McCLURE GROUP TO BUY 'THE MAIL'

Syndicate Has $3,000,000 Capital—Deny Germans Will Control.

A $3,000,000 newspaper syndicate has completed a deal to purchase "The Evening Mail." Backed by S. S. McClure, this organization began life yesterday by an emphatic denial from him of a report that German interests would be in control. "The suggestion of pro-Germanism," he said, "comes, I think, from attempts last winter to organize a German newspaper. Dr. Rumely, an old, old friend of mine, who has comfortably helped me in many matters, is a German university man. Dr. Rumely's father came from Germany."

When asked if Dr. Rumely, who is the former head of the M. Rumely Company, of La Porte, Ind., capitalized at $6,000,000, manufacturers of farm machinery, was actually interested in the new venture, he said:

"It should be remembered that I am not Dr. Rumely. I am thoroughly acquainted with many foreign countries. Dr. Rumely, like my wife, is a German university man. But I have acquired absolute editorial control of 'The Mail.' I've met, and talked with President more than I. I am an American. I think you will find I am better Americans than Dr. Rumely."

Whether an editorial policy is pro-German can best be determined by watching events."

Frank Parker Stockbridge joins the staff as managing editor. He was for two years city editor of "The Globe," later political editor of "The Cincinnati Times-Star," and since 1912 managing editor of "Popular Mechanics Magazine."

Mr. McClure, founder of "McClure's Magazine," will be president of the new corporation and editor in chief.

Henry L. Stoddard, editor of "The Evening Mail," said last night: "The proposal for the purchase of the capital stock of the paper will be submitted in meeting next week, and no doubt will be accepted.

"The talk that a syndicate of Germans will take control is pure moonshine. A few months ago a substantial looking German called on us. He informed me that there were four papers in New York City on the market.

"'Th Evening Mail' is one of them,' he said. 'You may be three-quarters right, but for your purpose this paper is not for sale,' I told him, when he made known that he was negotiating for some Germans."

Mr. Stoddard said that negotiations were not a matter of recent date, but "of many, many months. Talk about a German syndicate is nonsense.

"For myself, I intend to retain a large interest in the profit and to be actively identified with it."

An Albany dispatch yesterday announced the formation of the S. S. McClure Newspaper Corporation, of Manhattan, with a capital of $3,000,000, of which $2,000,000 is preferred and entitled to 60 per cent cumulative dividends, and 10 per cent of the remaining surplus profits before any dividends are paid on the common stock. The incorporators are Frank P. Stockbridge, F. J. Lambin, T. E. Niles and J. C. Cook, all of 203 Broadway; E. L. Orvis, of 1046 Lexington Avenue, and William E. Stephens, of 2469 Grand Avenue, The Bronx. The directors are S. S. McClure, Frank P. Stockbridge and E. L. Orvis.

GOVERNOR CLOSES DOOR TO STILWELL

Vetoes Bill Designed to Permit Ex-Senator To Be Paroled from Sing Sing.

[From a Staff Correspondent of The Tribune.]

Albany, May 20. Governor Whitman consigned to the legislative graveyard to-day the bill of Assemblyman Carroll, of New York, which it is understood was introduced in the interest of ex-Senator Stephen J. Stilwell, now in Sing Sing prison for extortion. The bill provides that, except one charged with murder in the first degree, a prisoner never before convicted of a crime may be paroled after serving half of his minimum sentence. This is the second bill of its kind that has appeared in Albany since Stilwell's conviction.

James C. Cropsey, District Attorney of Kings County, appeared before the Governor to oppose the bill and filed his objections in a brief.

"I guess the bill will be found in the morgue," said Governor Whitman, when asked about it later.

The Governor vetoed the bill of Assemblyman Simpson, of New York, prohibiting a life insurance company from requiring persons borrowing money from it to patronize certain fire insurance brokers. The Governor said he did not believe the measure was enforceable and saw no reason why if its provisions applied to life insurance companies it should not also affect other corporations loaning money.

Governor Whitman signed the Machold bill providing for river regulation by storage reservoirs. River regulating districts are to be created into corporate bodies with the right of eminent domain, and each is to be under the control of a board of three members appointed by the Governor.

Another bill signed was that of Senator Simpson giving the board of water supply of New York City power to make rules for the protection of the potable water supplies of the city.

ON TRIAL FOR LIFE, LAUGHS ON STAND

Prisoner, Fencing with Prosecutor, Denies Part in Murder of Marino, His Rival.

Coolly denying that he had any part in the murder of Giuseppe Marino, Angelo Leggio, on trial in General Sessions for the instigation of that crime, fenced with Assistant District Attorney Wellman for an hour while on the stand yesterday. His swarthy face was set and impassive. Now and then, when his answer seemed to dispose of a trap the prosecutor had laid for him, his teeth would gleam in a smile.

In the back of the room, watching him closely, sat Conrad Flack, father of William Flack, convicted and sentenced to death for the same murder, and chief witness for the state. The older Flack strained forward to hear the testimony, his face set in anger against the man, who, he holds, drew his son through murder to the chair. When Mr. Wellman scored he would nod, almost imperceptibly, and tap his knuckles on the chair in front of him.

Leggio denied that he knew anything about the murder until the next day; that he promised Flack $200 for killing Marino, or that he took Louisa Macaluso, with whom Marino lived, to a barber, where he had her hair cut, then bought her a suit of boy's clothing so that she might escape the police. Hard pressed by Mr. Wellman, he admitted that he visited her rooms the night before the murder and that he left when he found the door padlocked. He said he saw nothing more of the girl until he met her in the courtroom.

MORE GOLD FROM ORIENT

Yokohama Drawn On for $1,000,000 Shipment.

The International Banking Corporation yesterday engaged in Yokohama for shipment to New York by to-day's steamer $1,000,000 in gold, making a total of $9,900,000 taken from the Orient since the beginning of the year.

No further gold engagements from the Bank of England's supply at Ottawa were announced yesterday, but it was believed that in addition to the $2,500,000 engagement made on Wednesday by Lazard Freres $5,000,000 more will come here consigned to the same bankers in the near future. This belief was strengthened when London cables conveyed the information that the Bank of England had sold another $2,500,000 in gold coin.

Responding to the steady pressure of offerings against the continued heavy exports, demand sterling declined yesterday to 4.78¼ and cables to 4.78¾. Francs established another new low record, checks selling at 5.42 to the dollar and cables 5.41½. Italian lira were also very weak, checks being quoted at 5.87½ and cables 5.88½.

One prominent international banking house was said to have been a buyer of $10,000,000 in sterling exchange, while a well known trust company was credited with being a heavy seller.

FEIN INDICTMENTS START UNION WAR

Internationals to Defend Accused—Uniteds Promise New Murder Evidence.

The United and International Cloak and Skirt Makers' Unions were busy yesterday hurling defiances at each other's heads. At an afternoon meeting the International clansmen passed resolutions of support to their officers and members recently indicted for crimes ranging from assault to murder as a result of "Dopey Benny" Fein's confession.

The United members gathered, 1,200 strong, at Webster Hall in the evening and retaliated by pledging their support to the District Attorney and agreeing to tell him of at least four murders and numerous assaults which Fein's confession did not include.

The Internationalists attempted to hold a rival meeting outside the hall, but were dispersed by the police. This is the International resolution which stimulated their United opponents in their decision to finish what "Dopey Benny" began and to declare that the recent arrests were more than justified:

"We are confident that the only offence of which the indicted men are guilty is one that merits the applause of all honorable men, namely, the uplift of the workers of their respective industries from a state of abject slavery to that of self-respecting union men. Therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the joint board of Cloak, Suit and Skirt Makers' Unions of New York City in meeting assembled pledge their unswerving loyalty to the men indicted, and promise to leave nothing undone to vindicate the names of those intrepid fighters for the cause of labor."

TO BURN SEA RACER IN HIS FIREPLACE

Yachting Enthusiast Buys Planks of Old Dauntless, of Cornet Fame.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]

New London, Conn., May 20.—Memories of creaking halyards and the dash of ocean spray against the copper-covered hull of the old Dauntless will pass before the eyes of John Doering as he sits before his fireplace in Oakwood, Ill., and watches flames spurt from the oaken planks of the once trim racer.

That heartbreaking contest for $10,000 between the Dauntless and the Cornet—the Cornet winning—will be recalled. John Doering heard of the breaking up of the old yacht and sent to Essex, Conn., for a cord of the stanch oaken planks, saturated with copper. The bluish flames that only such wood can give will flicker in his fireplace with the recollection of the earlier days when the ship knew only the blue of the deep.

Before its final degradation the yacht was converted into a houseboat, but it was never reconciled to such deadly idleness, and on February 5 of this year silently sank during the night. She was built in 1866, and was owned by many famous yachtsmen, among them James Gordon Bennett.

GOLFER MAKES A HOLE IN ONE AT GARDEN CITY

MacLaughlin Does It with His Little Mashie in Invitation Tourney.

WEBB BEATS TRAVIS IN MEDAL ROUND

Three Extra-Hole Matches in Contest to Get Into the First Sixteen.

Although far removed from being an open champion, P. S. Maclaughlin, of the Scarsdale Golf and Country Club, went Walter Hagen one better by making the second hole in a single stroke during the qualifying round of the invitation meeting at the Garden City Golf Club yesterday. "Mack" did it with his little mashie, and it marked the first time in the history of the club that a "one-spot" had been recorded during a tournament.

The fact that there were seventeen other holes on the course gave 135 other golfers a chance for a little consideration. Roy Webb, the Englewood Country Club player, who is displaying more steadiness than ever this spring, had the distinction of interfering with Walter J. Travis's annual prize crusade. Webb made the round in 77, a stroke better than his partner, Philip Carter, and Travis.

"That pair ought to bring in the medal score," remarked a bystander as Webb and Carter trudged off together shortly before noon. Everything went smoothly for Webb, who had no lapses on the greens and rarely found trouble, exceptions being at the long thirteenth, where an overapproach got him into a trap and a tee shot that went wide going to the home hole. From the pit to the left of the eighteenth green Webb recovered finely, laying a niblick shot only ten feet beyond the cup, and he rimmed for a 8.

His card of 77 read as follows:

Rob Webb, Englewood.

Out	4	5	4	3	4	5	3	4	5	—37
In	5	4	4	4	4	4	4	5	4	—40—77

Carter's wasted opportunities were short putts frittered away on several greens. There was one scarcely more than a foot at the second that he missed, and again at No. 3, after reaching the green's edge in two shots, needed four more strokes before his ball found the bottom of the cup.

What really pleased the metropolitan junior champion was his 3 at the 500-yard fourth. In getting home on his second Carter's brassie shot struck the road and bounded to the green, coming to rest about twenty-five feet from the pin. The putt that followed was the best he sank all day.

So keen was the competition on the part of the contestants to make the first sixteen that only those with 84 or better had a chance. There were nine 84 men to play off for six places, and three extra holes were necessary before the tangle could be straightened out. Among those who failed in this play-off were George Whigham, a younger brother of H. J. Whigham, former national amateur champion, and James R. Hyde.

Robert C. Watson, former president of the United States Golf Association, would never have had to play off had it not been for a 6 at the last hole, where his tee shot landed his ball in the trap beyond the green.

Watson's experience at this hole was as nothing compared with that which befell Grant Campbell, a Great Neck golfer. Campbell drove the home green with two putts, and yet the hole cost him an 8. At first, though, a person might be pardoned for rising to remark, "it can't be did." Here is the sad tale:

After laying his tee shot on the edge of the green somewhat short of the flag, Campbell thought of the old axiom, "Never up, never in." He certainly was up. It was sure some putt, for the ball never stopped until it had gone clear across into the pitt beyond. Five niblick shots in the sand then ensued, the fifth lunge landing the ball on the green about eight feet from the cup. He then holed out. That's one way to play a hole.

Although the programme called for four sixteens the committee promptly met the situation by adding cups for two more divisions, which means that eighteen-hole match rounds will claim attention to-day and to-morrow.

The only events on yesterday afternoon were best ball foursomes, and Travis and Gardiner W. White, making a happy combination, returned a 70. Their handicap of two strokes gave a 68 net, easily the best of the day.

This card was as follows:

W. J. Travis and G. W. White.

Out	4	5	4	4	3	4	5	4	4	—37
In	4	4	3	5	3	5	4	4	5	—33—70

As most of the entrants paired for this four-ball affair, it was practically dark when the last team holed out on the home green. As B. T. Allen and E. G. B. Riley stood on the first tee, the hum of an aeroplane was heard. Looking up, Riley saw the plane speeding over the course some thousand feet in the air, whereupon he facetiously cried "Fore!" to the aviator, remarking on the side that he didn't want to hit him. A moment later Riley's drive hit the bunker.

The draw for the first round in the chief sixteen has been rather unkind to the favorites, as may be seen by the following order:

Partridge vs. Pyne, Webb vs. Travis, Van Vleck vs. Herreshoff, Kerr vs. Carter, White vs. Maxwell, Gardner vs. Leake, Behr vs. Marston, Carroll vs. Watson.
