Changes Small, Trade Dull on Stock Exchange

Curtailment of Operations Believed to Indicate New Phase of Market Cycle; Irregularity in Prices

Dealings in speculative securities at the New York Stock Exchange were much smaller in volume yesterday than in the various sessions last week. The curtailment of operations, following a period of profit taking on Saturday, led observers to conclude that a new temporary phase in the market cycle had been reached.

In estimating the meaning of fluctuations at the marketplace at this time it is essential to lay emphasis on the dominant position of professional traders and speculative pools who specialize in understanding the so-called technical position in the market. There was a widespread view that the rise had gone far enough for the time being and many of those with stocks on hand quoted at prices higher than those prevailing at the time they were purchased evidently decided to sell and establish gains. Instead of weakness there was irregularity, with a tendency toward heaviness in most groups of stocks. There was evidence of buying support when prices receded. In the face of the prevailing easiness the sugar shares, long neglected and depressed, were firm as further details of a proposed merger became known.

With the stock market colorless and the changes for the most part lacking significance, dealings in commodities and foreign exchange were likewise quiet. Sterling rates were a shade higher, but French and German exchanges were lower. The latter recessions reflect some uncertainty in financial quarters as to the effect the ministerial change in France will have on the Genoa conference and other efforts to straighten out the economic and political tangles of Europe.

Less favorable gossip from the cotton goods trade and a break in Bombay prices were factors in causing quotations at the cotton market to recede 27 to 37 points. Profit taking in the wheat market made final prices three-eighths of a cent to 1 cent a bushel lower.

Money and Credit

Call money, opening and renewing at 5 per cent, was advanced to 5½ per cent before the close yesterday. Some loans were arranged on acceptances early in the day at 4½ per cent, but later the supply of funds was not quite in line with the demand. The time money market continued quiet, no transactions of importance being reported. The rate held nominally at 4¾ per cent.
