Future of U. S. Shipbuilding Called Gloomy

Chief of American Bureau of Shipping Foresees the Dissolution of Shipyards Unless Marine Expands

Pessimism as to the future of shipbuilding in the United States is expressed by Captain C. A. McAllister, head of the American Bureau of Shipping, in a statement just issued in which he reviews the situation.

Curtailment of naval building under the terms of the Washington conference, Captain McAllister points out, deprives American shipyards of what used to be their principal business, leaving them only the coastwise and lake trades as sources of activity. Since two out of the twelve yards now existing could easily handle this business, and since foreign shipowners naturally give their repair business to yards in their own countries, Captain McAllister believes that unless conditions arise to permit the development of a large American merchant marine engaged in foreign trade the country faces the prospect of seeing most of the shipyards go out of business.

Only 32 Vessels Building

Captain McAllister points out that during 1922 only seventeen vessels of over 1,000 gross tons, aggregating 146,000 gross tons, were built in the United States, including both seagoing and lake tonnage. On January 1, 1923, there were building in American yards twenty-seven vessels for private account, amounting to 218,000 gross tons, and four for the Shipping Board, totaling 42,000 gross tons, or thirty-one ships in all, with a combined gross tonnage of 255,000. On January 1, 1923, on the other hand, thirty-two vessels are building whose combined tonnage is only 184,805 gross tons, using a liberal estimate for the tonnage of six of them. This marks a decrease of 70,255 gross tons in the volume of business at present as compared to that of a year ago.

"At the beginning of 1923 the outlook for shipbuilding in this country is very dark," said Captain McAllister. "There is a fair amount of building now in the yards, but almost without exception the new craft are for the coastwise and lake traffic. The country at large does not seem to realize that this industry, so vital to our commercial and defensive interests on the seas, is in a very precarious condition. Before the war the seven or eight principal shipyards were supported mainly by building war craft for the government. A number of these are in process of completion at several of the yards at this time. Not a new contract for war craft has been given out in over two years, and the limitation of armament conference held last year will prohibit the construction of new vessels of large size for the navy for the next ten years. In addition to that there has already passed the House of Representatives in the naval appropriation bill a resolution calling on the President to invite foreign nations to further disarmament conference, which would, if carried through, shut off the building of most of the smaller war craft.

Legislation Needed

"There seems to be no prospect now of any new ships being constructed for the foreign trade, unless Congress will enact some legislation which will make the operation of American ships in the foreign trade practicable.

"There are two shipyards in the United States which have sufficient capacity to build all the tonnage necessary for the coastwise trade for an indefinite period. What will become of the other ten leading shipyards, not to mention a large number of marine repair yards dependent upon shipping in the foreign trade, is a matter of serious concern to the workmen and owners of these plants.

"Without adequate shipbuilding facilities in this country it is easy to see what will become of our means for national defense on the seas."

Japanese Shipper Alarmed by Reported Subsidy Rejection

TOKIO, (By Mail) Dec. 8.— The prevailing condition of Japanese steamers on the trans-Pacific service "is a national humiliation when it is compared with the boats of the American and British lines," declared Mr. Yonetaro Ito, president of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, discussing the reported refusal of the Department of Finance to include in the estimates a vote for the assistance of shipbuilding asked by the Department of Communications. The question will be debated in the Diet.

Mr. Ito said his company had planned to build half a million tons of ships but this could not be realized without governmental support.

Viscount Maeda, minister of communications, declared that his department intended to continue its efforts to obtain the subsidy.

Radiophones Installed on Three Morgan Line Boats

Radiophone sets, to enable passengers to hear concerts and other features broadcast from the various stations on the Atlantic seaboard, have been installed on the steamships Monmouth, Comus and Creole, of the Morgan Line service between New York and New Orleans, according to an announcement made by L. J. Spence, director of traffic of the Southern Pacific lines.

"There is nothing more modern than the radiophone," said Mr. Spence, "and these installations are an earnest of the desire and intention of the officers of the line to keep the service strictly up to date in every respect."

2,000 Per Cent Stock Dividend

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 30.—A 2,000 per cent stock dividend has been declared by the Landis Machine Company, shoe machine manufacturers. The capital stock thereby was increased from $50,000 to $1,000,000. The dividend was from a surplus fund which had been accumulating for thirty years, it was explained.
