WOMAN'S VARIED INTERESTS

MANY ARE SATIN'S USES

Yardage and Ribbon of This Material Are Equally in Demand—Picot Edges Contribute to the Appearance of Narrow Ruffles.

BLACK satin, in yardage or ribbon, has more vogue than has been its portion within the memory of the most elderly of fashion scribes. What is the reason for it no one pretends to know. That it contributes greatly to the effect of many new models, no one denies.

Both piece satin and ribbon are employed in the development of an afternoon costume which has two of the salient features of current modes, the much ruffled skirt and the long, plain basque.

That basque, in black satin, is dartless and is seamed only on the shoulders, where it lies smoothly, and at the sides, toward which it puckers from blindly closed fronts. Black tulle sleeves, set plainly into short-shouldered arm-eyes, gain fulness as they lengthen toward the wrist, where they are twice shirred, making a wide puff band behind deep ruffles.

THROUGH REVERSING THE PEPLUM AN ODD ARRANGEMENT OF POCKETS ON EACH SIDE OF THE SKIRT IS OBTAINED IN THIS WHITE COTTON CREPE FROCK. THE EFFECT OF THIS LATE SUMMER MODEL IS OBTAINED THROUGH THE COLORED EMBROIDERY. THE BLOUSE IS YOKED AND FINISHED BY A SHEER COLLAR OF NET. FROM GIMBEL'S.

Basques Sponsors for Neck Ruffs.

Basques are responsible for the appearance of a new neck ruff that is eagerly welcomed by the woman who never liked the low cut bodice, even while adopting it—since one may as well be out of the world as out of fashion. The new ruff is from four to five inches high and stands almost straight up from the throat's base, framing the face as petals frame the calyx of a flower.

It goes far toward balancing the effect of hats whose brims steadily grow wider. Clearly, this ruff is perfectly suited to the long basque, for it carries out the severe lines of its front and back as no turned-over frill could possibly do.

On the satin basque above described the ruff is gathered under an upstanding neck band of black satin ribbon of the same width as that bordering six black maline ruffles trimming the skirt from hips to feet. Five of these ruffles stand perkily away from their foundation, while the lower one, somewhat drooping and incredibly scant, gives the costume a narrow appearance about the ankles. The same effect is repeated at the shoulders.

Hats Now of Exaggerated Width.

Of exaggerated width just now, although it will not be so when the winter shapes are to be seen everywhere, is the hat which accompanies this afternoon frock. It is of black velvet, flat of crown, but so broad of brim that the flatly laid white aigrette trimming it extends far beyond the shoulders of the wearer.

Picot-edged satin ribbon is very much worn. Entire skirts, practically, are made of it. That these are immensely appealing goes without saying. For about the skirt of many little frills is something essentially feminine.

Imagine seven picot-edged black satin ribbon ruffles trimming a satin skirt from hips to feet! Tube-narrow and tube-shaped is that foundation skirt and on it the ruffles are so placed that the picot of each successive ruffle comes two inches above the corded heading of the one immediately preceding it.

To this fascinating skirt belongs a white blouse—the filmiest of affairs in maline—almost concealed, save for its bishop sleeves, by the broadest of black satin shoulder drapings. Level with the armpits, these drapings run under a third wide strip of satin swathing the figure crosswise and forming its bodice. Below the horizontal strip, at the raised waist line, the shoulder drapings become a sash, twice swathe the waist and hips and at the left of back are joined in two ends which fall over the skirt.

Ermine Adorns Black Satin.

Ermine is very cleverly used to lighten and enrich certain black satin costumes. One distinctive looking frock has a hip swathing girdle ending at the top of a cord-headed, straight-cut, yard-deep flounce.

An ermine band furnishes the collar for the deeply pointed fronts of a blouse whose raglan shaped shoulders, outline, with a wide cording, simulate a bolero. Far below the bust the white fur collar is joined by a single ermine tail of such extreme length that it makes a slender pale line almost to the lower edge of the hip swathing sash.

Two widths of black satin ribbon—one of inch breadth, the other of three-inch breadth—form stripes on the straight cut overskirt of black tulle imposed upon the white silk underdress of a magpie afternoon costume. Some distance below the knees the overskirt is widely bordered with a black fox band, which serves to hold it well away from the figure and, by contrast, makes the white skirt seem exceptionally narrow.

Cording Flattens Hip Fulness.

About the hips the fulness is flattened by double strands of heavy black silk cording. These drop from cord cabochons set high above the waist line of a black satin bodice that is gathered—not bloused—under a moderately wide crush girdle in self material. The satin sleeves, narrow and set into short-shouldered arm-eyes, end at the wrist with deep frills of white lace matching a collar, sole trimming of the bodice.

Very modest is this collar. Slightly rolled at the back of the neck, whose nape it veils, it runs to short points under the ears, turns back slightly below the throat and tapers into flat lying bands defining and filling in the sharply pointed fronts of the bodice.

Late Season Blouses

Simple Tailored Effects Are Secured in Silk Broadcloth, New Autumn Material.

A SHOP that devotes its time exclusively to the making and displaying of waists is showing a number of late summer and early autumn blouses.

Sketched on this page are two excellent models. The attractive waist in white pussy willow taffeta, whose yoke and long sleeves are in one, has turnback cuffs and a prettily pointed hemstitched flat collar of white linen. The waist buttons in front. Price, $9.75.

The other, a tennis or golf waist, has the loose armholes, which give great ease of movement, and the three-quarter length sleeves are finished with a button. In the front and back two large pleats give excellent lines to the waist, which fastens with three large buttons. The French pique collar widens into revers, which are fastened by buttons. This waist may be had in linen for $5.75, or in fine quality of habutai for $7.50.

Pongee Revival in Pretty Waists.

Choosing is difficult from among the many attractive blouses found at this shop. Worthy of mention is the natural silk pongee, made with three-quarter length ragian sleeves finished with cuffs of white habutai silk. Especially smart is the standing collar of white habutai silk, which makes a pretty line at the neck when it runs down to a "V" in front to meet a line of four buttons. The price of this waist is $7.

Simple Crash Sport Blouse.

Another sport waist is of oyster colored French crash. It has satin sleeves, which may be had either short or long, while the neck is finished with a flat hematitched collar. This blouse is priced at $3.50.

A similar waist for cool days is made of silk broadcloth, with long sleeves finished with cuffs that fasten with two small buttons. The waist is completed by a slightly rolled collar and is fastened in front. It is priced at $3.75, but may be had in habutai silk for $5.50 and in fine white linen for $3.50.

Tucked Piqué Waistcoat Effective.

Very novel and effective is the fine white handkerchief linen waist with long set-in sleeves. A waistcoat is headed on both sides by small hemstitched tucks, and imported French piqué is at the throat line in front. This waist is quite unusual and sells for $5.50.

Any one going to the mountains or anywhere on the New England Coast will find that a heavy suit is necessary for walking on the beach and through the woods. An excellent one of cravenetted gabardine is designed for rough use, but has all the smartness one could wish for. The coat is perfectly plain, with two good sized pockets on each side. A narrow stitched belt of the material fits snugly at the waist. The long sleeves are finished by a straight cuff fastened by a button. The coat fits closely at the throat and has a well finished collar. The skirt, too, is plain and short to facilitate walking. Price, $20. A hat to match may be had for $2.50.

Waterproof Walking Boots.

Durable shoes, which are very important, are of drab tanned calf leather with heavy soles of waterproof leather. These boots will stand all sorts of rough usage. Price, $12.50.

CUT IN ONE PIECE ARE THE YOKE AND SLEEVES OF THIS EXCELLENT BLOUSE IN PUSSY WILLOW TAFFETA.

RECOMMENDING THIS BLOUSE FOR TENNIS OR GOLF WEAR ARE ITS LOOSE ARMHOLES, GIVING EASE OF MOVEMENT.

HAND-EMBROIDERED CENTREPIECES

Very Little Actual Hand-Work Is Needed to Effectively Combine Linen Squares Embroidered in Italian Ladder Stitch, with Cluny and Filet Medallions, the Whole Edged with Narrow Cluny.

WITH very little actual embroidering, an effective centrepiece is evolved by combining embroidered linen squares with a square medallion of filet lace and filet and Cluny lace triangles or corners, as they are frequently called.

Lace Medallions with Linen Squares.

The centrepiece when completed measures 24½ inches square. It is composed of four embroidered linen squares, one square medallion of filet lace, four filet triangular medallions, four Cluny lace triangular corners and an nich-wide Cluny edging which finishes the outside of the centrepiece.

Italian Ladder Stitch for Squares.

Eight-inch linen squares, with half-inch hems, may be bought already hemstitched for 15 cents to 25 cents apiece. The one shown is embroidered in the Italian ladder stitch, offset by some solid satin and a bit of eyelet embroidery. The scroll shaped motifs marked Figure No. 1 and the crescent-shaped motif marked Figure No. 2 are embroidered in either the Italian ladder stitch or buttonhole bar stitch, which consists of a buttonhole stitch made over two strands of thread spanned across as shown in the illustration. Barbour's linen machine thread No. 35 or Peri Lusta machine twist No. 30 is used for this stitch.

Material Cut Away.

After the motif has been outlined with the stem stitch the material within the motif is cut away.

Two strands of the six-ply D. M. C. are used for the stem stitch. A flat, solid, satin stitch is used for the wedge-shaped Figure No. 3 and the stem stitch is used for the scroll ends and the straight bar running toward the centre eyelet. For the round and long eyelets the same thread is used.

Centre and Side Medallions of Filet.

Of the lace are the eight-inch square centre medallion and the triangular-shaped medallions at each side. The square medallion may be had at prices ranging from 75 cents to $2. Those at the corner are of Cluny lace. It is very satisfactory to combine filet and Cluny laces, as the straightness of the mesh of the filet is accentuated by the irregular designe f the Cluny lace.

The filet triangle, the long side of which measures 11¼ inches, and the two short ones, eight inches each, may be bought for from 50 cents to $1.50, and the Cluny lace corners, measuring eight inches on the long side and 5½ inches on the two short sides, may be bought for 25 cents to 75 cents.

Inch Wide Cluny Edging.

Cluny edging, one inch wide, may be bought for 30 cents. About two and three-quarters yards will be needed.

A rforated pattern of the design for embroidering the linen square may be had for 30 cents, or a line drawing of the same to be transferred by means of carbon transfer paper may be had for 20 cents.

Garnishings for Salads

They Should be Edible As Well as Decorative in Appearance.

GARNISHES are also part of this department of cookery, and the following are appropriate with he sauces used. The more practical they are the better—for summer service. Everything that is used should be carefully washed, not only the lettuces but the fruits and vegetables as well, for there are so many sprayings used while they are growing to keep away insects and make them perfect in appearance for market that this is a sanitary precaution which may save unexplainable illness from poisoning.

Sweet Cream Sauce.

This sauce is used with cucumbers and onions sliced very thin. The salad is laid in lettuce leaves garnished with strips of red pepper. Take two gills of sweet, heavy cream, add salt, pepper and a tablespoon of sugar and, stirring it briskly, add three tablespoons of vinegar, and turn over the salad just as it goes to table. Be sure that all ingredients have been chilled and that the lettuce has been washed and dried so no water thins the dressing.

Tomato Sauce.

Used in many ways, but none nicer than over boiled fresh calf's tongue. Take one can or quart of tomatoes, three chopped onions, one chopped pepper, one clove, a bay leaf, a bunch of celery cut up, salt, pepper and a tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce. Simmer for an hour, then add a pinch of bicarbonate of soda and half a cup of sugar. Strain carefully and thicken with butter and flour to which a little cornstarch has been added. Thicken to the consistency of cold honey and strain again if it seems at all lumpy. Pour over the tongue and garnish with cress. For other uses it may be best served in a sauce boat.
