REMARKABLE MURDER TRIAL.

A Mother Taken from her Children and Murdered—A Daughter Testifies Against her Father—Verdict of the Jury.

Correspondence of the Detroit Tribune.

NEWARGO, Nov. 2.—One of the most remarkable cases in the annals of crime in this State has just closed in this place. Munroe Lindon and wife had been living on their farm in the township of Sheridan, in this county, for several years prior to the 13th day of last May, where they raised a family consisting of two children, the eldest, Mary Lindon, a girl of about twelve or thirteen years of age. Mrs. Lindon had other children, living in the neighborhood, by a former marriage.

On the evening of the date above named, Mrs. Lindon and the children retired, all sleeping in the same bed, leaving the husband and father sitting by the fire, smoking. In the morning Mary was awakened by hearing her little brother asking for his mother. When she arose, her father seemed to be very anxious about Mrs. Lindon, saying, in substance, that something awful had happened. Soon all was commotion about the house, and Mr. Lindon looked where he usually kept his razor, finding it gone. He immediately began searching the premises for his wife, but soon gave up the search, going to call his neighbors to unite in the search, saying that his wife was missing, and he feared that she had made away with herself. The neighbors flocked to his place, and a diligent search was made. Finally he went to a pile of logs, and there, lying in a depression of the ground, he found her lying dead, with her throat cut. He did not go near the body, but gave the alarm, saying that she was dead, and that she looked as though her throat had been cut.

A subsequent examination showed that from where he stood when he made the discovery he could not possibly tell whether her throat had been cut or not, as Dr. Fiore testified that her hair lay over the wounds, which were nine in number, so that he could not see them until he had removed it. A jury was impanelled by the Coroner, and after examining, as they confessed, very hastily into the matter, a verdict of suicide was rendered. It was sworn to by father and daughter that she had tried to choke herself previous to this. Thus matters rested until the Thursday following, when Mr. Lindon was arrested on the charge of having murdered his wife. A closer examination of the surroundings had revealed a large pool of blood about eighty-six feet from where the body was found, and a few drops of blood were found on some of Mr. Lindon's clothing. Where the body lay there was but little blood, the razor was partially closed and lay under the shoulder, and there was no blood on either hand, except where the left hand lay on the body, and the blood had run down the clothing under it, nor was the clothing in the slightest disarranged, but lay nicely disposed about the body. At the pool of blood there were some twigs broken off from the surrounding bushes, and the testimony of witnesses on the trial was that they looked as though a man had used them to wipe his hand, and had then dropped them as the winds were found on the ground.

But now comes the most remarkable fact in connection with the trial. Mary Lindon comes on the stand and denies in toto the truth of her own testimony before the coroner's jury, saying that she gave it under fear of her father, and that he had told her to swear as she did. On her examination by the court, she testified to seeing her father in the corner next to her by her father, and that at one time he had old her mother, in her presence, that either her life or his would have to be awful short, or that he would take a fearful vengeance. At another time her mother came in, and he had filling an brush out to her, and threw fire at his feet, then he came into the house, threatening him not to burn her, but if he meant to kill her, to cut her throat. The defence attempted to show that Mrs. Lindon was insane, and that in a fit of insanity she had taken her life. A strong effort was made to break down the girl's testimony, she being cross-examined for six hours, but it was all in vain. She is one of the most intelligent witnesses for the age that a correspondent ever saw. Not once, in all the examination, could she resist, prevaricate, or cross herself.

The trial commenced one week ago last Wednesday, before an intelligent jury as this county can well find, and continued until a little after noon on last Saturday, a judge holding a rigid line of evidence, when the jury retired to their room, and returned at 8 o'clock with a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree.

TICHBORNE AGAIN.

A Man in the Sandwich Islands Claims to Have Buried the Real Sir Roger.

From the Honolulu Advertiser.

Stranger things have happened than that a solution of the mystery which hangs about the death of Sir Roger Tichborne should be discovered in these islands. A correspondent of the Advertiser, writing from Hilo, under date of the 23d ult., thinks he has discovered in that district the man who saw Sir Roger die, and who buried him on Sydney Island, in the South Pacific Ocean. This island lies southeast from the Island of Rarotonga 250 miles, and is only occasionally visited by vessels in quest of bêche de mer.

George Claridge is the name of the man who claims to have seen the last of Tichborne. He is a native of Hilo, native born, being a lad of read but little and common sense; he is an Englishman, and, so far as our correspondent is aware, bears a good name. Recently in looking at the engravings of the Tichborne family in some numbers of the Illustrated News he found and pointed out Sir Roger to his companion, "That is the man whom I buried on Sydney Island!" The following is his statement:

Like many others of his class in the Pacific, he had drifted about from one island to another, and in 1854 was in such poverty that he could ill afford a passage to Rio, which he had taken in a small trading vessel. After being three days and nights in the boat, we were picked up by a vessel called the Osprey, and landed at Melbourne in July, 1854.

LABOR NEWS.

The sewing machine factories at Florence commenced on an eight-hour schedule on Wednesday.

In the construction of the Pelican Hotel, San Francisco, boys are employed as latheers, the men have demanded higher wages.

The Puddlers' Union of Troy fines its members $2 each if they are seen in the iron mills while the strike is in progress. A few cases of destitution are reported.

The contract for an addition to the Vermont State House at Montpelier will probably be given to a New York builder, who will take 200 workmen there in the spring.

The paper and cattery mills at Turner's Falls, Massachusetts, are overwhelmed. A canal is being cut through a ledge of rock to furnish water power for the latter works.

The Passumsic Railroad Company of Vermont has reduced the pay of section men fifteen per cent, of shop hands five per cent., and has shortened the working day from ten to eight hours.

SYMPATHETIC APPEALS.

An Ingenious Fraud—The Benevolent Dr. Parker of Connellsville, Pa.

Some attention has been attracted in England lately to what appears to be a systematic attempt at swindling, practised by an American who calls himself William Parker, M. D. In September the Rev. Henry C. Knight, living near Malvern Wells, in Worcestershire, received a letter written from Connellsville, Fayette county, Pennsylvania, signed by this Dr. William Parker, and informing Mr. Knight that a young Englishman named Edmund Knight, who claimed to be a distant relation of his, was then dying in Connellsville, where he had arrived two months before; that the stranger, who was twenty-eight, of middle height, slight figure, oval face, blue eyes, fair complexion, with light hair, refused to give any information concerning his occupation, parentage, or residence in England, but that it was evident that he was either a minister of the Church of England, or was educated for one, as he was so well informed on all matters relating to the Church; that the so-called Edmund Knight said he had lost his property and had left England without saying a word to a soul, and had requested Dr. Parker to write to his reverend relative and ask him to pay the doctor for burying him, as he would die easier if he knew that he should not be buried by a stranger's charity. Dr. Parker added that he did not think the young man would live to see the Rev. Mr. Knight's answer, as his lungs were nearly gone, but that he seemed rather to welcome the approach of death. The English clergyman thus appealed to was not, however, taken in, as he knew beyond doubt that not the most distant connection of his could be then in America.

About the same time the Rev. Mr. J. Carrington of Bocking, in England, received a letter from Dr. Parker bearing the same date—Connellsville, Pa., Sept. 19, 1874—as that sent to Mr. Knight, and being an exact facsimile of that letter, with the exception that the dying stranger was called Edmund Carrington, and the exact cost of his funeral was stated at $30 or $40. Mr Carrington made some inquiry, as Edmund is a family name, and the Carringtons have estates in Barbadoes, but came to the conclusion that Dr. Parker could afford to pay for the burial of his myth.

Mr. Richard Stephens of Eastington House, Bournemouth, in Kent, also received a letter from the benevolent Dr. Parker, which was word for word the same as that received by Mr. Knight, the only difference being that Edmund Stephens is substituted for Edmund Knight.

But it would seem that the so-called Parker is a veteran swindler, who changes his name and base of operations as occasion may require. As far back as November, 1853, some English ladies named Copland received a letter signed by Winter Hamilton, M. D., dated Canal Fulton, Stark county, Ohio, Nov. 1, 1853, and giving a most touching and romantic account of a young English lad, Edmund Copland, who came there, fell sick of fever, was taken into the doctor's house, and after doing things dead, in a long time, he will and left a watch, &c., all which valuable articles should be sent to England on remittance of the doctor's bill, $165, and funeral expenses, $135. The Miss Coplands' lawyer wrote in reply that if the will were sent he would ascertain where the property was situated, and doubtless the young Edmunds's friends would pay the doctor. There the matter dropped, no reply being received from Winter Hamilton, M. D. The description of Edmund Copland given by Dr. Hamilton was identical with that given by Dr. Parker of Edmund Knight.

It is probable that many other persons in England have been written to by the doctor, and that in some instances he has succeeded in victimizing his correspondents. The game of 1853 would not have been continued in 1874 if not some profit had been derived from it in the mean time. The doctor is now doubtless engaged in sending his sympathetic appeal to various parts of Great Britain, and it may be that his swindling operations are extended to this country.
