Ship Cost Cut Declared Vital To Save Marine

Wage Reduction Necessary to Keep Repair Industry Alive, Says Statement of Dry Dock Association

Much Work Goes Abroad

High Production Cost Here Responsible for Sharp Shrinkage in U.S. Activity

"The cut of approximately 10 per cent in wages made effective in the ship repair yards of New York and vicinity to-day is a step which it is hoped will aid in saving American shipping and its allied industries from the practical extinction with which they are threatened," says a statement issued yesterday by Henry C. Hunter, counsel for the New York and New Jersey Dry Dock Association. A survey made of current conditions in shipbuilding and ship-repairing plants throughout the country is summarized in Mr. Hunter's statement:

How the American repair yards have been handicapped by high production costs, due to the rates they have had to pay for labor and material, is evidenced, it is pointed out, by the increasing amount of repair work going from the country to Europe. Foreign shipowners, especially, it is stated, have been having only sufficient work done to their vessels here to patch them up so they can be sent to foreign yards. Because of this, it is declared, millions of dollars worth of work has been lost to American industry and unemployment has been greatly increased.

Cuts in Other Districts

American repair yards in every district outside of New York are stated to have already put wage reductions into effect, and in some cases these run from 20 to 35 per cent, or two to three times the amount of the cut here. Yards in this district have reduced charges for their work in greater proportion than the cut in wages.

The extent of the decrease in American shipbuilding and repairing is indicated by a survey made for the New York and New Jersey Dry Dock Association of conditions prevailing in these industries. Returns representing fully three-fourths of all the yards in the United States have been secured and these show that the number of workers employed to-day is little more than half the total of a year ago.

Applications for employment being received at shipyards and repair plants run to thousands daily. In the repair yards of the Delaware River district seekers for work vary from 100 to 500 per day per plant. The range in the New York district is from 5 to 150 daily, varying according to the size of the yard. The volume of surplus labor available is a large one.

"Almost without exception," says Mr. Hunter, "reports as to the outlook for the future of American shipbuilding and ship-repairing industries are discouraging." From all parts of the country, the statements show that comparatively little work is in hand and practically no new business in sight.

Idle Ways Increase Rapidly

"Eliminating shipyards with no construction work on hand," says the statement, "out of 383 ways in active operation to-day 154 are idle. Excluding one yard specializing in small craft, which has thirty-three keels still to be laid down, only fifty-one keels still remain to be laid, or less than a third of the ways available.

"Within a short time, it is apparent, idle ways will outnumber those on which construction is being carried on. And there has been a proportionate shrinkage in the use of available American ship repair facilities. The growth of the American merchant marine requires the maintenance of repairing plants, adequate to its needs, but without work to make profitable operation possible the continuance of those facilities on the present scale is impossible.

"Through the reductions sought in the cost of labor and material it is hoped that a solution may be found to the problem. American repair yards are now in a position to handle any work offered as well as it can be done in any country in the world. That lower prices will bring more work and a consequent increase in employment is the consummation sought for the preservation of what has become an American key industry and a vital factor in the development of the American merchant marine."

The bill as it now stands provides for free tolls through the Panama Canal for American ships in the coastwise trade. Senator Borah may broaden the scope of it so that it will apply to all American shipping, whether in the coastwise or other trade.
