WHAT SQUIBS FOUND.

The Most Interesting Book in the Library in the City Hall—Some of the Curiosities of the New City Directory.

Squibs having been imprisoned in the City Library yesterday was unable to find a single book of any conceivable interest to anybody until he took up the "City Directory for 1873." He found it as carefully indexed as "Webster's Dictionary," and presenting almost as many peculiarities in the orthography of men's names as attach to the hundred thousand more ordinary parts of speech treated of by the renowned lexicographer, and affording much matter for agreeable speculation in other directions.

The volume contains 228,161 names. Of these about 2,450 belong to various members of the numerous and respectable family of Smith. The Smyths and Smythes and Schmidts and Smidts number 150, and the Johnsons, Thompsons, Andersons, Donovans, and the Mcs are like sands upon the seashore. Of Jacksons there are 320, of Jacobs an equal number. Among the latter is one known the world over as "ORIGINAL JACOBS."

At the lowest chronological calculation this venerable man is now about two hundred years old. The Turners and Wagners and Webers and Websters and Walkers and Joneses and Clarks do not seem to have fallen off since last year, and of the Myerses there are no fewer than 300. There are many of the family of Goodman, but there is but one Outlaw, and he is an honest Laborer dwelling in West Seventeenth street. The Whites, Browns, Blacks, and Greens variegate the usual large number of the Directory pages, and though there are no Purples, Safferines, or Magentas, the book is foggy with Grays, immerishes a few States, and is liberally sprinkled and seasoned with Salts and Peppers. The days of the week have given names to several of our citizens. No Monday appears in the directory, but there are two Mondays, which amounts to the same thing; and several Sundays. No Tuesdays and no Wednesdays appear, but there is a Donnerstag, who sells furniture, and a nice collection of Fridays and Freitags, three Sundays and a few Sonntags, but no Sabbath. Beans, Beets, Pease, Melons, Potatoes, Tomatoes, Asparagus, and Berrys are well represented, but there is but one Onion and he carries his name in a German dress—namely, Zwiebel.

but only one Elk appears. No Cow is to be found, but the the name Hnatkowski is there, and Kalbfleisch, which being interpreted signifies veal. Hobbys are numerous, but no one acknowledges the name Whim, Fancy, or Crotchet. This is one of the unaccountable idiosyncrasies of human nature. All the Lagers sell beer, John Sherry deals in liquors, Mr. Slipper is a printer, Mr. Sinn a reputable mechanic, Mr. Schlechter, or Slaughter, a quiet cabinet maker, and Mr. Schiller a modest tailor, a man who would not give a yard of Canton flannel for all the rhymed cantos in his namesake's book of poems. Messrs. Seel, Fish, Shark, Salmon, Trout, Perch, Mullet, and Flounder will all unite with Messrs. Bass, Dace, Croaker, and Drum, in asserting positively that no one of them has ever spent twenty-four consecutive hours in the water. Mr. Seller is, very appropriately, a salesman, and Mr. Buggy a carman. The Slys, the Slows, the Quicks are divided among the various industrial occupations; many of the Schneiders are not tailors, as they ought to be, and most of the Taylors acknowledge no allegiance to the needle.

MR. SCHEARS,

who should have been a man milliner, is a shoemaker, Mr. Schaum is a cook, and his brother deals in milk. The name is High German for foam. One of the oldest names in the directory is that of Mr. Schildknechel, who is a carpenter. Mr. Schimmelpfennig rejoices in a patronymic that signifies "white horse penny," and Mr. Wurtz means nothing longer or shorter than sausage. Then we have Silks and Wools and Cottons, and a Nicholas Silvery who deals in beer, and a Merryman who preaches, a Schuffler, who is to be hoped never saw a pack of cards, some Gamblers who never play, a Shad who makes clothes—Quaker coats perhaps—a number of Geoghegans who would find it difficult to make their name known did they not drop half its syllables and mispronounce the remainder; a Sing, a Schatz, a Cutlet, some Bears, a Schell, a Schlumpf, a Longstreet who pulls other people's teeth to make work for his own, a Maine, a Jersey, some Washingtons, no Michigan, one O'Regan, and one Tennessee. The last, however, is a forename and belongs to Miss Claflin, whether expressed or understood. The Januarys, Marchs, Mays, and Augusts are in full force, and so are the Springs, the Summers, the Winters, and the Midwinters. There is no Autumn, but the Falls are plenty, and there are

EVER SO MANY FIELDS,

Meadows, Brooks, Rivers, Mounts, Hills, Dales, Glenns, Vails, Caves, Fountains, and Forests. Among the names most frequently repeated are Williams, Keating, Fuller, Kearney, Lyon, McGrath, McGuire, Matthews, Oppenheim and Oppenheimer, O'Neil, Price, Reynolds, Rhodes, Richards, Rice, Simon, Stevens, Taylor, Thompson, Sterns, and Friedman. There are Trotts, Trotters, Shanks and Dreyfoos, Walkers, Ryders, Runners, Skipps and Shinns. There are Longs and Shorts, Batchelors and Widders, Thistles and Mosses, and Barks, and Trunks, and Branchs; Wileymen, Wiseman, Wittymen and Fastmen; Graves, Tombs and Coffins; Wiggs, Whiskers, Toupets and one Mustoche; an overwhelming list of Murphys, two or three hundred Whites, and enough Purcells and Purdys to stock a colony. Proudfit and Proudfoot do not often appear, but Meek and Meeker are very common, and is an encouraging sign. Two entries under the letter O are peculiar—"Our James, cutter, E. 11th;" and "Our Margaret, E. 56th st." Whose James and Margaret? is the question which every reader of this interesting work is sure to ask, and as sure never to have answered.

THE OLD KNICKERBOCKER NAMES

are not so numerously represented as formerly. There are Beekmans, Ganseworts, Brevoorts, Rhinelanders, Verdils, and Roosevelts, but they do not show forth as in other years. To compensate for this, however, we have a number of Paps, Popps, and Faders, and several Doodys. There are Beers, Porters, Lagers and Wines; plenty of Gins, three Toddy-houses, but no Toddy; one Tinder, a window, and an number of Sparks; a Vest who is a tailor; Phineas Verity who sells beer, and should by right of his name sell an unadulterated article; a regiment of Saints; Winterbottoms, Higginbottoms, Upsidedowns, Sideways, and Bottoms; one Porter Sunny, a moulder, and one Dan Sunny, a porter; a whole quarry of Stones, and one Vorbrandenstein, a limb of the law. Mr. Zanzinger makes wagons; Mr. Zwantzig is a painter; Mr. Vonheilingenstadt is a clerk; perhaps in the Post Office, where the many letters are distributed; Ursula Zwatzlszeweska assists people in entering this wicked world, and Dr. Krollpfeiffer helps to take them out of it.

The curiosities of this Directory cannot all be treated in a newspaper article. The reader who has a taste for odd things may find on close examination that the book fairly overruns with the oddest of odd things.

A Fight with Cotton Hooks.

A fight occurred last night at South street and James slip between Michael Coakley of 70 James street, and William Sullivan of 9 Vandewater street, both longshoremen. They fought with cotton hooks, striking in every direction. The point of Coakley's hook caught Sullivan's ear and it was nearly torn off. It also cut a deep gash in Sullivan's neck and bruised his head. Coakley was locked up in the Oak street police station, and Sullivan was taken to the Park Hospital.
