Trade Review

LIQUIDATION of accumulated stocks of seasonable wearing apparel and textiles gained momentum last week through the medium of a coöperative sale of men's and boys' clothing direct to consumers by manufacturers, further shading of prices of women's apparel by manufacturers and a continuation of low priced offerings by retailers generally.

While price slashing continues manufacturers of a great number of commodities admit their inability to shape future merchandising policies. As a result the hide and leather markets, the wool, cotton and silk markets are dull and lifeless, with a sagging tendency to prices in all but the last named, which is showing some signs of recovery. Silk, it is recalled, was the first commodity to suffer from a slump, and it is the first to show signs of regaining a normal footing.

The credit situation showed no indications of changing for the better, and many merchants and manufacturers who heretofore have stoutly maintained that the financial condition of the country was such that prices could not be forced downward by a restriction of credit are beginning to admit their error. Several leading tradesmen continue to assert stoutly that industrial conditions in the country are sound, that there is a shortage of merchandise of all kinds, that labor is reaping large wages and spending its money freely, and that therefore prices cannot decline. A few conservative leaders in private conversation admit that the present situation is a puzzle and that they are shaping their policies from day to day.

Little progress was made last week in selling fall goods to retailers. Cancellations of orders for fall goods and for spring merchandise ready for delivery continued.

Cottons

Cotton goods showed little more activity than has been apparent for some time, and prices generally remained firm. Raw cotton fluctuated but little even in the face of the government's bad crop report. The volume of business now being transacted in cotton goods, it is believed, is insufficient to cause price fluctuations one way or the other. A few converters are operating fairly heavily in the gray or unfinished goods market, some of them engaging goods for delivery up to the end of the year, but the majority of converters are awaiting a resumption of movement in finished goods before commiting themselves to any great quantities of gray cloths. Retailers and jobbers are out of the market except for small lots of goods for filling purposes.

Silks

Improvement in both the raw and finished silk market was apparent toward the close of the week. Many of the silk trade leaders are inclined to think that the tide in the trade has turned for the better, and while they do not expect a scramble for goods such as resulted last spring, they anticipate a resumption of buying on a scale closely approaching normal. Raw silk, after declining to the low level of 1,300 yen for Sinshiu No. 1 on the Yokohama Silk Exchange, recovered 50 yen toward the close of the week. On the strength of the rise in primary circles local importers advanced prices from 10 to 15 cents a pound. A few manufacturers are buying raw silk in a limited way, and many have expressed the opinion that the market has reached bottom and will advance rather than decline. More inquiries for new goods are reaching the manufacturers from the retail trade, and some of the smaller jobbers are stiffening in their price ideas. Large buying, however, is still an anticipation rather than a realization. Ribbons are more active.

Woolens

Woolen and worsted manufacturers are drifting more to the idea that it is better to close up shop than to produce goods in anticipation of a demand later on. The users of woolens are showing no disposition to buy ever their normal fall requirements, and in many cases are canceling orders already placed. The return of spring goods and the cancellation of spring orders not yet delivered have been exceptionally heavy, particularly in woolens. Worsteds appear to have fared better. Not more than 30 to 50 per cent of the country's woolen and worsted looms are working now, it is estimated. Manufacturers are preparing to hold off the showing of spring (1921) samples as long as possible. Some definite action on the present situation may be taken at the meeting of the American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers here this week.

Furs

Activity in the fur trade was confined largely to retailers last week, who made some reductions in order to clear out their stocks. The strike in the shops of the manufacturing furriers is preventing that branch of the trade from buying fresh supplies of skins, either raw or dressed, and has brought the market to a standstill. The strike is having a salutary effect on the trade as a whole, according to dealers, who assert that the absence of a market is preventing small dealers from sacrificing their stocks on hand and thus breaking the market still further, and also is strengthening the opinion among retailers that merchandise will be none too plentiful later on. Some retailers are understood to be anxious concerning their ability to procure merchandise for their usual annual August fur sales.

Jewelry

Despite a great amount of talk and rumor concerning a possible break in diamond prices, no reduction is being made by leading dealers. Cutters abroad and in this country are understood to be idle because of a lack of rough stones on which to work. Retail jewelers are not overly brisk in their sales just now, and accordingly are not buying much from the jobbers and manufacturers. The condition is regarded as merely temporary by the trade leaders, who look for an early revival of business. Some classes of jewelry, notably watches, clocks, rolled plate chains, mesh bags and imitation pearl necklaces, are short in supply, and producers are months behind in deliveries on old orders.

Leather

Stagnation ruled in the hide, leather and shoe markets last week. Shoe retailers continue to remain out of the market for fall merchandise and to dispose of their present spring stocks at sacrifice prices. White footwear is moving rapidly with the advent of warm weather. Manufacturers are closing down their plants in the absence of fall orders and because of cancellations for current season's goods. Tanners, with the shoe manufacturers out of the leather market, are making few calls for hides and a general sagging in prices has resulted all along the line. All branches of the industry are awaiting future developments. Traveling bags and gloves remain fairly active and some forward business in holiday fancy leather goods is reported.

Apparel

Men's, women's and children's clothing shows a greater depreciation in value from the high peaks reached late in the winter than almost any other commodity. Retailers appear to be vying with one another in their efforts to offer the public the greatest price reductions. In men's apparel the consumers are being let in on good bargains through a coöperative sale staged by twenty-seven manufacturers in Madison Square Garden. A coöperative auction sale to retailers is being considered by other manufacturers, and it is rumored that either one or the other of these plans may be adopted by the women's garment trades to dispose of surplus apparel there. The hosiery and underwear markets are dull, with price reductions being made in silk lines, chiefly of the poorer grades.

Prosperity in the Silk Industry

Some Belgian artificial silk works are enjoying prosperity despite the fact that they were victims of the German invasion. Thus the Obourg Artificial Silk Company reports a profit of 2,142,757 francs for four months' operation in 1919. Work was resumed after ten months' work of restoration, only half the company's installation having been put in service. The other part has been restored and will be in operation soon if supplies of raw material are not lacking. The war damage to the company's property is estimated at 2,500,000 francs, 1914 value.

Campaign for Sweaters

Plans are being made by the National Association of Sweater and Knitted Textile Manufacturers for a national advertising campaign to place sweaters in the front rank of wearing apparel for the fall and winter. The Pennsylvania Knitting Mills, members of the association, suggested the following in a letter to the association relative to the advertising campaign:

"If the consumer is making up his mind to be economical when buying wearing apparel, his decision will be in favor of sweaters, and through the advertising of the national association the consuming public will be given a new conception of the utility and economy there are in wearing a sweater.

"Our thought in this matter is briefly as follows:

"A workingman on weekdays can find in a sweather the comfort, warmth and service that he can secure from an overcoat, with the difference that a sweater costs him about one-fifth of the price of an overcoat. He, of course, will need an overcoat for Sunday wear and for 'dress up' occasions, and by wearing a sweater for working day usage he will thus save his overcoat from becoming creased, soiled and worn out. Thus the sweater-for-overcoat idea can be put over, and yet at the same time with the suggestion of wearing an overcoat for 'dress up' and Sundays the knitted cloth manufacturers who are members of the association will not be harmed in the sale of their cloth."

Packers in China

Though cold storage and meat packing be assailed in the United States, the Chinese seem to be welcoming both processes, says "The Nation's Business." Work on a $500,000 cold storage, meat packing and egg albumen plant has been started at Tien-tsin, China, by the China Mongolian Export Company, Inc., an American concern. A modern slaughterhouse, with stockyards, will also be installed. The site in the Russian concession comprises six acres.

At first cold storage and albumen and ice manufacture will be undertaken, and later packing and canning of meats and poultry. Two fifty-ton ice machines will be installed. A representative and engineer of the American concern that furnished the total machinery of the plant, 200 tons in all, are on the ground supervising its erection.
