Mr. Hitchcock and Miss Lanier Divide Horse Show Honors

Each Captures Ten Ribbons Last Day of Piping Rock Exhibition; Miss MacKay Wins Challenge Cup

A drizzling rain kept down the attendance yesterday at the closing of the Piping Rock Horse Show, which has been held for the last three days on the beautiful show grounds in Locust Valley. There were many on hand, however, to witness the judging and they sat in their motors, which were parked beside the ring.

Miss Becky Lanier divided honors for winning ribbons with Mr. Thomas Hitchcock, each capturing ten in all. Mr. Hitchcock had seven blues, one second and two thirds. Miss Lanier had four firsts, one second, three thirds and two fourth prizes. Miss Constance Regan and Miss Janet MacKay each won seven ribbons.

Cherokee Princess Wins

The Piping Rock Challenge Cup for the best saddle horse fifteen hands or over brought out a number of post entrants. Miss Janet MacKay scored the real win of the show when her chestnut mare Cherokee Princess was given the award. The mare well earned the title, as she has won first in almost every class in which she has been shown. Mr. Charles F. Hubbs's Sally was second. Both winners were given a fine ovation.

The Meadow Brook Challenge cup was won by Mr. Thomas Hitchcock with his Cavalier. The fifteen-year-old winner of many a ring contest took the jumps easily. Miss Becky Lanier, who has made such a wonderful showing with Silver Crest, was given the reserve, although she defeated Cavalier yesterday in the Corinthian Stake for the $1,000 prize.

To-day's winners follow:

Ponies in harness, not exceeding 14 hands; to be driven by boys or girls not over twelve years of age and children of members—Won by Alonso Potter's Tobin.

Miss Olive M. Jones Women's Choice for School Board Post

Pioneer in Probation Work Announced as Candidate for Vacancy Caused by Death of Mrs. Forsythe

Two hours after the scheduled time, Mrs. John Marshall Gallagher, chairman of the committee on woman representation on the local school board, called to order yesterday the 500 women attending the committee's luncheon in the Hotel Astor.

The committee, organized under the auspices of Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Elizabeth Edwards, Mrs. Nina Broderick Price and a score of others, was formed to see that a woman was appointed to the vacancy in the school board left by the death of Mrs. Grace Strachah Forsythe. It has chosen Miss Olive M. Jones as the most worthy candidate.

The luncheon, given in her honor, consisted chiefly of speeches extolling her achievements as head of the probation school work in New York and the reading of congratulatory telegrams from educational heads in twenty-three states now using her probation theories.

Miss Jones, a pioneer in probation school work, inaugurated the system in New York, and her theories on salvaging the so-called incorrigible child have been adopted by practically every state in the union. More than 10,000 children have passed through her school on Broome Street in the seventeen years she has worked there.

Representatives of the Republican Women's Club, Women's Municipal League, Protestant Big Sisters, Federation of Business and Professional Women, Parents' League of Brooklyn, New York Theater Club and the Bronx Women's Club yesterday added the names of their organizations to those pledged to fight for Miss Jones's appointment.

Speakers of the day were Judge T. C. T. Crain, District Attorney Banton, Magistrate Jean H. Norris, Dr. John Withers, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Miss Elizabeth Marbury, Mrs. Noble McConnell, Mrs. Elizabeth W. Edwards, Mrs. Laura Cauble, Mrs. Axel O. Ihlseng, Martin McCue, Mrs. Harry Shaw, Harry Webb Farrington, Mrs. J. M. Gallagher, Miss Annie Mathews, Mrs. Betsy Lane Shephard and Miss Louise E. Keppel.

Marie Lloyd, Idol Of London Music Halls, Dead at 52

For Generation Was Popular Performer; Is Remembered Here for Her Work as a Coster Girl

From The Tribune's European Bureau
Copyright, 1922, New York Tribune Inc.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Marie Lloyd, for a generation a popular British music hall performer, and remembered in New York for her work as a coster girl, died to-day at her home after a brief illness. She appeared at a London theater last Tuesday, and was enabled to finish her sketch only by taking stimulants between the acts.

Miss Lloyd had appeared many times in the United States.

Marie Lloyd was born in London in 1870, the oldest of three sisters, who all attained success on the stage, and in childhood showed marked musical ability. At the age of fourteen she began both playing and singing in music halls, and in a few years was at the head of her profession. She was married at the age of sixteen to Percy Courtney, a London business man, but a few years later was divorced from him and married Alexander Hurley, with whom she had long been on terms of close friendship. Hurley was a vaudeville actor, who will be remembered in this country for his coster songs. She lived with him only a few months, and then became associated with Bernard Dillon, a former jockey, who became her business manager.

In 1913 she made contracts for a ten months' stage tour in the United States, but was for a time denied admission to this country because she and her manager were registered on the steamer passenger list as Mr. and Mrs. Dillon when they were not married. Finally, they were permitted to enter the country for the fulfillment of her contract, under agreement that immediately thereafter they would depart.

Only a short time after her arrival here word came of the death of her husband, Hurley, which left her free to marry Dillon, which she did.

During her American tour she visited Canada, where she had some unpleasant experiences. At Winnipeg an attempt was made to disfigure her by putting an acid in her face wash, and at Vancouver an editor published some offensive remarks about her, which provoked her to give him a whiplashing in his office. In January last year, by a bit of unintended irony, she was called to serve on a jury in a divorce case in London, the first woman thus called. She voted for the acquittal of the defendant, a man, saying afterward that she couldn't find it in her heart to vote for the conviction of any man, they were all "such nice creatures."

Wealthy Emory Remsen Dies on a Park Bench

Member of Old Long Island Family Lived Poorly and Was Considered Eccentric

Emory Remsen, a wealthy and somewhat eccentric member of an old Long Island family, was found dead yesterday seated on a bench in Kings Park, Jamaica, Queens. He had a room at 180 Shelton Avenue, Jamaica. Earlier in the day he had consulted a physician who advised him to go to a hospital. Mr. Remsen went to the park instead and Joseph McGee, caretaker, discovered he was dead.

Mr. Remsen was born on the Old Remsen Farm, Merrick Road, Jamaica, sixty-eight years ago, and lived there during early manhood. The farm was owned by the Remsen family for more than 200 years.

Although Remsen received a fortune from his brother, I. Smith Remsen, wealthy Brooklyn carriage manufacturer and real estate dealer who died in 1914, he dressed poorly and worked at odd jobs, living by himself in a furnished room.

He is survived by three sons and two daughters, Miss Florence Remsen and Mrs. Wyckoff Boerum, of Aqueduct, L. I.

W. E. Smythe, New Plymouth Colony Founder, Dies Here

Also Organized Irrigation Movement in the West and "Little Landers" Scheme in California

William Ellsworth Smythe, author and publicist, died Friday at his home, 3 Fifth Avenue, from heart disease, it was learned yesterday. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Harold Champ, of Norfolk, Va., and two sons, Bensel Smythe, of Los Angeles, and William E. Smythe jr., of San Diego. Arrangements for the funeral are not yet complete.

Mr. Smythe was born in Worcester, Mass., December 24, 1861. He entered newspaper work, and when twenty-one years old was the night editor of "The Haverhill (Mass.) Gazette." He gradually drifted westward until he became an editorial writer on "The Omaha Bee," Omaha, Neb. He was in that city when the great drought hit the plains section, causing severe suffering in several states. He organized a relief fund for the settlers, whose crops had been destroyed. He later supplemented his work by establishing a movement to make such disasters in the future impossible through irrigation.

In 1891 Mr. Smythe organized the Irrigation Congress, which was held in Salt Lake City. It was responsible for much of the ditch-digging and many of the water laws that transformed several of the Western states from aridity into agriculture.

His establishment of the New Plymouth Colony in Idaho in 1895 and his later activities in the Water and Forest Association and the California Constructive League followed, resulting in radical water law reforms and the adoption of the Australian land settlement system. In 1919 he became associated with the late Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, in a plan for extension of forest reclamation over the entire United States. He founded the Little Landers movement in Southern California in 1908 to demonstrate that a man could make a good living for himself and his family on an acre of ground.

Mr. Smythe was the author of several books, among them "City Homes and Country Lanes," "Constructive Democracy," "Reclamation of Arid America" and others.
