Loomis, Scudder and Wefers Win Double Honors in Big Games.

OLDTIME RECORD GOES BY BOARD

Rain Interrupts Contests of N. Y. A. C. at Travers Island.

By A. C. CAVAGNARO.

The New York Athletic Club jinx was late in reaching Travers Island yesterday afternoon, but when it eventually came it was a forceful one.

As many exchanged greetings over the breaking of the hoodoo at the fall games of the club, the skies opened the doors widely, emitting a heavy rain and hail storm that sent the 7,000 spectators rushing to shelter.

Fortunately, Jupiter Pluvius was considerate, failing to uphold the tradition of a usual wet New York day until all but one event on the programme had been completed. The storm broke as the contestants in the two-mile national steeplechase run were completing the last two laps, and the javelin event, which was to follow, had to be postponed.

It was a brilliant Winged Foot gathering that was on hand to help wind up a successful season on track and field. Every seat was taken, and hundreds were compelled to seek standing room around the track.

Struggle for Honors.

Several athletes fought mightily for the individual honors, but the place fell to Fred S. Murray, the former star of Leland Stanford University, who took the measure of Bob Simpson, of the University of Missouri, world's record hurdle holder at 120 yards in record time. The race was over the same distance, with the obstacles being three feet high, and, after a keen fight up to the last hurdle, Murray sprinted away to win by inches. The timers caught Murray in 14 2-5 seconds, which wiped away the former mark held by George M. Taylor, made back in 1885. However, since that time the event has not been held, but the figures would have proven easy to smash by many another hurdler.

Fred W. Kelly, of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, after crashing into the third hurdle, retired, as the accident had killed his chances to win. Two false starts marred matters, until the starter finally succeeded in getting them away. Murray leaped to the front, with Simpson second and Kelly third, but the accident to the latter soon made it a two-man race. Murray and Simpson took the hurdles thereafter together, with the former holding a fraction of a lead. Simpson pulled up a trifle near the end, but, after clearing the last hurdle, Murray, the speedier sprinter, succeeded in winning by inches.

The spectators witnessed some sensational performances on the part of Jo Loomis, the kangaroo of the Chicago Athletic Association; Larry E. Scudder, the University of Pennsylvania star, and Bernie J. Wefers, jr., son of the New York Athletic Club runner, who were double winners.

Scudder Consistent Runner.

Scudder displayed the best consistent running hereabouts in many a day when he won two 600-yard runs. Incidentally he took the measure of Earl Eby, of the Chicago Athletic Association, considered the best half-miler in the Central West, in both contests. His most spectacular victory came in the handicap run when, along with Eby, he started from scratch. He appeared to gain slightly in the early stages, but once under way his eight-foot stride soon cut down the lead held by his opponents.

Taking the first far turn out of the backstretch, Scudder was lost in a bunch near the end of the field. However, with his mighty stride he soon became prominent, Eby, in the meantime, following suit. Coming into the stretch, Scudder went into the lead and, holding off the challenge by Eby, won by three yards in 1:12 4-5.

In the special event at 600 yards Eby was the only rival to face Scudder. For three-quarters of the journey the Pennsylvania student remained content to lag behind and follow the pace of his Western rival. One-half a lap from the finish Scudder spurted, and passing Eby, held off the gritty Eby to win by two yards. His time of 1:13 1-5 stamped him as one of the coming middle distance world's champions.

Loomis showed the form of the national championships back in 1914, when he won three titles in one afternoon, by winning both the 100-yard special dash and the running high jump handicap. In the latter event, the lanky Chicagoan accomplished a feat never equalled in the history of athletics when he won an event with only once clearing the bar. Loomis did not attempt to clear the cross bar until it had reached 6 feet 3 inches, and after failing on his first two efforts, scaled over the height to win the contest.

Loomis Regains Prestige.

In the century sprint Loomis regained his lost prestige when he defeated several intersectional champions. Among those were Henry N. Williams, of the Spokane Athletic Club; Roy F. Morse, Salem-Crescent Athletic Club; Bob Simpson and Fred S. Murray. Loomis gained the jump at the start, and it was this alert movement that gave him the title by inches. Considerable surprise was manifest when the judges placed Morse in second place over Williams, who appeared to run an almost dead heat with Loomis for the greater part of the way. It was finally announced that the men were so close that consultation was necessary before a decision could be reached.

Wefers gave indications that he had inherited the wonderful sprinting ability of his father by capturing both the 120-yard and 300-yard handicap runs in decisive fashion. He was rather liberally handicapped, and in practically both races led his fields from start to finish. In fact, in the heats, semi-finals and final tussles, Wefers never permitted a rival to show him his heels throughout the journey. His best effort came in the long race, when he was clocked from 12 yards in 31 1-5 seconds.

Eagerness to clear the six-foot water jump and thereby escape a ducking proved costly to Johnny Overton, intercollegiate 'cross-country champion, who was beaten by Mike A. Devaney, of the Millrose Athletic Association, in the two-mile national steeplechase championship run. During the early part of the contest the Yale collegian drew rounds of applause by the clever manner in which he broad-jumped over the water and landed on the turf, while his rivals, including Devaney, landed in the centre of it.

However, this extra energy used told when two laps from home, when Overton tired and was passed by Devaney, who ran unchallenged to the finish, to win easily by seventy-five yards. William J. Kennedy, of Chicago, running in rubber-soled sneakers, finished third. Eight men made up the field, but half of this number retired under the gruelling pace.

Kelly Outclasses Field.

Fred W. Kelly, the Los Angeles Athletic Club athlete, easily outclassed his five rivals in the Pentathlon contest for the national title. The Coast star gathered a total of three firsts, one second and a fourth place, for a total of nine points, in the five events that composed the test. Pat O'Connor had the satisfaction of beating Dan Shea, each having twelve and sixteen points, respectively.

Hector Auray, of the New Haven Athletic Association; R. S. Thorne, an unattached athlete, and Robert Nash, a home club athlete, completed the list of aspirants. Auray finished fourth with twenty-one points, with Thorne two points back, but Nash retired from the competition by not taking part in the 1,500-metre run after he had scored seventeen points for four events.

Kelly won the broad jump with 21 feet 2¼ inches, heaved the javelin 131 feet 3 inches and made the fast time of 22 3-5 seconds in the 200-metre run. He finished second to O'Connor in the discus, while fourth place was the best he could accomplish in the 1,500-metre run, which went to Auray.

Sherman Landers, the Chicago youth and national pole vault champion, gave an exhibition of his specialty. After safely clearing 12 feet he twice lacked the energy to carry him over 12 feet 7 inches, when he stopped.

ENGLISH SCHOOLBOY SEEKS TENNIS TITLE

John S. McDermott, the playing-through champion, will meet Willard Bottsford, the English schoolboy, this morning at 11 o'clock in the final round of the annual tournament for the championship of the Harlem Tennis Club, at 135th Street and Eighth Avenue. In the semi-final round yesterday Bottsford defeated Charles Buckner at 6—2, 6—4, and McDermott eliminated Clarence Isaacs by a score of 6—4, 6—2.

Thus the match for the club championship will find Bottsford and McDermott opposing one another, as they did a year ago, when McDermott won. The present champion is expected to retain his title to-day, although young Bottsford has been playing strongly on his way to the finals.

PICK PLAYERS IN LESLIE CUP GOLF MATCHES

Metropolitan Team Selected for the Brookline Meet Friday.

The metropolitan golf team for the Leslie Cup matches, to be played at Brookline next Friday and Saturday, was announced last night by Secretary E. M. Barnes.

The list included the following metropolitan stars: Oswald Kirkby, Englewood; John G. Anderson, Siwanoy; Max Marston, Baltusrol; A. F. Kammer, Fox Hills; Roy Webb, Englewood; Fred Herreshoff, Garden City; Frank W. Dyer, Montclair; Reginal Lewis, Wykagyl; Dwight Partridge, Westchester; John M. Ward, Garden City; Henry J. Topping, Greenwich.

In addition to this list, the three metropolitan golfers named for the veterans' team were Findlay Douglas, A. M. Reid and E. M. Barnes.

In Friday's matches, opening the annual engagement, the metropolitan team meets the veterans while Pennsylvania and Massachusetts are in battle. The winners will then meet on Saturday—foursomes in the forenoon and singles in the afternoon.

Judging from present indications, the metropolitan team should have no great trouble in winning this event, as Massachusetts is fairly well wrecked by the loss of Ouimet and other stars. About the only first class golfers—that is, of high calibre—left are Jesse Guilford and young Fred Wright. Pennsylvania will have a good team in the field, but one that will have a world of trouble finishing above the metropolitan delegation, headed by Oswald Kirkby, with such golfers as Anderson, Marston, White, Herreshoff, Lewis, Dyer, etc., to follow.

Invitations were also issued to Jerome D. Travers and Phil Carter, but they declined to enter, as neither was able to get away.

Most of the Met entries will play at Greenwich to-morrow in the invitation tournament to be held there, a tournament that should put the Met team upon proper edge. Kirkby, Anderson, Marston, White, Dyer, Ward and Topping all qualified in the recent amateur championship, and five of these won their first matches.

Pennsylvania will depend largely upon W. C. Fownes, Eb Byers, C. B. Buxton, Crookston, George Ormiston and Sidney Sharwood.

HORSE BREAKS RECORD ON PARKWAY TRACK

Bingerloch, a bay horse belonging to the stable of Daniel Buhre, and piloted by Josh Whitcomb, the well known dusky trainer, established a new season's record for the mile in winning the initial heat of the Class AA trot in 2 minutes 14 3-5 seconds at the regular matinee of the Parkway Driving Club, held yesterday afternoon on the Parkway race track.

The time was a quarter of a second faster than that made by Who Knows, J. Leopold's fleet pacer. The race was won by Fort Orange Lad, a bay gelding, owned by A. Warner, driven by Frank Small, after four heats were contested.

Tales of a Wayside Tee

By GRANTLAND RICE.

When Chick Evans reaches the scene of the amateur championship next September he will find an old rival there to give him battle for the crown.

For after a season's rest from tournament play, Jerry Travers has made up his mind that one year's lay-ox is sufficient and that next fall he will be back in the lists.

And no one appreciates better than Chick what a rugged opponent he may have to meet.

Travers is the hardest type Evans finds to handle. For Jerry is not only a fine putter, but one of our best iron players and one of the surest men in the game at a chip shot off the green. There is very little difference in the results obtained by the two with an iron, a driving iron or a mashie. Chick is much surer with the wood, but it is hard to make up with the wood any margin one may lack around the cup.

Their Meetings.

Their last meeting at Wykagyl in a friendly four-ball match could hardly be considered a fair test, for Chick had never seen the course before. Yet it was strikingly like their first meeting at Chicago Golf in 1912. On any number of holes Evans would have a shade the best of it, or at least an even break.

But on the green this advantage was soon wiped away. For Travers was as much above Evans on the Wykagyl greens as he was on the greens of the Chicago course four years ago.

At Wykagyl, for example, although Jerry had been playing very little golf, his short game was handled with surpassing skill and even more surpassing confidence. We recall four holes in particular where Chick was closer on his second shot. Yet he lost two of these and only managed to halve the other two. It is impossible to estimate the depressing effect in match play of such turns as this. One of the hardest types in the game to beat is the golfer who is constantly running his long approach putts dead, missing none of the three and four footers and holing a fair share of those 10 and 15 feet away.

Rising to the Occasion.

Another factor that will make Travers a hard opponent for Evans next year, if they should meet, would be Jerry's ability to rise to the required occasion. Take his last match. He had not played Wykagyl better than 77 all summer—the few times he had played. Yet, being extremely anxious to make a fine stand against the open and amateur champion, Travers travelled the distance in 72 strokes, five below his average play for the year. The golf he played at Wykagyl would have raised havoc at Merion, for there were few there able to putt with any sure consistency.

Another Evans.

It must also be remembered that, having bagged both championships after a long wait, Evans will be a harder man to overthrow than he has been. He will never be a fine putter of the Travis-Travers type until he completely alters his present style.

But better confidence can make him at least an average putter, and average work only on the greens will always make him a formidable opponent as long as he carries the rest of his genius to within sight of the cup.

At Iron Play.

At iron play there is no great difference between the two in the way of results. But Chick obtains his returns with greater ease and greater beauty in execution. He has improved the firmness of his play also the last year.

There should be many meetings between these great golfers later on. Both are still under 30, with over 20 years of championship golf ahead. And one season's rest will have no effect upon Travers's game. Hilton at one time dropped out for over two years, and when they figured he had completed his day in golf the English star returned to win three more championships.

The absence of Travers and Ouimet took something away from the last championship, as good as it was, but by 1917 Travers certainly will be back with a fair chance that Ouimet also will be returned. It would be a wonderful thing for the game to have the Big Three of old reunited, with Bob Gardner making it a Big Four. A draw that had Gardner and Travers on one side with Ouimet and Evans on the other would round out a championship beyond anything we have ever had. No matter how these four were drawn, their meetings would also be classics, worth crossing half a continent to watch.

JUDGE ORMONDE WINS ON COLUMBUS TRACK

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 23.—With one heat, this week's Columbus Grand Circuit racing was finished this afternoon. By taking it Judge Ormonde became the winner of the 2:06 pace, that had five heats Friday.

In to-day's mile Barlight carried Judge Ormonde the first half in a minute flat. In the third quarter there was a switch of positions, Judge Ormonde went out in front and Fred Russell moved into second place.

Barlight was too tired to renew the contest in the last quarter and Fred Russell was three lengths back of the winner. Judge Ormonde finished the mile in 2:04.

BRAVES WIN, THEN TIE WITH PIRATES

Boston, Sept. 23.—Boston defeated Pittsburgh, 4 to 2, in the first game of a double-header here to-day, and battled thirteen innings to a 1 to 1 tie in the second game, which was called on account of darkness.

Neither Ragan nor Rudolph, the Boston pitchers, allowed a base on balls. Magee's hitting was a feature of the second game.

MARSHALL SLOOP DEFEATS MISTRAL AND THE MAISIE

Jessica Captures Three-Cornered Sail-Off on Sound in Fast Time.

By CAPTAIN JAMES C. SUMMERS.

With a broom at her topmast truck, indicating to the yachting world that, after sailing thirty-six races this season, she is the champion f the "forties," Wilson Marshall's sloop Jessica sailed into Larchmont Harbor yesterday afternoon soon after crossing the finish line off Glen Cove, the winner of the special three-cornered match race in which she, with George M. Pynchon's Mistral and H. B. Plant's Maisie, sailed off a tie. The Jessica defeated the Mistral by 2 minutes 43 seconds, the Maisie finishing six minutes astern of the Mistral.

The race was sailed in a ten-knot breeze from the southwest, which canted to the westward during the last half. Fast time was made over the 19¾-mile course, which had for its turning points the buoys off Parsonage Point and Woolsey's Reef. On board the winning yacht with Edmund Fish, who steered her, were James D. Sparkman, Wilson Marshall, jr., Butler Whiting and Harold Wesson. The Mistral's afterguard included Mrs. G. M. Pynchon, Guy Lowell and Clifford Mallory.

The New York Yacht Club's regatta committee—H. de B. Parsons, J. M. Macdonough and F. O. Spedden—managed the race from the bridge of Wilson Marshall's steam yacht Ansantawae, anchored off Mott's Point Buoy. Clinton B. Seelev, Louis Ostrander and J. Curtis were on board as guests of the owner.

The start was a pretty one. With booms eased to starboard, the trio of racing craft came from the line, H. B. Plant's Maisie leading at the lee, or eastern, end. The Jessica, at the west end, led the Mistral by a length. Spinnakers were sent out to port for the run to the first mark, where they gybed and set spinnakers to starboard for the run to the eastern mark, off Woolsey's Reef, which they luffed around in this order and time: Maisie, 1:30:00; Mistral, 1:30:30; Jessica, 1:32:00.

It was in the windward work that the Jessica showed her superiority. Although last at the second mark, with sheets trimmed just right, Eddie Fish worked her into first place in less than half an hour, and she was never headed after that in the thrash to windward of nine miles to the finish.

To celebrate the victory of the winner and to bring together the owners of all the "forties," Captains Wilson Marshall and George M. Pynchon gave a dinner last night at the Larchmont Yacht Club, to which the flag officers of the New York Yacht Club, the Larchmont Yacht Club and others were invited.

The summary of the race follows:

Yacht and owner.	Finish. H.M.S.	Elapsed time. H.M.S.
Jessica, Wilson Marshall	3:10:06	3:00:06
Mistral, George M. Pynchon	3:12:49	3:02:49
Maisie, H. B. Plant	3:18:49	3:08:49

The Jessica wins by 2 minutes 43 seconds.

SANFORD COACHES MEN FROM GOAL POST TOPS

New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 23.—Carlson, star halfback on the Bay Ridge High School team, of Brooklyn, last year, and one of those picked for the all-scholastic team of greater New York, looks like one of the finds of the early Rutgers practice. He has not been playing regularly on the 'varsity yet, but he was put in as a substitute, and it is likely that he will land a regular place.

Coach Sanford has figured out a unique way of watching the practice to the best advantage. Instead of coaching from the side lines, as formerly, he has rigged up a crow's nest on top of the goal posts and he directs the work from there.

The 'varsity showed up well in its last scrimmage of the week and beat the scrubs in a thirty-five-minute practice game. The team's offensive work is developing rapidly.

Owing to the cancellation of the Albright game, scheduled for to-day, the team will not start the season until the Villanova game here next week.

Weinert-Moha Bout at Garden Called Off

James Johnston Threatened with Injunctions and Decides to Wait.

MORAN WILL TACKLE FEROCIOUS FULTON

Patsy Cline, of Harlem, No Loafer, as List of Engagements Shows.

By W. O. McGEEHAN.

The Weinert-Moha bout, scheduled for Madison Square Garden to-morrow night, has been called off for the time being. The Garden is now in the hands of a receiver and there was some doubt as to who should hold the money. Attorneys for the various interests threatened James Johnston, the boy bandit, with injunctions, habeas corpus and corpus delicti if he did not apportion the gate receipts according to their various notions.

"Well, gentlemen," said the boy bandit finally, "if there is going to be so much trouble about the dough, re, mi we will have to proceed cautiously. The fight is off for the time being."

But, according to Johnston, the new date will be set as soon as the legal talent can get together and fix a new apportionment of profits. Money received for tickets will be refunded or tickets will be reserved for the new date.

Another Experiment.

The bout is not a championship affair in any sense. It is just another experiment in that eternal pugilistic problem, Can a good big man whip a good little man? Weinert is a good big man, and Moha is about as likely a little man as there is hanging about just now.

In his bout with Joe Cox little Moha demonstrated that while his appearance was highly humorous to the innocent bystander he was far from a joke to his opponent. Joe Cox, his latest antagonist, whose eyes have just healed, will testify most earnestly that Moha's wallops pass the bounds of innocent
