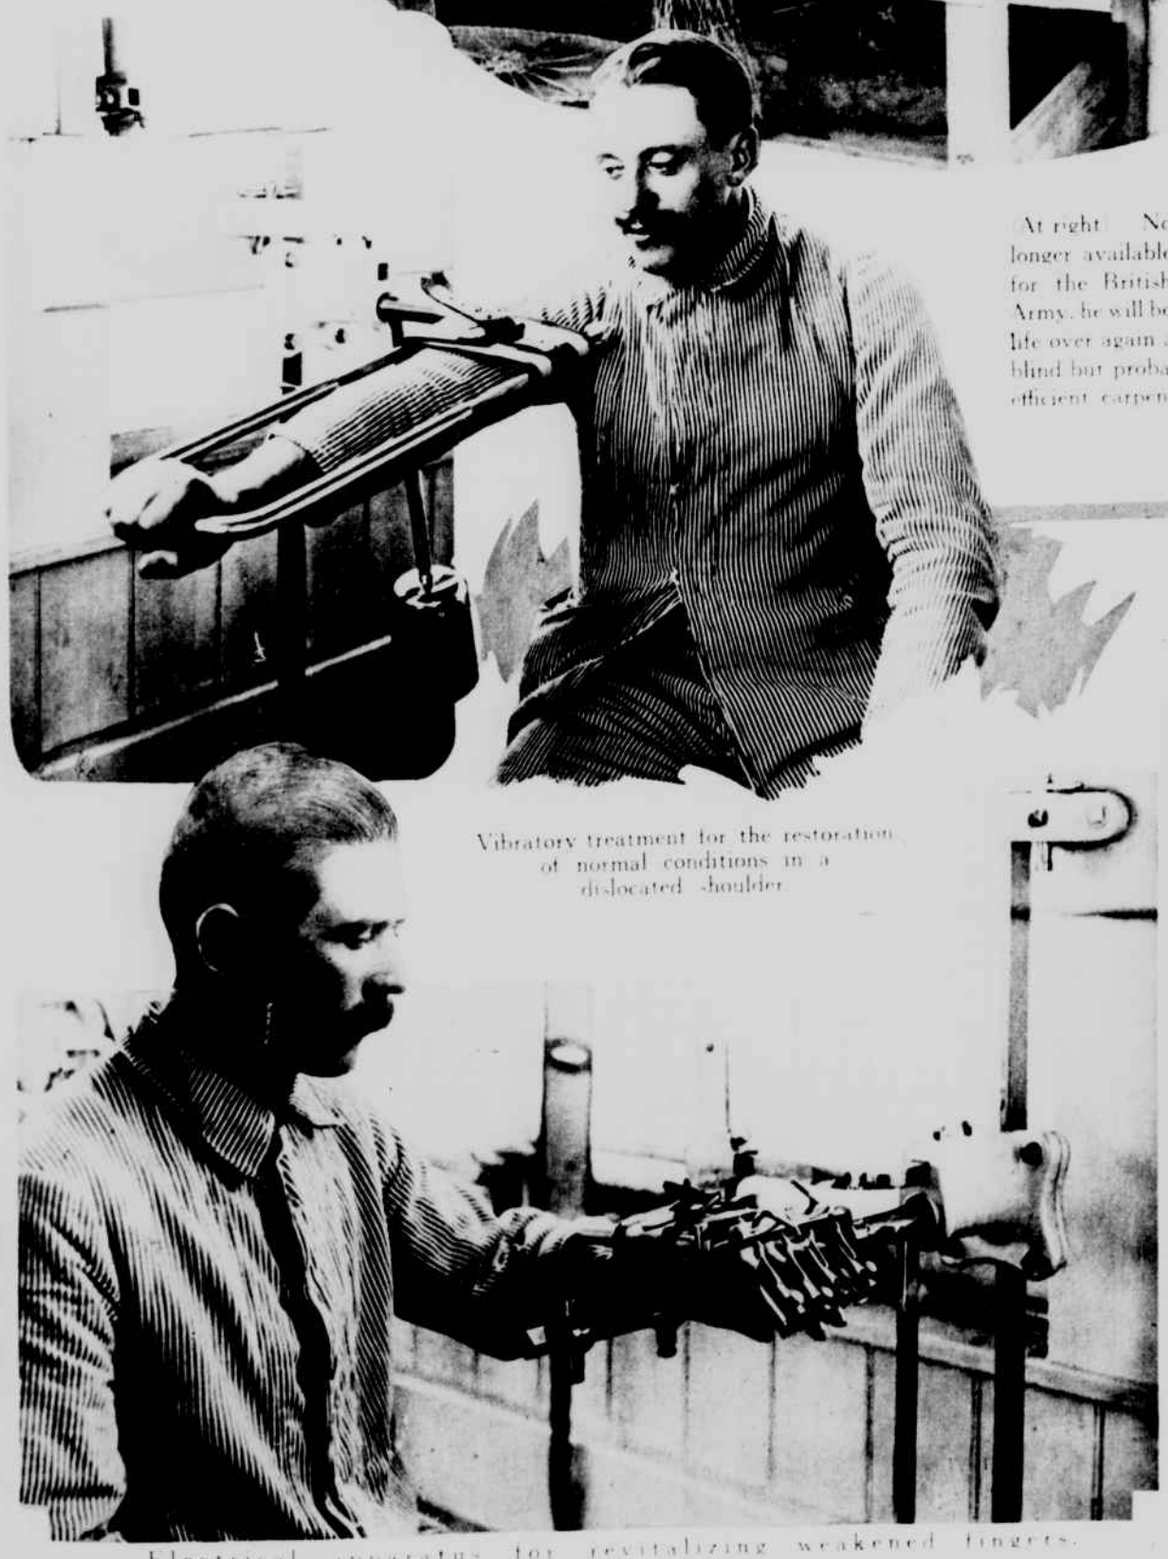
Nurse guiding and teaching confidence to those who must hereafter feel and listen their way through life. The House of Hope is the gift of the American banker, Otto H. Kahn.

Blinded British Soldiers Learning Trades in "The House of Hope," London

This man, who is sightless, as the result of service in the field, is learning to weave mats, and may later support himself thereby.

(At right) Fingertips must learn to take the place of eyes for these blinded ex-soldiers studying basket making.

(At right) No longer available for the British Army, he will begin life over again as a blind but probably efficient carpenter.



Vibratory treatment for the restoration of normal conditions in a dislocated shoulder.

Electrical apparatus for revitalizing weakened fingers.

His leg stiff from trench rheumatism, may become pliable again under this treatment.

How German Soldiers Disabled by Wounds or Disease Recover Use of Impotent Muscles