Giants Get an Even Break as the Braves Bid Them Farewell

Marquard Shows New Life in Box and Shuts Out Champions.

RUBE ALSO MAKES LONE HIT FOR TEAM

James and Rudolph Work Three Innings Each, and Make Excellent Showing.

By BEYWOOD BROUN.

Mrs. Richard Marquard, wife of a New York pitcher, has been seriously considering the elimination from her vaudeville act of a ballad entitled "My Baseball Hero." Audiences have insisted on receiving the song as a comic feature, but now Richard is himself again, and the act may go on unchanged. Not only did Marquard shut out the Braves at 1 to 0 yesterday in the second game of a double-header at the Polo Grounds, but he absolutely ruined a no-hit game for a coalition of Boston pitchers, made up of Rudolph, Crutcher and Strand. A single by Rube in the fifth inning was the lone blow struck for New York. The Braves won the first game by a score of 4 to 1.

Although their line-up was studded with substitutes, the Boston players got back again to the task of acting like champions and played sharply in both games. For Boston partisans the pitching of James and of Rudolph was decidedly encouraging. James worked for three innings in the first game and did not allow a man to reach first. Rudolph took his exercise gallop in the second game. Against his pitching one man got to base, but that was as the result of an error.

Chief Meyers crushed a finger in the first inning of the first game, and Johnson replaced him behind the bat. The Indian's hand was so badly hurt that he may not be able to take part in the city series.

Fine weather brought out a fine crowd, and the first game was well worth the attention of the 18,000 spectators. Fromme, pitching in his new and improved fashion, was pitted against James, but the big Boston pitcher was only out for exercise, and gave way to Otto Hess, an ancient left-hander, after three scoreless, hitless, nobody-on-baseless innings. Fromme gave way to Schupp in the ninth, and the youngster was promptly hammered for two runs.

The Braves broke through the New York defences in the fourth inning. With one man down, Connolly walked and Whitted was safe on Grant's fumble. Devore struck out, but Smith's single to left scored Connolly and sent Whitted to second. When Johnson threw to Merkle to catch Smith napping Whitted went down to third, and Maranville's mighty smash to Merkle brought Whitted home.

Fast Double by Maranville.

An error by Dugey, the substitute of Johnny Evers, enabled New York to score a run in the eighth inning, and more would have been made but for a fine double play by Maranville, who took Bescher's hot bounder on the run, touched second, and shot the ball to first in a motion that was all of one piece.

When Schupp went to the box in the ninth, Smith, the young Southern recruit, was sent behind the plate as his catcher. After Tyler had truck out, like a self-respecting Jerseyman, Hess singled. Mann hit for Moran, but fouled out to Smith. Dugey doubled to right, sending Hess to third. Cather, the right-hand alternate of Connolly, did much better. He doubled to left, scoring both runners.

The Giants rallied in the ninth and filled the bases, but Leslie Mann went all the way back t. the fence in left centre and, leaning against it, captured a long fly from the bat of Merkle. The ball was at least a first out to a home run.

The winning run of the Giants in the second game was made without a hit. After Rudolph had held the Giants hitless for three innings Crutcher took his place. He passed four men in the fourth inning, forcing Larry Doyle home. Even in the face of this Stallings allowed the pitcher to remain, but when Marquard drove the cleanest kind of a single to centre field in the next inning the manager called a halt. Strand succeeded Crutcher, and did not allow a hit. The only inning in which Boston seemed dangerous was the seventh, when Mann and Red Smith both singled, but Fletcher ended the attack by making a great running catch of Maranville's popping fly.

Stars are Not Above Stallings

The fact that George Stallings plays no favorites was illustrated in the first game at the Polo Grounds yesterday. Joe Connolly, one of the stars of the Braves who has been hitting at a great pace recently, loafed on a fly hit to his territory and the ball fell safe.

Stallings gave the player a severe chiding in words of one syllable as soon as he reached the bench, and immediately took him out of the game.

SUPERBAS LEAD SECOND DIVISION

Beat Phillies Twice by One-Run Margin and Move Up.

Brooklyn's belated spurt, which almost missed coming during the playing season at all, forced Philadelphia out of fifth place in the league standing yesterday. The Quakers bowed in both ends of a double-header before the Superbas, and unless the forces of Charley Dooin are able to do better against the Giants this week than the Superbas do against the Boston Braves Wilbert Robinson's team will finish the schedule at the top of the second division—a proud position for the hitherto lowly Brooklynites.

The scores were 3 to 2 and 5 to 4.

Alexander the Great and Ed Pfeffer were the opposing pitchers in the first encounter and Pfeffer had the better of it all the way. In the second game Dooin sent Baumgardner, Mayer and Rixey to the firing line in a vain endeavor to stop the heavy artillery of the Superbas, who bunched their hits with effect that was especially so in the fourth and fifth innings.

Ed Reulbach twirled for the Superbas and things looked bad for him in the early frames. Philadelphia scored once in the second frame and three times in the third.

That, however, was the extent of their depredations, and they failed to get a man near the plate in the closing innings, when the Superbas were going to the front.

Yankees Win Close Game from the Boston Red Sox

Fisher Out-Pitches Shore and Lute Boone Has a Big Day with the Stick.

(By Telegraph to The Tribune.)

Boston, Oct. 3.—The Yankees said goodby to Boston for the season today and left the memory of a victory behind them. Ernie Shore, the sensational lefthander of the Red Sox, could not stop the men of Roger Peckinpaugh, and the Yankees won by a score of 3 to 2. Ray Fisher was the boxman of the visitors. The batting of Lute Boone was a feature. He made three hits, which was half the total secured by the Yankees.

The Yankees scored once in the first inning, and from then on until the ninth both teams went runless. In the closing inning New York scored two runs, which were just enough to stave off a rush by Boston.

In the first, Hartzell singled to Larry Gardner, and went to second on the infielder's bad throw. Janvrin threw out Cook, and the runner took third. Swanson, a recruit second baseman, fumbled Cree's roller, and Hartzell scored.

A fine throw by Duffy Lewis cut off a Yankee runner at the plate in the second inning. Rehg batted for Shore in the latter half of the seventh inning and Cooper finished the game. In the ninth, Mullen was safe on Janvrin's wide throw, and Peckinpaugh and Sweeney walked. Boone was out to Hoblitzell, but Mullen scored.

Fisher hit to Janvrin, and Peckinpaugh was out at the plate. Sweeney scored on a double steal, when Gardner hit him in the back with a throw. Gainer, who hit for Swanson, began Boston's rally by walking. Gardner tripled to the centrefield bleachers, scoring Gainer, and when Peckinpaugh threw out Thomas Gardner came home, but that was all.
