THE NEW YORK SUN.

THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 31, 1866.

Business Matters in the South

We have lately noticed a marked change in the southern press with regard to its indications of prosperity. Several of our exchanges from the South have recently suspended publication; a still larger number have undergone a diminution of size, and the supplements which were so common a short time ago have almost entirely disappeared. We allude to this subject because of its significancy. The press is the index of the business world, and the true condition of business in the South can be better determined by watching that index than by countless reports from military officers and Freedmen's Bureau agents. We are, therefore, sorry to see this evidence of declining prosperity on the part of the Southern press, but at the same time it causes us no surprise. The fact is, that the flush of business prosperity that spread over the South immediately after the termination of the war, was unnatural and unsubstantial. It is an easy matter now to look back and see where the mistake was made which produced that abnormal condition of business. When the war ended, nearly everybody here at the North seemed to be suddenly seized with a mania for starting some kind of business in the South. It was thought that the exclusion of the South from the markets, during the pendency of the war, would make so great a demand for goods that it would only be necessary for a man to start business in a Southern town to insure the rapid acquirement of a fortune. Accordingly, the Southern towns and cities were soon overrun by business men from the North. New stores were established, new shops were opened, and every appearance of animated business was observable. Newspapers naturally sprung up like mushrooms. The new comers of course advertised liberally, and little sheets quickly swelled into great blankets. But it was soon found that a great mistake had been made in the business calculation. The goods were there, and the people wanted them; but they had no money with which to buy. The war had left their purses empty, and they were obliged to forego the luxury of indulging, to any great extent, in the goods that had been brought from the North for their use. A business reaction thereupon set in, and the consequences of it we now see in the declining prosperity of the Southern press.

Cholera.

Two more cholera infected ships have suddenly made their appearance at Quarantine, one coming on Tuesday, as mentioned in yesterday's SUN, and the other arriving yesterday. These fresh arrivals of cholera have caused public attention to again turn toward the unpleasant subject of the dreaded pestilence. The apprehension that was lately felt concerning the disease had almost entirely died out, and people generally had almost reached the conclusion that the city was really in no danger from the scourge. Indeed, the fact that two more vessels have just reached here with cholera on board is by no means a proof that the city will be attacked by the pestilence, but it naturally causes the public mind to revert to the subject of cholera, and no doubt it will tend to throw nervous people into a new state of excitement. But while the fresh appearance of cholera at Quarantine should occasion no excitement or alarm, the warning that it gives to the city ought not to be neglected. The unusually cold Spring has been well calculated to prevent the pestilence from getting a foothold in the city; but warm weather may now be expected very soon, and with it will probably come the cholera, if it should come at all. Therefore, we once more warn our citizens to put themselves upon their guard against the threatened danger. Cleanliness, temperate habits and plain, wholesome diet, is the SUN's anti-cholera prescription, and it is worth more than a whole ship-full of drugs and quack nostrums.

Fenians on the Move.

Once more the Fenian warriors are said to be on the war-path. Reports come from the West to the effect that parties of armed Fenians are passing Northward, with the apparent object of making the grand descent upon Canada which has been so frequently announced before. It is not yet known at what point the onset will be made. Possibly the leaders have concluded to change their previous tactics, and not publish the details of their plans in advance; but the fact that their movements are now announced all over the country by telegraph would seem to imply that the old policy is still adhered to. It has been reported, by malicious persons, no doubt, that the last demonstration, like the Campo Bello fiasco, is only another dodge to galvanize Fenianism with a little new life, so as to give a new impulse to the business of collecting funds. This statement, however, is not entitled to implicit confidence. A movement like that which is now reported is necessarily very expensive, and there is no prospect that it would enhance the bond-selling business sufficiently to pay expenses. The honest, hard-working class of people who constitute the great mass of the Fenian organization are not likely to be deceived again by extravagant promises and quixotic military expeditions. They have heard enough talk and have seen enough blunder. They now mean to quietly wait until something practical has been done before they place any more money in the hands of the Fenian leaders. They are ready and willing to make any sacrifice that will lead to the independence of Ireland, but they have no intention of contributing any more of their earnings for the purpose of supporting lazy leaders in luxury and idleness.

Heads Off at the Custom House.

Collector Skinner has commenced the work of decapitation at the Custom House. In the SUN of Tuesday, we stated that the bookish guillotine was about to be set up in the Government offices of this city, in accordance with the programme of the ahead Johnson party, but we hardly expected that it would be put into practical operation quite so soon. It seems, however, that the new alliance is going to work vigorously, and perhaps somewhat roughly. We say, roughly, because the suspension of Senator Doolittle's son to a position, as the very phrase of the "reconstruction" is a pretty bold stroke of partizanship. It would have been better, for the sake of winning important votes to the consolidated party, if more circumspection had been exercised in the bribal appointments, so as to not make the change so manifestly political. It is natural that Senator Doolittle and other prominent Republican politicians who adhere to the President should desire to get their friends up to a lucrative job as soon as possible, but by a little more regard for appearances they might save at the farther end of the string more than they are now gaining by haste at the end. As we have before stated, the "reconstruction" of the Federal offices in this city is in accordance with the new political contract. All those officers who adhere to Congress in the present division will be decapitated as fast as the thing can be conveniently done, and their places will be filled by JOHNSONIANS, Conservative Republicans and Democrats. The revolution will be thorough and complete, and no occupant of a Federal office in this city, who stands upon the Congressional side of the fence, need flatter himself that he can hold his place by feigning to be orthodox upon the Johnson doctrine. Every man in the service of the Government, in New York, has been marked, and those who fail to come up to the standard of political qualification might as well resign at once. The game of retaliation between Congress and the Administration has therefore fairly commenced. The Senate refused to confirm several of the President's appointees, because of their political unsoundness, and the latter intends to show Congress that political proscription has two sides. Such is politics, and such are politicians. With them political qualifications are paramount to all others.

The War Cloud In Europe.

The foreign news in yesterday morning's SUN indicates that the war cauldron in Europe is boiling and seething still more furiously. Prussia and Austria are now ready for the fight, and are watching each other like a brace of cats ready for a spring. Italy, too, has got so far into the meshes of the quarrel that Prince NAPOLEON says it cannot avoid war, even in case Austria and Prussia should compromise their difficulty. GARIBALDI has been placed at the head of the army, and there is every probability that hostilities in Venetia will soon begin. The attempt of the neutral powers to settle the quarrel by a Peace Congress seems to have already proved abortive. The proposed terms of settlement were sent to the Austrian Government, and the latter flatly refused to accept them. A settlement might possibly have been effected three or four months ago, for at that time Austria was very anxious to avoid a collision; but the Kaiser seems to have "got his back up" at last and now means to fight it out. The situation of affairs has now reached such a point that the outbreak of actual hostilities may be expected at any time, and therefore every foreign mail will be eagerly looked for, in this country.

Franklin Boston Fund.

By the terms of Benjamin Franklin's will, one thousand pounds ($5,000) were left to the city of Boston, in 1791, to be loaned under restrictions. The loans made were to be returned in yearly instalments of one-tenth of the sum loaned, with interest. The applications under this provision have not been numerous. The $5,000 left were paid over to the authorities of the town within six months after his decease, and the first loan was made in May, 1791; and, in 1811, it had reached principal and interest, $9,000. The fund, on the 11th of February last, amounted to $110,136 56. Franklin anticipated, if his plan succeeded, that in one hundred years from the date of his decease, there would be a fund of $655,000; $100,000 of which he directs shall be expended in public works "which may be judged of most general utility to the inhabitants; such as fortifications, bridges, aqueducts, public buildings, baths, pavements, or whatever may make living in the town more convenient to its people, and render it more agreeable to strangers resorting thither for health or temporary residence." The remaining $150,000, he provides, shall be let out again on a similar plan, and as he estimated at the end of the second hundred years that the sum would be 31,031,000, he donates $15,000,000 to the state, and the balance to the inhabitants of the town of Boston, thus terminating the fund.

The Paris Exposition.

The preparations for the Paris Universal Exposition of 1867 are continued with great vigor. The hammering does not cease day or night, Sunday or any other holy time; and there can now be no doubt that all will be ready at the hour appointed. More than three million and a half of francs have already been expended, and there is no end to the process of beautifying and adorning the building and its surroundings and providing for the comfort and pleasure of visitors. An "International Club," where all of every people, to gain and kindred may hold good fellowship, is to occupy the centre of the Champs de Mars, hundred yards in length, and unity in breadth, of light but very elegant construction. Around the principal room will be ranged shops to minister to the wants of mind and body of people of every clime and taste, interpreters in every language, a post office, reading-room, library, table d'hote, and conversation, but no gambling room. None but exhibitors will be admitted to its privileges. To facilitate communication, a line of steam omnibuses is to be allowed upon the great thoroughfares, and small steamboats upon the rivers, and with reference to the great Exhibition, the carriage monopoly has been broken up, and the privilege given to all who wish it, to accommodate people who wish to ride. There will be plenty of Americans; but we fear greatly that the products of American genius will be lacking, because the authors will not take the trouble to send them.

Not Deep Enough for Prayer.

A good story is told of two railroads, which were caught in the late big blow on the Mississippi, at which so many rails were swamped and so many steamboats lost their sky-scrapers. The rail was just emerging from Lake Pepin as the squall came. It at first seemed it was pushing and working as it had only dropped now and then, while the waves broke over it with tremendous uproar, and, speaking literally, deluged the locomotive, the engineer on his knees and continued praying with a vim equal to the emergency. Happening to open his eyes at length, he observed the conductor not engaged in prayer, but pushing a pole in the water at the side of the cab.

"What's that yer doin', Mike?" said he. "Get down on yer knees now, an leave off! a minute between us and purgatory."

"Be aisy, Pat," said the other, as he coolly continued to punch with his pole; "be aisy, now; wait a little, plaase! Wait a little, an' ye can put bothom with a pole!"

Mike is a pious good specimen of a large class of Christians, who prefer to make prayer as easy as they can "anyhow."

In a Naples Omnibus.

The foreign correspondence of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican has found in Italy a variable even more disagreeable than a Third avenue horse car:

On reaching Naples the course pursued is in an omnibus which was populous already with dead. One look was enough for saying that here, as at home, they are too common and the whole we waited for our baggage an hour or two, the little windows grouped over us like the eyes over Mount Blanc. Oh, what a crowd! It was outside also, without mouldings, screaming, fighting, jabbering, in all languages save the language of Rome. The conductor was running up and down a ladder and telling portentous stories in the cool, overhead; a Bedouin Arab spoke as the over was unmounting four pieces or bringing a lady's bag as many more, the expostulating in English, the gesticulation opposite in French, the conductor interpreting in Italian, two Germans becoming interested and scowling, and vaulting about in unintelligibly to an ill and a voluble little French woman chattering for experience on a like occasion. The porter railed fore and aft in his own support, and there they raged and raved in one of those quarrels which the Italians dearly love, while the whole square, far and wide, was thronged with with just such a mad mob. The noise went through every pore, and turned our tired brains upside down. Noise, noise, noise, and the most evil side of human nature brought into view. It was dusky, the street lamps were lighted; but heedless of danger, men and boys lay asleep in the middle of the road, the drivers passing around them carefully. We had a long jolting drive, with those clattering trunks atop, to the hotel, where the landlord threatened to send us away without lodging, but at last relented, and so our troubles were over. We flew to the upper story, where our trunks, any parlor bolted down into an orange garden, and, resting on a sofa, talked over the events of the day, and enclosed new variety and beauty to be worth all its little discomforts.

Financial News, Markets, &c.

New York, Wednesday, May 30, 6 P. M.—The Stock market was quite animated to-day, with higher prices as a rule. Erie advanced about 5 per cent. Governments were strong. One or two small failures were reported to-day, but they are of too small extent to produce any impression on the general market. Money was easy at 6 a 8 per cent. Gold closed at 138½. There was very little doing in exchange, and the market was quiet at 109¾ for Sixty-day bankers' bills. The New York exports (exclusive of specie), for the week ending May 29th, and since January 1, compare as follows:

| | 1865. | 1866. |
|---|---|---|
| For the week | $1,095,356 | $2,[illegible] |
| Previously reported | 67,421,493 | 94,359,[illegible] |
| Since Jan. 1st | $69,375,059 | $96,519,[illegible] |

The New York imports compare as follows:

| | 1865. | 1866. |
|---|---|---|
| Dry Goods | $650,863 | $1,017,[illegible] |
| General Merchandise | 2,854,650 | 8,177,[illegible] |
| Total for the week | $3,504,855 | $9,[illegible] |
| Previously reported | 54,789,181 | 131,755,[illegible] |
| Since Jan. 1st | $58,294,034 | $136,158,639 |

On 'Change to-day Flour was rather more steady and more active. Wheat was quiet and firm. Corn opened a shade firmer, but closed dull and 1c. lower. Oats were firmer and quiet. Pork was heavy. Beef was steady. Lard was firm, and Whiskey was quiet and steady.
