Behr Blights Hopes of Murray in All Comers

Match Goes Five Heart-Breaking Sets on Casino Courts.

WILLIAMS HAS HANDS FULL TO BEAT MAJOR

McCormick and Beekman in Interscholastic Lawn Tennis Tourney at Newport.

By FRED HAWTHORNE.

(By Telegraph to The Tribune.)

Newport, R. I., Aug. 27.—Karl H. Behr, the fourth member of the Davis Cup team, got his revenge to-day on Robert Lindley Murray, of California, in the fifth round of the annual national lawn tennis championship tournament, held on the turf courts of the Newport Casino. Behr bore Murray down to defeat in a heart breaking struggle that taxed the stamina of both men, and the score was 7—6, 6—2, 7—5, 3—6, 8—6.

A wave of wonderful enthusiasm swept the great crowd in the last two sets, when the two men fought with every atom of skill and energy at their command in the effort to turn the tide of battle. Behr was the steadier when steadiness counted more heavily, and this gave him victory by the narrow margin of two games in the match. The point score total read, Behr 158 points, Murray 156—figures that gave an indication of how desperately the players fenced with each other at the net.

When Murray and Behr returned to the courts after the completion of the third set, with Behr leading at two sets to one, both men began a session on the court that brought the crowd up standing more than once, so tense was the feeling.

When Murray, playing with reckless dash and speed, took the fourth set at 6—3 and the match was again all even, there were cries from all parts of the stand of "Murray! Murray!" and the tow-headed youth from the Coast was accorded a reception such as falls to the lot of few generals of the battlefield.

Behr Rises to Heights.

The last set was even more spectacular, with first one and then the other in the lead. Murray began to grow wild in his driving, however, and sent at least fifteen of these shots far beyond the base line. They were costly mistakes, for they spelled victory for the erratic Behr, who probably never before rose to such a great height of play as he attained in this match.

The last set and match went to the Easterner at 8—6, and his victory was well earned, for he was the better man to-day. But the question of superiority is still to be decided, for Murray swamped his rival at Tarrytown earlier in the season, and now the men are even in the two matches they have played.

There were seven other matches decided in the fifth round, leaving eight players in the round before the semi-finals. Gustave F. Touchard defeated Frederick Inman in a gruelling five-set match at 4—6, 1—6, 6—3, 6—2, 6—0, and in the next bracket Ella F. Fottrell came through at the expense of Nathaniel W. Niles, whom he defeated at 2—6, 9—7, 8—6, 6—2.

R. Norris Williams, 2d, of Philadelphia, was hard put to it to defeat Cedric A. Major, of New York, at 7—5, 7—5, 6—1, and Watson M. Washburn forced William J. Clothier to go five sets before admitting defeat at 3—6, 6—2, 7—5, 3—6, 8—6. Wallace F. Johnson defeated Theodore Roosevelt Pell fairly easily at 3—6, 6—1, 6—0, 6—4, and Maurice McLoughlin, the playing through champion, put out E. P. Pearson in straight sets at 6—1, 6—2, 6—3. Clarence J. Griffin, of California, gained his brackets through the default of George Peabody Gardner, Jr., of Boston.

In the national interscholastic championship E. E. McCormick, of Los Angeles, and Leonard Beekman, of New York, reached the final round.

Ideal Day for Lawn Tennis.

Never was a fairer day granted to Newport for its annual tournament than it enjoyed from sunrise to sunset to-day, and it seems courting fate to mention it now, but praise must be bestowed where it is due. The sun smiled broadly all through its passage through the heavens, and a lazy, gentle breeze lifted the flags on the clubhouse poles lightly. There was a slight tang of approaching autumn in the air to add to the charm of the whole setting, and the playing was of a high order in almost every match. What more could mortal ask?

The largest crowd of the week was banked about the "championship" court at 11 o'clock, when Behr and Murray came marching through the lane of humanity armed with racquets, towels and glasses of lemon water.

Murray adjusted a bandeau of white about his temples to prevent the sweat from blinding him. Behr did likewise, and then the Californian won the toss and took the service, with the sun in his eyes.

Twice his service ball shot into Behr's court with such speed that the New York man stood motionless, looking blankly at the blond youth on the base line. The first three games went to Murray, who outshone his rival with brilliant sorties at the net. Then Behr began to warm to his work and took the fourth, seventh and eighth games by passing the Westerner with beautiful placement shots inches from the line.

The last game went to Murray aided by that terrifying service that always seemed to elude the swing of Behr's racquet.

Three times did Behr tally a game before Murray could break through his sparkling defence and pull two games from the fire, six of these points being on tremendous service aces. The 6th game and the last two were Behr's however, who was playing doggedly, flashing to the net as soon as his swift backhand drives to the base line had forced Murray to stay back. The New York man had the second set at 6—2, and the match was again squared.

The third set found Murray developing streaks of wildness in his ground strokes, usually his strongest point of attack, and the ball sailed clear of the court many times when it should have been good for points. Despite the erratic playing Murray held his opponent even up to 5—all by the brilliancy of his sessions at the net. These excursions to the barrier came too seldom though, and Behr had the third set at 7—5.

Murray Goes to Net.

All through the match Murray had shown timidity in going into the net, and Behr had profited by this to entrench himself firmly at the barrier and do deadly execution with his sharp volleying. But at the beginning of the fourth session the Westerner started headlong for mid-court and for the time being made Behr look slow by comparison.

Stinging drives Murray took on the full volley, and Behr's lobs came smashing back to him with the thunder of artillery. The boy from the Coast was in one of his invincible periods and slaughtered everything his opponent sent over, taking the fourth set at 6—3.

The last set began and Murray scored a love game on his service. He took Behr's service after the points had gone to deuce, and the crowd, which was in sympathy with the Californian, rent the air with shouts of approval.

But Behr had smelled the blood of victory earlier in the match and was not so easily to be robbed of its fruits. By shooting sharp forehand drives past Murray as the Coast player charged for the net, Behr evened the game's score, breaking through his opponent's service in so doing. Thereafter the tide ebbed and flowed, the eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth games going to deuce several times. Behr led at seven games to six and it was his service as the last game began. Twice Murray slammed the ball into the net and once it went bounding back of the wire netting in the rear.

Murray Nets Last Ball.

Fred Mansfield, sitting in the umpire's chair, called "40—love," and Murray waited for the last time to receive Behr's service. Back he drove the ball. Behr caught it on the full volley and Murray's return landed in the net. The match was over and Murray, a wholehearted smile of appreciation for his opponent's skill on his face, hurdled the net and grasped Behr's hand in acknowledgment of defeat.

This is the order in which the players will meet to-morrow in the fight for the semi-final brackets: Touchard vs. Fottrell; Williams vs. Behr; Clothier vs. Johnson, and McLoughlin vs. Griffin. The Williams-Behr match has been set aside for the championship court at 11 o'clock in the morning and those who know the calibre of both men predict a brilliant struggle.

The summaries follow:

BLUEJACKET HIT HARD, BUT WINS

Fast Fielding of Tip Tops Counts in Victory Over the Buffaloes.

Big Jim Bluejacket, the Shawnee Indian, who had a narrow escape from being a member of the New York Giants, proved more than a match for the Buffaloes in the second game of the series at Washington Park yesterday afternoon. Although hit freely, Bluejacket kept his head about him in the tight places, and the Tip Tops won by a score of 7 to 5.

The redskin was pounded for ten hits. Included in these were triples by Hal Chase and Smith, as well as a double by McDonald. Five of the hits were made in the seventh and eighth innings.

Fast fielding stood in behind the Tip Tops. The Buffaloes hit the ball hard and flush on the nose, but with unusual misfortune. The majority of their drives went straight at some fielder or where it was a matter of comparative ease for a man to get in front of the ball. A feature of the game was the fact that the Tip Top outfield made only one put-out. George Anderson raked in Agler's fly in the fifth inning.

On the other hand, no fewer than twenty assists were made. Every man on the team except Guy Cooper aided in throwing men out. Holt, at shortstop, played ten chances well. Bluejacket had five assists.

Concerted hitting won the day for the home players. They bunched their drives in the fourth, fifth and seventh innings and scored runs in clusters. Cooper put his team on easy street in the fifth inning by lining out a triple with two on bases. He scored a moment later on a single by Shaw. Eugene Krapp, formerly of the Cleveland Naps and the Pacific Coast League, tried in vain to stop the hitting of the Tip Tops.

TRIPLE BY BURNS KILLS CUBS' HOPES

Giant Outfielder Makes Long Drive with Three on the Bags.

HIT PAVES WAY FOR BRUINS' SLAUGHTER

Tesreau Proves Strong in Box, Allowing His Opponents Only Six Hits.

(By Telegraph to The Tribune.)

Chicago, Aug. 27.—George Burns, considered by many as the greatest outfielder in the National League, clinched firmer to-day the hold of the Giants on first place. It was his timing triple, a far-flung drive to the deepest corner of right centre field, which started his team along the high-road to victory against the Chicago Cubs. That one crushing wallop tired the spirits of the champions, and they hurled themselves into the battle with renewed vigor, winning by a score of 9 to 2.

Burns made his stroke at the moment when all ball players love most to hit safely. The bases were filled, with one man out. In was in the third inning. Perhaps, for dramatic effect, Burns might have delayed until the ninth inning; but he is a ball player, not a dramatist. Fred Merkle started the frame with a vicious double to left field and moved down to third on a single to port by Jeff Tesreau. Fred Snodgrass would fain have scored them both, but raised a puny fly to short right instead. Larry Doyle was passed as dangerous.

Now, this is the second time in as many series that Hank O'Day has cast this same aspersion on the hitting ability of Burns, and George was plainly nettled. He guessed he'd about show this O'Day person that some averages don't lie. So when Smith sent one spinning up to the plate Burns leaned on it with all his power.

JOHN M'GRAW.

Leader of Giants, finds himself face to face with new neighbor.

Wild Pitch Scores Burns.

Like a meteor that ball rang off the hickory. Like mad Leach and Good turned and raced with fate. On and on the ball sped as the gray-clad runners dashed for the plate. At last the ball was returned, but Burns was hugging third and the others had long since scored. A moment later Smith cut loose with a wild pitch and Burns counted.

That blow brought about the retirement of Smith, and in the next inning Jimmy Lavender took up the task of holding the visitors in check. For two innings he succeeded nicely, but in the sixth the scoring lust broke out again and he was mauled for a tally. This was followed by two more in the eighth, and he was forced to step down while George Pierce, the lefthanded spitball artist, tried his luck. Pierce tried, but failed. His four-pronged spitter, which breaks according to the direction of the wind, was not particularly effective. He was clouted for two runs in the ninth frame.

But while Burns and his mates were hitting furiously, there was a large force working steadily and with crushing power on behalf of the Giants. That force was none other than Charles Jefferson Tesreau, the bear hunter from the Ozark Hills. He allowed the Bruins only half a dozen safeties, but half of those were for extra bases. Saier and Corriden whanged out triples, while Heinie Zimmerman, light heavyweight champion of the league, got a double.

Two of these drives figured in the scoring of runs. The misdeeds of Davey Robertson placed Tesreau in awkward positions. In the sixth inning, for instance, Good singled, but got to third when Davey allowed the ball to get by. Good failed to tally, however.

Burns did not confine his activities to hitting the ball. He performed a few defensive deeds in left field which entitled him to membership in the Porch Climbers' Club, with full privileges. It might be said in his defence that necessity knows no law. And Burns held that it was necessary to rake in everything that came his way.

Grant Wins Applause.

Eddie Grant at third base also roved about like a pirate, behaving in a manner that drew applause from the crowd, but drew imprecations from the home team's bench. He made a pretty play in the second inning, catching Johnson's fly and hurling to first in time to couble Schulte off the bag. It was well he did, for a triple by Corriden followed this play.

The Cubs were first to score. With two men down in the first inning Saier walked and made the circuit when Zimmerman doubled to right field. Zim took third when Robertson fumbled the hit and then tried to score when Robertson's throw evaded Meyers. He died at the plate, Meyers to Tesreau. After Burns had driven the Giants into the lead in the third frame the Bruins scored again. With one out Leach singled and scored on a triple by Saier after Good had lofted to Snodgrass.

Scoring was suspended until the sixth inning when the Giants began to tide Lavender. Robertson doubled to right field, took third when Corriden fumbled Good's throw and scored when Snodgrass drove out a long sacrifice fly to Leach. In the eighth inning the champions scored some more.

Jack Murray, who replaced Robertson in right field, doubled with one out and tallied when Corriden hurled a grounder by Meyers into the middle distance. Meyers took second on the atrocity and counted when Saier threw wild on Merkle's infield hit. Another brace of tallies was added in the ninth, with Pierce pitching.

SUPERBAS MAKE IT THREE IN A ROW

Harmon Falters in Tenth Inning and Pirates Bow in Defeat.

(By Telegraph to The Tribune.)

Pittsburgh, Aug. 27.—The Brooklyn Superbas won their third successive victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates at Forbes Field this afternoon. Ten innings of nip and tuck thrilling baseball were played before Bob Harmon finally faltered in his stride and allowed the Superbas to pull out ahead. The score was 1 to 0.

As a result of their victory the host of Robinson is tied for sixth place in the fra tic dash for the championship.

Ed Reulbach suddenly returned to his best form, and pitched as in the days of old. He let the home team down with a paltry half dozen hits, and scattered them along the lines so carefully that he was never in any danger. His control was well nigh perfect. He issued one base on balls and struck out two.

The Superbas played clever ball. The one lone error, made by Dick Egan, was a pardonable slip. He handled ten others faultlessly. Cutshaw also intercepted a few hard drives.

Just five hits were made off Harmon, and three were for extra bases. He tightened up splendidly when threatened, however, and no scoring was done. There must be an end to all good things, and Harmon's race was run in the tenth. McCarty singled, took second on a sacrifice by Reulbach and crossed the plate when Charley Stengel hit safely to centre field.
