Alien Seamen Oppose Marine Aid, Owners Say

International Union Has Only 16 Per Cent Americans, Declares Marvin: Citizens Approve Bill

Discount Fight by Labor

Shipping Measure Is Not Intended to Provide Way to Break Strikes

Opposition of Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Seamen's Union, to the administration shipping bill does not represent the attitude of Americans, but of aliens who would not be permitted to join the merchant marine naval reserve, Winthrop L. Marvin, vice-president of the American Steamship Owners' Association, said yesterday.

Mr. Marvin said that Mr. Furuseth recently admitted in a conversation that not more than 16 per cent of the members of his union were citizens. American organizations, such as the Neptune Association, the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, and others whose membership consist largely of citizens, are supporting the present shipping bill, it is said. The section to which Mr. Furuseth objects is that providing that American officers and unlicensed men may enlist in a naval reserve and obtain one month's pay annually.

The objection to the naval reserve on the ground that this would make the Shipping Board a strike-breaking organization is a subterfuge, and is not supported by the intentions of the board in drafting the bill or by the language of the measure itself, Mr. Marvin says. He adds that the sole purpose of the section is to aid American shipping and to create a body of citizens with sea training who will be available for the nation in an emergency. There is no possibility that the reserve force will be called upon to interfere in disputes between the seamen and the ship owners, he declares.

Steamship men are inclined to discount any opposition to the bill from the American Federation of Labor, stating that if there are any objectionable phrases they probably will be amended.

The committee on seagoing personnel of the American Steamship Owners' Association will meet to-day to discuss the use of the continuous discharge book, and also to consider changes in the examinations for licensed officers.

Obsolete Boats to Go, Shipbuilders Predict

Special Types Needed, Says Bulletin of Atlantic Association

Old and obsolete vessels soon must make way for newer ships of special types, according to C. S. King, secretary of the Atlantic Coast Shipbuilders' Association, in a bulletin to members issued yesterday.

"Current events in the shipping world are moving rapidly in the direction of elimination of obsolete tonnage as one of the most important steps toward building up an efficient merchant marine," Mr. King says. "While an actual shipbuilding revival on a large scale may be slightly delayed, there is every indication that many of the yards soon will be engaged upon the construction of vessels designed for special service.

"This renewal of shipbuilding activity, which is reflected both in actual orders placed for new construction and in requests for bids from shipping organizations, has become very pronounced during the last few weeks and is responsible for much of the optimism noticeable throughout the industry."

Admiral Line Will Spend $1,000,000 on 11 Ships

The Admiral Line is to spend approximately $1,000,000 in improvements on eleven vessels, according to reports from Seattle. Seven steamships averaging 4,000 deadweight tons each and four barges of 3,000 tons, it is said, will be completely overhauled and equipped with Diesel engines for freight service. The cost of removing the reciprocal engines is estimated at $100,000 each for the larger vessels. Refitting of the barges is placed at $75,000 each.
