Lillian D. Wald and Mrs. Katherine Hooker, of the California National Committee, sat opposite him.

"Colonel Roosevelt was quite his old self again and full of fire and enthusiasm," said Miss Rhodes, after the luncheon.

"We talked politics part of the time and part of the time we just talked. No, Mr. Roosevelt did not tell us anything about the River of Doubt.

"We discussed for the most part the question of women delegates to the Constitutional Convention. Colonel Roosevelt said the delegates must be women of 'good heads as well as good hearts.' No, we didn't mention any names. Nominations for delegates will be made at the next meeting of the Constitutional Convention committee late in July. This is a non-partisan woman's committee. It will nominate women delegates whom it will ask all the political parties to indorse."

After the luncheon Miss Rhodes read telegrams of regret from Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Mrs. Walter Weyl, Mrs. J. B. Warner and others who were unable to be present. Then she introduced Colonel Roosevelt, who spoke in part as follows:

First Invitation Accepted.

"This is the first invitation of anything like an official character that I have accepted in New York. There are just one or two things I want to say to the women members of the Progressive party. We are fortunate in having with us a guest from California, where much that we now strive for here is already an accomplished fact. I have been, as you know, most anxious that the activities of men and women in politics shall not be separated into watertight compartments. There are certain fields where one will be more active than others. In most fields we see an opening for common activity.

"This year we have a very important contest on hand. I want each one of you to go back feeling that it is your especial duty to busy yourself with party affairs this year, in the sense of trying to get a thoroughly representative constitutional convention to form the new state constitution.

"It is very important for us to get a constitution that will give us the chance to secure far more easily than at present the opportunity for the ordinary, plain, hardworking man and woman in city and country alike to conduct their work and live their life on a higher plane both of comfort and of usefulness. I shall hope to see that constitutional convention provide for woman suffrage. At any rate, I feel the Progressive party should put up and should insist upon having among the candidates whom it favors a certain proportion of women."

Miss Davis Takes Middle Ground.

Miss Rhodes then introduced Commissioner Davis as one who was proving that a woman could make good on a difficult job.

"The reason why I am a Progressive," said Miss Davis, "is because I have always occupied what seems to be middle ground. I have never been radical enough for my radical friends nor conservative enough for my conservative friends. We must take the men and women out of the two great parties and make a party that will represent the middle ground.

"In the present situation in our department we need people who occupy middle ground to conduct our affairs. It would amuse and interest you to read my morning mail. I get letters from both sides. One says the only thing to consider is the interest of the prisoners. Other letters say, 'You ought to use Gatling guns with those men, instead of talking kindly.'

"If I do not come to your meetings and take an active part in speaking for you, it is because I feel that, as the first woman in the city administration, I have to make good for the sake of all your women. It is not only my personal success which is at stake, but if I fail it would be an argument against women taking part in the city government."

The women present were Miss Frances Kellor, Dr. Katharine B. Davis, Miss Lillian D. Wald, Mrs. A. Gordon Norrie, Miss Cornelia Bryce, Mrs. Robert Elder, Mrs. Rudolph Muller, Miss Mabel Yeomans, Mrs. William Vanamee, Mrs. William Grant Brown, Miss Bertha Rembaugh, Mrs. Alfred Enu, Miss Florence Guernsey, Mrs. Edward Dreier, Mrs. A. W. Grabau (Mary Antin), Mrs. Mark Sullivan, Miss Ruth Morgan, Miss Alice Carpenter, Mrs. Charles Israels, Miss Anne Rhodes, Mrs. Katherine Hooker, Mrs. James Russell Parsons and Dr. Cora Lattim, of Erie County. MRS. W. E. COREY AGAIN A BRIDE

Former Wife of Ex-President of Steel Trust Weds Glenn Duckworth, of New York.

Pittsburgh, July 15.—Mrs. Laura Cook Corey, former wife of William Ellis Corey, sometime president of the United States Steel Corporation, was married in New York last Friday and sailed on Saturday for Europe, according to announcement cards received by friends here to-day. The bridegroom was Glenn Duckworth, a wealthy music dealer in New York City.

Although the records of the New York Marriage License Bureau do not show that Glenn Duckworth and Mrs. Corey have recently visited that office, the report of their marriage and departure for Europe was partially confirmed at the salesrooms of the Estey Piano Company yesterday. It was said there that Mr. Duckworth is manager of that office, but that he is at present away on leave of absence.

When Miss Laura Cook was married to W. E. Corey in December, 1888, the latter was working in his uncle's coal works. He was advanced steadily until he attracted the attention of Andrew Carnegie, who put him in a responsible position in the United States Steel Corporation, of which he afterward became president. Miss Cook at the time of her marriage was said to be one of the most beautiful young women in Braddock Valley, Penn.

In 1906 Mr. Corey met Miss Mabel Gilman in a swimming tank in Pittsburgh, and their acquaintance grew until Mrs. Corey resorted to the divorce courts in Nevada. She obtained a divorce decree in July, 1906. Mr. Corey married Miss Gilman in the following year and went with her to France, where they now live.
