Water Off Pratt Island Is Dragged; Body Is Not Found

Houses Vainly Searched for Evidence of Fate of the Missing Man; Stains on Rowboat Not From Blood

From dawn until dusk yesterday the Connecticut police officials dragged the waters of Long Island Sound off Pratt Island in a vain attempt to locate the body of Charles Coppola, the young taxi driver of South Norwalk. Coppola was last seen at about 1 p. m. on February 14.

The houses of the summer colony were vainly searched by the police yesterday.

Arthur William Pratt was arrested by the New York police after attempting to dispose of Coppola's automobile.

Detective Sergeant Hunt declared yesterday that a woman of South Norwalk told him she saw Pratt take the 9:24 a. m. car out of that town, bound in the direction of Pratt Island, on February 14, the day Coppola disappeared. Pratt insists he was in New York City all that day.

The solution of the mystery rests now with the Connecticut officials, District Attorney Swann announced last night. He communicated information gleaned by Assistant District Attorney Unger and the detectives to Homer S. Cummings, state's attorney at Stamford.

Red stains on the gunwhale of a rowboat found on the beach near the Pratt summer home were not blood, according to Dr. Otto Schultze, chief medical examiner of New York City.

According to John M. Minton, attorney for Pratt, Coppola is alive and in hiding, after having sold the car, which was not paid for in full.

"There was $600 to be paid on that automobile by the Coppola family," Mr. Minton said yesterday. "The bill of sale noting this is attached to the affidavit on which Pratt is being held.

"It must be remembered that Coppola was last seen in an automobile with three girls, and that his chum was found in New Jersey with another girl shortly afterward. After the young man sold the car I believe he became frightened and is hiding."

Weather Report

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The Oklahoma disturbance of Thursday night has moved to Northeastern Michigan with further increased intensity and attended by general snows in the lake regions, rains and snows in the upper Mississippi and the Missouri Valleys, and rains in the lower lake region, the Ohio Valley, the east Gulf and Atlantic states, except Northern New England. Very high temperatures for the season preceded the disturbance and it is followed by a moderate cold wave that to-night covers the central valleys except the upper Ohio.

There is a narrow north and south belt of moderately high pressure following the storm, and another general fall in pressure to the westward with a well defined disturbance over extreme Northwest Montana. This latter depression was attended by general, although mostly light, rain and snows west of the Rocky Mountains. There will be snow to-morrow in the upper lake and west lower lake region and in the upper Ohio Valley, rain turning to snow in the eastern lower lake region and rain in the Atlantic states, followed by generally fair weather Sunday, except on the leeward shores of the lakes where there will be light snows.

There will be a cold wave to-morrow in the upper lake and western lower lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee and the east Gulf states, and to-morrow night in the Middle Atlantic states, the Carolinas and Northern Georgia. Heavy frost is probable Sunday morning in Northern and Central Florida, and it will be considerably colder Sunday in Southern and Western New England.

Forecasts for Special Localities.—Western Pennsylvania—Snow and much colder to-day, with a cold wave; to-morrow generally fair.

Western New York—Rain to-day, turning to snow and colder, much colder at night with a cold wave; to-morrow generally fair, colder in southeastern portion.

Eastern New York—Rain to-day, much colder at night, with a moderate cold wave; to-morrow colder and generally fair.

Southern New England—Rain to-day, colder at night; to-morrow fair, much colder.

New Jersey and Delaware—Rain to-day, clearing and much colder at night, with a cold wave; to-morrow fair, much colder.

Eastern Pennsylvania—Rain to-day, followed by clearing and colder in south portion, much colder at night, with a cold wave, to-morrow fair and colder.

ERNEST M. ARNOLD

PUTNAM, Conn., Feb. 28.—Ernest M. Arnold, who, once a village school teacher, became a financier and then went through bankruptcy with country-wide claims of about $1,000,000 against him, died of heart failure today at the age of sixty-two years.

Arnold's days of prosperity covered a period of nine years, and began when he made some successful investments in stocks. He invested successfully for friends. He contracted for a villa with sunken gardens and pretentious landscape features, but when called upon to make payment of several notes he was unable to meet them.

JOSEPH J. JORDAN

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Joseph J. Jordan, a leading shipper of milk, is dead. He was president of the Hudson Valley Dairy Company.

Pershing Protests Curtailment of Power

War Department Denies Head of A. E. F. Refused to Obey Order; Admits Complaint

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—In making a formal denial to-day that General Pershing had refused to obey a general order relative to the revision of court-martial cases in France, as asserted in the House yesterday by Representative Johnson, of South Dakota, the War Department disclosed that the commander in chief had protested against the order involved as tending to take from him control of disciplinary measures in his forces. The protest is now being considered by Major General Crowder, judge advocate general, and the order may be revoked.
