GRANT'S INDIAN POLICY.

DESTROYING THE WORK OF THE PRESBYTERIANS.

The Presbyterians Compelled to Abandon a Mission where they had Spent $88,000—What they Have to say about it.

On the Missouri river, about seventy miles above Omaha, is the reservation of the Omaha Indians. They were removed to their present location in 1855. In the year 1846 the Presbyterians founded a mission among them. The Rev. Mr. McKinney was the first missionary. He was succeeded in 1851 by the Rev. Wm. Hamilton and wife. Mr. Hamilton labored with gratifying results until within the past three years. In 1857 the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions erected on the reservation a building in which the children of the tribe might be educated in Christianity, grammar, agriculture, and the various industries of life. The Presbyterians expended about $16,000 on this building, $5,000 of which they received from the Government. The same denomination was also contributed $1,000 or $5,000 yearly towards the support of the school, besides $6,000 annuity money paid to them by the Government. There was ample accommodation in the school for all the children of the tribe. The Omahas in 1847 numbered 1,050. At present they number 969, including 120 children. Fifty children attended the school, and among its graduates twenty volunteered to fight for the Union. The Omahas are

NOT ENTIRELY CIVILIZED.

Three years ago, when Grant instituted his Indian policy of denominational agencies, the Presbyterians expected, of course, that the mission upon which they had expended so much would be entrusted to a man of their faith. Such, however, was not the Executive programme, and a Quaker, Dr. E. Painter, was installed as agent of the Omaha reservation. Dr. Painter set himself to work to and he has effectually succeeded. As there were only six score children in a tribe of about one thousand, the majority of the Indians had but little interest in education, and a petition was sent to Commissioner Parker asking that the $3,150 devoted to the boarding school be appropriated to the support of three day schools. The petition was granted, and the Presbyterians abandoned the boarding school, not feeling able to bear the entire expense. They contend that although the majority of the tribe was opposed to the boarding school plan, that majority was not well qualified to judge of the question at issue; that they were so ignorant and depraved as to be and that their professed desire for day schools was a humbug, their real aim being to get $3.50 per capita in money. The wishes of the Indians best qualified to judge were not considered. From 1851 to May 1, 1866, the Presbyterians had expended in the support of this school and building the sum of $88,875, and had received $50,181.25 from the Government.

AVERSE TO ANY KIND OF EDUCATION,

THE RESULT

is that the Omahas are farther from civilization than ever. The boys that were learning agriculture now go hunting, and the girls that were taught to sew now dress buffalo skins. Of the annuity of $5,000 about one-half is spent by the agent in carrying out his peculiar policy. The Indians don't like his policy. They are further off from handling their own money than before.

So far no improvement has been made by the Indian Department to give up to the Presbyterians this agency, which they have justly earned by years of missionary toil.

HOW THE AGENCIES ARE DIVIDED.

Perhaps a comparison of the number of agencies divided among the different denominations may be interesting:

Quakers	1	Orthodox and Congregationalists	6
Hicksites	1	Episcopalians	4
Methodists	5	Reformed Dutch	1
Presbyterians	7	Episcopalians	1
Baptists	1	Lutherans	1
Catholics	8	Unitarians	1
Unclassified	1

The Baptists, the most numerous denomination in the United States, have but four agencies, while the Quakers and Methodists leal the list. The Quakers have made some converts among the Indians. There are Indian Quakers in Kansas. They wear broad-brimmed hats, and belong to the Orthodox section. I do not know whether they would speak to a Hicksite or not.

WHAT PRESBYTERIANS SAY.

The Presbyterian Committee on Foreign Missions remark in regard to the closing of the Omaha school: "It was usual in former years for the Indian Department to welcome the educational efforts of missionary boards, to extend pecuniary aid in some instances to their schools, and to sustain them in the work in the face of difficulties which were not to be overcome. They now must be rightly abandoned, nor should it be compromised either by giving the charge of education among the Indians exclusively to any one denomination of Christians, or by giving to the Indian agents unrestricted control of the subject of education."

A CONTEST FOR $20,000,000.

The Shamokin Land Riots and what Led to Them. A New Yorker's Houses Burned to the Ground—Litigation Pending.

Correspondence of The Sun.

SHAMOKIN, PA., June 7.—In 1793 Robert Morris of Philadelphia, the financier who saved us in revolutionary times, was engaged in land speculations with his partner, John Nicholson. They operated by taking out warrants in the names of other persons, and with these warrants locating claims of four hundred acres of State lands. By the law of the State the person paying for these estates was held to be the legal owner, although no one could locate over four hundred acres in his own name in one county. In the year 1795 Nicholson had taken out twenty-five warrants in the name of John Nicholson, and Robert Martin was a land surveyor, and was indebted to Morris for a trifling sum. To liquidate the debt he surveyed and located the land called for by these warrants. The location was in Westmoreland and parts of the three counties of Northumberland, Sunbury, and Montour, and embraces anthracite coal land now estimated to be worth $20,000,000.

In 1796 Robert Morris sold all his right, title, and interest in Pennsylvania lands to John Nicholson, making no mention of it on his books, and so stating upon oath when he took the benefit of bankruptcy in 1798. In 1801 John Nicholson died intestate, leaving a large number of heirs at law, who in 1825 executed a power of attorney to William P. Farrand to sell and convey all the lands to which they were entitled as Nicholson's heirs. In 1837 Farrand, acting as attorney, sold the land in question to Henry K. Strong, who sold it in 1838 to Hannah Hoff, who sold it to Stewart Newell of 141 East Sixteenth street, New York.

The actual possession of these lands has meantime been obtained by other persons, and Mr. Newell has had not sufficient means to prosecute his claim, he has therefore made a contract with Mr. H. Wheeler of 54 East Thirty-second street, one-half interest in the land, and has given Wheeler a power of attorney to sell the interest so conveyed in order to raise funds to prosecute the claim. Wheeler's attempt to gain possession and the result of the affair of last week are fully in The Sun of May 31.

This is the story told by Mr. Newell and those who have purchased an interest in his claim, and they say that the occupants of the land all claim under George Grant, who obtained his title under the following circumstances: In 1816, after the death of Robert Martin, the surveyor of the land, his heirs claimed that he was the rightful owner, and to get a title Martin's administrators gave a sealed note and warrant of attorney to George Grant (a son-in-law of Martin) for $2,000, upon which judgment was entered, and the land was levied upon, and bought by George Grant, who took out a patent for it and sold it. The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company have bought it all up from the various claimants under this title, and now hold possession.

They further say that the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has reviewed these proceedings in the case of Grant against Leavan, 4 Barr, and has declared them void.

They say that the subject has been investigated by several eminent lawyers, who have given their opinion that the claim is valid, and that Stewart Newell has the right of entry or possession.

Mr. B. Franklin Gowen, the President of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, has that viewing this as bold attempt at blackmailing, he telegraphed up to his people to turn the houses Wheeler had built, and to have him and his party arrested. This was done, and the party were placed under bonds for forcible entry and detainer, a criminal offence in Pennsylvania, and he expects to have Wheeler and his party in State Prison in less than a year.

Since the burning of these houses Wheeler and his party have gone away, leaving the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company in undisturbed possession. All is quiet here, and the rest of the fighting is to be done in the courts.

How the Poor are Swindled.

To the Editor of The Sun.

SIR: In those portions of the city which are crowded with tenement houses, there exists much competition between the cheap groceries which are patronized principally by the poor. As a consequence, this rivalry has led to the practice of fraud by a system of false weights and measures. One very common form of swindle is to have one end of the balance scales heavier than the other, a weight being kept upon the lightest part, which is never removed until another is substituted. As most of the customers purchase their tea, coffee, spices, &c., in small quantities, the addition of large sheets of coarse, heavy brown paper, and often damp at that, takes a very liberal percentage from the weight of the articles delivered. On the hanging, spring scales, upon which ham, &c., is weighed, it is a custom, under a pretense of cleanliness, to place two or three sheets of this paper, which, in addition to the wrapper, often defrauds the purchaser out of one or two ounces especially when small children are sent. A little close observation will detect these dishonest dealers, and be the means of saving many a workingman's family from being systematically cheated, as they now are, as well as to expose these rascals who thus fatten upon the miseries of the laboring classes. M. W. H.
