The prisoner ran a short distance in Fulton street, and then walked leisurely, assuming an indifferent air, until the officer coming up with him, and asking if he "was the man who stabbed that young lady?" said, "What young lady? No." He was arrested and taken to the Second Precinct Station House, and thither the wounded girl was also conveyed. The blood running from her breast in streams. She received medical aid and was conveyed to her home, 20 Lispenard street. The wound in the breast is of a very dangerous nature. Patrick Feely said he was twenty years of age, and lived at No. 6 Mission place. The wounded girl was, as reported, the inmate of a house of ill-fame, and it is supposed that her brother last evening was fettering her on the evil of her ways, and that becoming excited he at last unfortunately put an end to her existence rather than allow her to continue a life of impurity. The prisoner will have an examination this morning.

SAINTS' CHURCH PROPERTY.—THE VENUE IN DOUBT OF A SUIT.—There was a meeting in Brooklyn last evening of the heirs of Antoine Jans, to consider the most appropriate means of enforcing their claims on Saints' Church property, should the church, as proposed, make a transfer of St. Johns Park. There were present about one hundred persons. Michael J. Duane is their counsel, and if these heirs force their claims the suit will be one of extraordinary interest. The property of Trinity Church is valued at sixty-five millions of dollars. It is claimed that the original title of land was granted by the King of Holland to one Antoine Jans, said to be long to the royal family. This grant was supposed by the British Government at a late period and later still Trinity obtained a lease of the land, under which possession has since been held. In the present case it is proposed to carry the case up to the United States Courts. There is a rumor that the church will entertain propositions for a compromise.

A charter was obtained, and the members went to work with energy, as the following facts will show: Once every week—being a benefit Division—they were obliged to hold a meeting, but in excess of the regular meetings—during the six years they have been in existence—they have held 515 public meetings in their hall and upon the docks, and administered the temperance pledge to 3,429 men and women. During that period they have paid to needy members $915; to relatives of deceased members $750; special donations to needy visitors—of which there are 375—$245; to brothers whose wives have died, $225; making in all $1,765, and have now $700 in the bank to their credit.

It must not stand and cook, but [illegible]

will cook almost as soon as starch if it is young, as it should be. Cut it then off the cob, and spread it before a bright sun on a clean cotton or linen sheet to dry. It should be done early in the morning, and of course a fine day be selected. If you have no large kettle, several successive messes may be cooked in the water, and if it is managed with care the corn does not lose its sweetness. It must not be permitted to sour or ferment in the slightest degree, as the sugar turns to gas. Put it into a brick oven to finish drying, if there is danger of its drying or fermenting. The oven must be the temperature it is when bread is taken out. A stove oven is just as good for this purpose. It must be stirred often, and when it is hot the fermenting principle will be checked." Corn prepared in this manner is said to retain its sweetness, and to become very useful.

AFFECTING SCENE IN COURT.—In the Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, the habeas corpus case, In re Edward Barrett, came before Judge Barnard. The mother of the child in this case, when he was 12 days old, placed him in charge of Mrs. McCabe, promising, according to Mrs. McCabe, to pay her a sum of money, and requesting her to adopt the child. This was six years ago, and Mrs. Barrett has married again, and is now residing in the South. She now comes and asks for her child. His adopted parents plead that they have had all the trouble of bringing him up, and, owing to the delicacy of the boy's constitution, have been at great expense; that they have a great affection for the child, and that to remove him from them would endanger his health. The child, in court, showed great affection for his adopted mother, and resolutely refused to go to his real parent. This produced quite a scene. The mother, in a broken Italian tone, exclaimed:

"Oh, Judge, Judge! Don't give my child away—my heart will break—will he ask?" "Don't break the child's heart!" tearfully but energetically responded Mrs. McCabe.

The Judge, for a few moments, was evidently embarrassed, but at length said: "My good woman (to the mother), your case is a hard one; but your child is of tender age, delicate in health, and evidently attached to the people who have always brought him up. I will give him to you now, and you take him South—but I do not lightly do it. I will let him remain where he is for one year. By that time he will be stronger and healthier; then, if you apply again, your application may be granted."

Counsel for the mother said that Mrs. McCabe had offered to give up the child, if she was paid $50. This Mrs. McCabe denied.

Judge Barnard said that if $50 was wanted to get the child back, the mother should call on him, and he would give it to her.

"I do not want to sell the child," said Mrs. Cabe.

The parties then left in the

A ROPE DANCER'S TROUBLES.—The case of Mary Fern against Antoine De Lave came up in the Supreme Court Chambers yesterday, before Judge Barnard. The plaintiff has commenced suit against Antoine De Lave for her salary as a rope dancer. She was with the defendant several years, when she fell from the rope in Brazil and injured herself severely, and was sent by the defendant to Canada with his brother. She says she never received more than $100 from him, and asks $2,000. On an affidavit of his non-residence, she attached some money belonging to him in the hands of a Mr. Crook. He now comes in, and, on affidavit of residence, moves to discharge the attachment. She, in reply, says he is a French Canadian, of the name of Fredon, and always speaks of Canada as his home, and has a family there, while the family which he has here are not his children, but children taken by him to bring up to his own business. The Court denied the motion.

HEAVY DAMAGES FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT.—In the Superior Court, yesterday, the case of Newell against Wheeler came up before Justice Jones. The plaintiff claims to have invented a machine for the cleaning of mouldy and injured coffee, and made an agreement with the defendants that they should use it and pay him a royalty on the coffee cleaned by them. This agreement is admitted, but it was claimed by the defendants that the machine was worthless; that it gave the coffee a peculiar glossy and greasy look, destroying its salability, and reduced it so much in weight that the product was less in value than the original uncleaned article. The plaintiff replies that these matters resulted from the mismanagement of the machine by the defendants, and that their machine has been damaged by that fact injuriously. The case was argued at great length, and the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff of $21,916.50.

CAN GOODS LEFT ON STORAGE BE CONSTRUED TO BE GOODS BOUGHT?—The case of Chas. Kochler against Austin F. Pettit was tried before the General Term of the Court of Common Pleas yesterday. This case was tried in the lower court upon the following facts: The plaintiff left a lot of furniture in storage with the defendant. The defendant, as he claims, insured his own stock, without regard to that of the plaintiff. The policy of insurance, however, which was produced, covers goods held in trust. The case having been decided against the defendant, he now appeals. The counsel for the appellant claims that there was no contract on the part of his client to insure the respondent, and that he so notified him; also, that the storage should be deducted from the amount, if any, for which he was liable. He court reserved its decision.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.—A Practical Joke—A Dog Poisoned.—Nicholas McCaffery yesterday appeared before Justice Dowling, and asked for a warrant for the arrest of a man who had poisoned his dog. He produced a certificate from Dr. W. D. Shine, showing that he had made a post mortem examination on the dog, and judged that it had been poisoned. The magistrate said that there was a high joke in the case, and told McCaffery that as the dog was dead, it had passed from his jurisdiction, and he must apply to the coroner, and have an inquest held over the defunct canine. McCaffery went to the coroner's office, where he obtained a summons, requiring the supposed murderer of the dog to appear under penalty of the law. What effect this document will have on McCaffery's fortune is hard to state, but it would not be amiss to say that the paper is of no value.

The Assault on Roundsman De Shays.—Roundsman Miles De Shays, of the Fifth Precinct, who was badly beaten by Officer Richard J. Kenehan on Sunday morning, was yesterday visited by Justice Hogan, who took his complaint against Kenehan. The latter was required to give $1,000 bail to answer.

Arrest of a Burglar.—Early yesterday morning the Eleventh Precinct Police observed that the padlock of the house No. 122 Willett street had been removed from the front door. On entering the premises they found Daniel McCarty packing up $100 worth of goods, for the purpose of taking them away. He was arrested, and Justice Ledwith committed him for examination.
