Reports of Shipping and News of Foreign Trade

British Ships' '20 Earnings Two Billions

Net Estimated in Excess of $1,500,000,000 by the Government; Offset to Adverse Trade Balance

Marked Decline This Year

1921 Net Figured Less Than $1,000,000,000, Due to Depression in Shipping

Gross earnings of the British merchant marine during the last year were about $2,000,000,000, and net earnings over $1,500,000,000, according to estimates prepared by the Board of Trade for the British government. Net receipts from shipping alone during 1920, therefore, were not far from enough to offset the United Kingdom's excess of imports over exports for the year, and, with the earnings through British "invisible trade," the unfavorable balance of the country's trade was transformed to a favorable one.

In the estimate prepared for the British government a comparison is made between the balance of British foreign trade in 1920 and that for 1912. The 1912 balance in favor of the United Kingdom is put at £165,000,000, or about $800,000,000 at the normal exchange rate.

Far Above 1913 Earnings

It is stated that "after allowing for ships undergoing repair the deadweight tonnage of British shipping engaged in overseas trade in 1918 is estimated at about 25,000,000 tons, and the average rate about five shillings per deadweight ton per month. British bunkers in the foreign trade were 21,-[illegible] tons, at an average of 16 shillings a ton. Further charterers' outgoings were bunkers purchased abroad and port dues."

On this basis, the figures arrived at for 1913 are: Charter money, £75,000,-000; bunkering in United Kingdom ports, £17,000,000; bunkering in overseas ports, £6,000,000; port dues, £12,-000,000, a total of £110,000,000.

For 1920 the figures are given as: Charters (24,000,000 deadweight tons at 21 shillings a ton a month), £288,000,-000; bunkering in United Kingdom ports (13,840,000 tons), £66,000,000; bunkering in overseas ports, £30,000,-000; port dues (at two shillings three-pence a ton deadweight a month), £32,-000,000, a gross total of £416,000,000.

Gross Income £400,000,000

The Board of Trade places the 1920 gross income, in round figures at £400,-000,000, adding that deductions must be made for bunkers and stores bought in foreign ports and for foreign port dues. For foreign bunkers, it is estimated, £6,000,000 should be allowed for 1913 and £30,000,000 for 1920; for stores about one shilling per deadweight ton per month for 1920, as against three shillings in 1920, and assuming the proportion of foreign stores to reach one-quarter of the whole, the amount would be £4,000,000 in 1913 and about £11,000,000 last year. Half the port dues would likewise be deducted as being foreign port dues. The net result—that is, the national income from shipping—would thus work out at £94,000,000 in 1913 and £242,000,000 in 1920.

The result of the depression in shipping during the last year is indicated by the fact that the British Board of Trade at the beginning of 1920 estimated the national income from shipping for the year at £500,000,000 and in August revised the estimate to £400,000,000, so that a further cut of £100,000,000 has since been made.

Against a balance of imports over exports in 1920 of £378,800,000, must be placed excess bullion exports aggregating £43,500,000. The net income from investments abroad is estimated at £120,000,000, and from banking and other sources £40,000,000. With a national income from shipping of £340,-000,000, therefore, "invisible exports" total £500,000,000, leaving a net trade balance in favor of the United Kingdom of approximately £165,000,000.

Under the present conditions of depression, the British report points out, any attempt to indicate prospects of shipping for the whole of 1921 must be in the nature of a guess. A rough estimate is given, however, of the gross earnings for this year. Charter money is put at £130,000,000; British bunkers, £44,000,000; foreign bunkers, £15,000,000; port dues, £30,000,000; a total of £219,000,000. Deductions of £84,000,000 for the estimated cost of bunkers and stores purchased abroad leave a net national shipping income for 1921 of £185,000,000.

Jones Plans Bill Ending Canal Tolls on U. S. Ships

Senator Will Present Measure and Expects Its Passage at Extra Session

From The Tribune's Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Senator Jones, of Washington, chairman of the Senate Committee on Commerce, said to-day that he would introduce at the extra session of Congress a bill for free tolls for American shipping through the Panama Canal. He said he would press the bill for action and believed it would pass.

Senator Jones made the statement after he had taken lunch with the President at the White House.

It is the view of Senator Jones that passage of a free tolls measure is one of the things essential to make the merchant marine act a success. He said he did not intend to propose any important amendments to the shipping act at this time.

"The law has not been tried out," he said. "Let us try it out fully and find out what changes are needed before we attempt to make any."

Senator Jones said he was opposed to putting the administration of shipping in the hands of a single official or in the hands of a department of marine headed by a Cabinet officer. He believes the Shipping Board should continue to administer the shipping act. He said he had not been advised that the President desired the law changed.

The ports of call, he said, are Marseilles, Barcelona, Lisbon, Manos, Para and Pernambuco.

Ship Calkers Strike at Boston

BOSTON, March 22.—Two hundred ship calkers struck to-day against a wage reduction of 8 cents an hour, announced by the New England Dry Dock and Ship Repair Association, which embraces nearly all the firms in the business in this city. Other trades affected by the reduction order remained at work.
