TRIAL OF JOHN SCANNELL.

FURTHER TESTIMONY UPON THE QUESTION OF INSANITY.

The Prosecution Showing that John Scannell was Probably Not Insane.

The trial of John Scannell was resumed in the Oyer and Terminer yesterday. Every member of his family was present, all manifesting the greatest interest in every point in the trial, whether it was important or unimportant. Mrs. Scannell, wife of the prisoner, shows by suggestive inquiries to the counsel for her husband that she has a keen and intelligent appreciation of the significance of every word falling from the lips of the witnesses, the counsel and the judge. There was no special event during the day, except that at one time, while his conduct at the inquest of his brother was being inquired into, the prisoner bowed his head, and seemed to make a great effort to restrain an expression of his feelings. His mouth twitched nervously, and he resorted to his handkerchief to dry his eyes. Throughout the day it was apparent that to maintain a calm demeanor was to him a difficult task which he was determined to perform.

JOHN SCANNELL'S RATIONALITY.

George G. Whitson of 42 Lexington avenue, horse dealer, was the first witness called in rebuttal by the District Attorney. He testified that he had known the prisoner nine or ten years, and had seen him frequently within the past two or three years. He heard of the shooting and death of Florence Scannell, and in his casual meetings with the prisoner since had noticed nothing different from his ordinary conduct. Mr. Phelps asked whether, in any of the meetings with the prisoner, witness saw anything irrational. To this question Mr. Beach objected, and Judge Brady put it in a different form: "Was his conduct in your casual meetings rational?" Mr. Beach objected to this also, and argued his objection at some length. Judge Brady then asked the witness whether he had had any conversations with the prisoner during the time spoken of, and was told that they only exchanged salutations, and witness could not recount any words or topics. The Judge then excluded his testimony on the point of rationality.

WHY HE THOUGHT OF VOTING FOR GRANT.

Nelson Post, 413 West Twenty-first street, Whitson Oakley, Brooklyn, Wm. MacRoberts, 139 East Twenty-fourth street, Amos F. Chamberlain, 147 East Twenty-fourth street, and Edwin F. Rogers, 239 East Thirty-second street, severally deposed that if John Scannell was insane they failed to discover it in their daily intercourse with him. Mr. Chamberlain had something to say about a political conversation with prisoner, who had said that he thought of voting for Grant in the last election because "Grant wears a soft hat and smokes a cigar among the boys."

Hiram Ham, proprietor of the Bull's Head Tavern, testified that prisoner frequently visited his house, and often played poker there. Witness had never heard him speak of Donohue or of Florence since the death of the latter, but John seemed to feel the death of his brother very much. On cross-examination Mr. Ham said that he was one of the poker players that John Scannell met at his house. John was the unlucky man of the party. Mr. Ham could not remember that he had ever come out winner from a sitting, and he had remarked of him that on some occasions Scannell lacked an ounce of brains. Witness knew that prisoner was grieving about his brother because of his sad appearance.

DONOHUE'S LAST WORDS.

John Nesbitt, one of the eye witnesses of the pool room tragedy, was recalled and asked to say how Donohue was in the habit of addressing him. Mr. Beach objected, but was overruled, and witness answered that Donohue usually called him John. The object of this testimony was to account for the expression, "Come on, John," as proved by the defence to have been uttered by Donohue just before he was killed.

Dr. James R. Wood, Surgeon-in-Chief of Bellevue Hospital, testified that he treated Florence Scannell from the time he was shot to the date of death, and had seen John many times during the interval without any mental aberration. He was extraordinarily solicitous, and for the first few days greatly excited, but witness had not noted any indication of insanity. His attention had not been directed to that matter, however, and he would not undertake to pronounce upon the sanity or insanity of anybody without opportunity for frequent and prolonged examinations. After the second shooting of Donohue, whom witness also treated, he talked with prisoner about the feud, and exhorted him to drop it, obtaining a promise that so far as Scannell was concerned the enmity should end.

NO SIGNS OF INSANITY.

Dr. M. H. Henry, police surgeon, swore that he saw Scannell at the police station the day after the shooting and every day until he was taken to the Tombs. The interview began by a consultation with the prisoner as to the propriety of admitting Mrs. Scannell to see him in his cell, there being some doubt on the subject, arising out of consideration for the wife's delicate condition. She was finally admitted. The husband and wife met kindly, and their talk was confined to the topic of prison reasons during his incarceration. He instructed her as to his needs, and how to supply them. The subsequent conversations between witness and prisoner were confined to the topic of his health and feelings. Witness was certain that the whole conduct and conversation of prisoner were perfectly rational. He had noticed particularly on account of a remark of Mrs. Scannell:

"HOW STRANGE AND WILD HE LOOKS," and because he could not see the strangeness or wildness.

Mr. Beach cross-examined Dr. Henry in a sharp manner, making frequent complaints that he could not get responsive answers to his questions. The witness appealed to the Court and was admonished by Judge Brady that a categorical answer was better than a long explanation. At the same time Judge Brady told Mr. Beach that he must allow some latitude to a professional man answering questions touching his professional occupations.

Dr. Lewis E. Sayre, Dr. Wm. T. Nealis, and Matthew Daly, a Tombs prison keeper, testified that they discovered no insanity in Scannell.
