THE WEATHER REPORT

Official Records and Forecasts for Next Twenty-four Hours

Washington, Dec. 28.—The persistence of moderately low pressure over the Atlantic states resulted in the continuance of rains throughout this entire district, with a little snow in the northern portions of New York and New England. During Thursday, however, there was a general and considerable rise in pressure over practically the entire country, so that now an extensive high pressure system prevails, except along the coast and Gulf coasts. In addition to the rains in the Atlantic states, there were also more rains in the Ohio Valley, Tennessee and the east Gulf states, and snows and rains in the plateau and Pacific states.

Storm warnings are displayed on the south Carolina coast.

Winds for Friday and Saturday.—North Atlantic and middle Atlantic, moderate west and northwest; fair and colder weather; south Atlantic, moderate variable, mostly south, during Friday, with showers; upper lakes, moderate west winds Friday, with fair and weaker; lower lakes, moderate [illegible] winds Friday, with fair, colder weather.

CHOICE NET INVESTMENTS

Personally Investigated and Recommended

In the heart of the best part of the Park Avenue section, a very fine modern apartment house is offered for sale at a price which will show a net return of about 12 per cent.

The property occupies a corner and enjoys unusual light.

The building was entirely rented from the plans before the middle of March this year, although the building was not finished until October, as the apartments are most desirable.

The gross rental is $67,500. The operating expenses, including the taxes, interest on the mortgage, purchase of supplies, etc., are about $35,000, leaving a net return of $32,500.

This property can be bought for something in the neighborhood of $300,000, subject to the first mortgage.

The particulars of this and other choice investments yielding higher net returns than is possible from other equally safe securities will be furnished on request.
