MORTON'S BROTHER-IN-LAW

COL. HOLLOWAY'S GRABS IN THE INDIANA STATE TREASURY.

Nepotism in the Hoosier State—The Indianapolis Postmaster Drawing Pay as Secretary, Colonel, and A. D. C. to the Governor—Extraordinary Claims Paid.

Correspondence of The Sun.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 6.—Some interesting facts bearing on ex-Gov. Morton's administration have recently been brought to light. Like his master, Grant, nepotism has been one of his most notorious traits. One of the many instances showing how our State treasury has been depleted, is the case of Col. W. R. Holloway. The latter is one of Morton's brothers-in-law, and is postmaster of this city. In 1864, after drawing the pay and perquisites of three offices for many years, Col. Holloway had amassed enough money to purchase an interest in the Indianapolis Journal, and was at once made State printer. He remained in the Journal office until a few months ago, devoting his time to editing the telegraph department at night and the post office by day. At the same time the Colonel, it appears, was secretly and quietly drawing pay as "Secretary, Colonel, and A. D. C." to his illustrious brother-in-law, Gov. Oliver P. Morton.

THE FIRST PAYMENT.

A few days ago your correspondent, while looking over the State Auditor's papers, stumbled over the following document:

INDIANAPOLIS, June 1, 1866.
State of Indiana to W. R. Holloway, Dr.
To services on the staff of Governor Morton..... $400

The nature and time of the service rendered are not given. At the time Col. Holloway filed this claim, Gov. Morton had in his employ as secretaries Col. W. H. Schlater at $250 a month, and Capt. J. M. Commons at $158.33 a month. But this did not prevent the Governor from making the following order:

STATE OF INDIANA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
INDIANAPOLIS, JUNE 1, 1866.

AUDITOR OF STATE:—Draw a warrant on the Treasurer of State in favor of William R. Holloway for four hundred dollars, payable out of the Governor's office fund, for services as Secretary, Colonel and A. D. C. O. P. MORTON,
$400. Governor of Indiana.

On July 2 and August 1 similar bills were rendered, each amounting to $200, accompanied by the Governor's requisition on the State Auditor for their payment.

A TRIP TO THE EAST.

After the liquidation of the last claim, the Colonel conceived the idea of taking a trip East, at the expense of the State. So he got his brother-in-law's consent, and posted off. On his return he brought in the following bill:

INDIANAPOLIS, August 8, 1866.
State of Indiana to W. R. Holloway, Dr.

Fare to New York, sleeping car, meals, &c.....	$ 33 50
Expenses in New York, hotel bills, &c. (eight days).....	50 48
Fare to Washington, sleeping car.....	11 75
Expenses at Washington (one week).....	28 00
Fare to New York, sleeping car.....	11 75
Expenses in New York (five days).....	36 90
Expenses in New York, sleeping cars, meals, &c.....	33 50
	$200 90

It will be seen that &c. cuts quite a figure in the above bill. Thus eight days' expenses, in New York are put down at $50.45; so also five days' expenses, &c., in the same city are placed at $31.95. In Washington, where the Colonel has no &c., his bill for seven days is $28, or $4 a day. It will not be contended that New York is a more expensive place than Washington city. Placing the hotel board in the two places at the same price, there is a total of $52 for the thirteen days he was in New York, but he received from the State $82.40, thus showing that the &c. cost Indiana the snug little amount of $30.40 on this one trip! Some inquisitive people here would like to know if Col. Holloway at the time he took this pleasure trip was not furnished with free passes by the railroad companies.

A CURIOUS CIRCUMSTANCE.

But the most remarkable feature in this case remains to be explained. On the 7th of July, one month and one day before the Colonel put in his bill, Gov. Morton issued the following order for its payment:

STATE OF INDIANA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
INDIANAPOLIS, July 7, 1866.

AUDITOR OF STATE: Draw a warrant on the Treasurer of State, in favor of W. R. Holloway, for two hundred dollars, Civil Contingent Fund, for services to New York and Washington City. O. P. MORTON,
Governor of Indiana.

On the 31st of August, 1866, Col. Holloway put in another bill for $200 salary, and his brother-in-law issued another order for its payment. On the 1st of October another bill was rendered for $200, which was also paid on order of Gov. Morton, and so for November and December, 1866. In the mean time, however, the Colonel made another trip to New York and Washington, which was duly rendered with all the etc. accompaniments, as follows:

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 5, 1866.
State of Indiana to W. R. Holloway, Dr.

Expenses to New York, meals, sleeping car, &c.	$ 33 50
Expenses in New York (ten days).....	60 0[illegible]
Fare to Washington, sleeping car.....	11 75
Expenses in Washington (four days).....	26 [illegible]
Fare to New York, &c.....	11 7[illegible]
Expenses in New York (five days).....	23 45
Expenses home, fare, meals, sleeping cars.....	33 5[illegible]
	$200 35

Here it will be perceived that after allowing the Colonel $4 a day for his hotel bill, the &c cost the State of Indiana $33.95 on this trip—a small rise of over $5 from the previous bill. How much more this &c. would have cost the State in 1867, had his brother-in-law remained in the Gubernatorial chair, it would be difficult to conjecture. But the 25th day of January, 1867, witnessed his retirement from office and the installation of Gov. Baker. Just before he left, however, Gov. Morton issued orders paying two of his Secretaries $420 extra pay, and Holloway rushed in his account for the remnant of the month of January, well knowing that Gov. Baker never would have issued an order for its payment if he waited until the end of the month.

THE LAST GRAB.

Under the circumstances this account is something of a curiosity. It will be seen from the other vouchers that Holloway drew his $200 a month regularly at the end of every month. But as before remarked, Morton retired from the Governorship, and Baker was installed as Governor on the 25th of January, 1867. Well did the "Secretary, Colonel, and A. D. C." of His Excellency, Gov. Morton, know that his fate was sealed. So he took time by the forelock, and made his last grab at the State Treasury thus:

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 23, 1867.
State of Indiana to Wm. R. Holloway, Dr.
January, 1867—To 24 days' services rendered Gov. Morton, from Jan. 1 to Jan. 24, 1867, $154.83.

And his brother-in-law made haste to issue the following order:

STATE OF INDIANA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
INDIANAPOLIS, JAN. 23, 1867.

Auditor of State:

Draw a warrant on the Treasurer of State in favor of William R. Holloway for one hundred and fifty-four dollars and eighty-three cents, Governor's office fund, for twenty-four days in January, 1867.
$154.83. O. P. MORTON, Governor of Indiana.

A FIFTH WHEEL TO THE WAGON.

Exit Holloway. The advent of Gov. Baker into the Gubernatorial chair was the signal for the scatterment of the "Military Ring" that surrounded Indiana's "great war Governor." No more to pleasure trips at the expense of the State. No more "State of Indiana to William R. Holloway, Dr." But look at the farce of paying this man $200 a month salary as "Secretary, Colonel and A. D. C." and his pleasure trips over the country, while he was one of the proprietors of the Indianapolis Journal, and as such employed in that office, and while Morton had two other Secretaries, making three Secretaries at a cost of $7,200 a year, for what the Private Secretaries of Democratic Governors had done for $2,500 a year. The war was then over. Peace prevailed all over the land, and there was no more necessity for three Secretaries to the Governor than for a fifth wheel to a wagon. Gov. Baker so decided when he came into office, for he dispensed with all of them but one. Yet, in order to give his brother-in-law $200 a month out of the State Treasury, we see our stall-fed Governor adopting this same brother-in-law as his "Secretary, Colonel, and A. D. C."

MILITARY NOTES.

Col. Spencer usually parades in full uniform.

There is a rumor that the Ninth are to encamp at Stamford.

The Sixth want a new armory, and Col. Sterry is searching for a loft.

Col. Spencer is deluged with requests for his photograph in full uniform.

The French band were dined and wined recently by the Fifty-sixth Regiment.

Col. Spencer in full uniform will parade at the head of his command on Evacuation Day.

Cols. Conkling of the Eighty-fourth and Rockefeller of the Seventy-first are perambulating Europe.

We understand that the Sixty-ninth will give the Fifth and a grand reception upon their arrival in the city from Boston.

The ball and fête given recently at Camp Sherman by the Seventh was one of the most delicate, refined, and elegantly entertainments of the season.

Tennie C. Claflin has agents at the Long Branch hotels recruiting waiters of a dark hue for her regiment. Col. Spencer in full uniform looks well on horseback.

C. I. William F. Moller, of the Governor's staff, returned from a tour in England a few days ago. Col. Spencer in full uniform contemplates a foreign tour next year.

Too much praise cannot be awarded the Ninth for their Brightonian appearance and steady marching on the Fourth. They were only excelled by Col. Spencer in full uniform.

The residence of Col. Spencer in full uniform on Twenty-third street is surrounded by country people all day, anxious to see the grave, dashing, handsome, and genial Colonel in full uniform.

Great excitement prevails among the members of the Eleventh in consequence of the arrest of Capt. Francis for violation of the procession law. Col. Spencer, however, in full uniform, is cool and self-possessed.

Shopkeepers along Broadway are daily in receipt of letters and telegrams from people in all parts of the country desirous of renting front windows on the day of February, 1873, to see Col. Spencer in full uniform parade at the head of the Fifth in full uniform.

SEASIDE SPRAY.

The dust at Newport is dreadful.

Fashionable Boston reigns supreme at Swampscott.

Six foreign ambassadors are rusticating at Newport.

Rockaway is the favorite place for excursion parties.

Croquet is the only fashionable dissipation at Rye Beach.

Additional guardians of the peace are called for at Coney Island.

Ladies at New London are too aristocratic to lounge in surf bathing.

Soda water and ice cream dealers are doing a brisk business at the Branch.

Saturday evening there will be a soirée dansante at the Ocean House, Newport.

One hundred and twenty-eight guests are at the Larkin House, Watch Hill, R. I.

On Saturday evening a hop will be given at the Bath Hotel, Bath, L. I., by the permanent guests.

Cards are circulating in fashionable society for a grand wedding to take place the first week in August at Newport. Fashionables are on the qui vive.

The West End Hotel, Long Branch, appears to have the best class of guests thus far, and Dame Fashion's headquarters have been established there for the season.

The Hon. E. D. Morgan is at his Newport cottage for the season, which is known as Fair Lawn. Receptions at the Morgan estate are among the notable events of the season.
