A MYSTERIOUS TRAGEDY.

GEN. ANTHONY A. SUTTON BEATEN NEARLY TO DEATH.

Accusing his Friend and Partner, Gen. Ross, of the Crime—The Arrest of the Accused and his Emphatic Denial.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—A mysterious case of assault, which may have a fatal termination, was disclosed yesterday afternoon. It seems that Anthony A. Sutton and Samuel Ross, both ex-Generals of the United States Army, and who served together in the Mexican and other wars, entered into a partnership some time ago to conduct a billiard saloon in the west wing of the Metropolitan Hotel. For several weeks they have had carpenters and plasterers at work in rooms in an adjoining building, which they purposed to occupy as soon as they were ready. About 5 P. M. yesterday, a man was seen by the workmen crawling down the stairs into the rooms, his head and face literally covered with blood. He asked for water, which was given to him, and then, in response to inquiries, he said that he had been assaulted in the building. Detective McDevitt was summoned and to him the man said that his name was Gen. Sutton and that his assailant was Gen. Ross.

GEN ROSS ARRESTED.

Acting upon this information the detective arrested Gen. Ross, whom he found in his room in the Metropolitan Hotel, he having just finished changing his clothing. There was a cut on one of the fingers of his right hand, which had but recently been wrapped with a clean linen cloth. On a table was a cigar case and some papers, stained with blood. The object of the visit was made known, at which the General expressed great surprise, and, on hearing the full statement of the case, and the condition of the wounded man, Mrs. Ross swooned away. After she had been restored to consciousness, the General was taken to police headquarters.

Meantime Gen. Sutton had recovered sufficiently to be taken to headquarters also, and while there he made a statement in the presence of Superintendent Richards, Chief Detective Clarvoe, Detective McDevitt and several others. He said that he and Ross had been the best of friends for more than thirty years, they having served together in the Mexican war. Recently Ross had fitted up the Metropolitan Billiard Room, and he (Sutton) had invested as partner, $2,000 in cash. Yesterday afternoon they had played a friendly game of billiards, and at about 3 P. M. Ross asked him to go with him and look at the rooms in the new building, as he wanted to make an estimate for furnishing them. He complied with the request, and the two went from the billiard room to the street, thence up stairs into the new building, inspecting and measuring the several rooms, all the while talking pleasantly.

THE ASSAULT.

When one of the rear rooms in the fifth story was reached they halted and talked, as they had done in the other rooms. Sutton held in his hand a small piece of paper and lead pencil, with which he had been figuring, and as he turned to look out of the window toward the Seaton House, unsuspicious of any danger, Ross dealt him a blow on the back of his head with a hammer. He fell, but turned his head and gazed his assailant, receiving a second severe blow. After that he does not remember anything until he woke up alone in the room, and crawled down stairs to where the plasterers were at work. During the recital of the story Ross stood by, seemingly interested in the narrative, and at its conclusion he remarked, with a voice which did not show the least tremor, that "the man was crazy. He had not seen him during the day. Subsequently the Assistant District Attorney arrived, and to him Mr. Sutton made a formal charge of assault and battery with intent to kill, which was duly sworn. Sutton was then taken to Providence Hospital in a dying condition. The physician found nine separate wounds on his head, either of which, it is thought, is certain to produce death. Ross was questioned by the detectives, but refused to say anything further than to make a positive and emphatic denial of all knowledge of the affair. He was then locked up to await judicial action.

An inspection of the room where the assault was made showed conclusively that there had been a bloody struggle. On the floor in several places were pools of clotted blood, and the walls were smeared with blood.

THE TWO EX-GENERALS.

Gen. Sutton is about 52 years of age, of medium stature, not very heavily built. He served during the Mexican war as a private and non-commissioned officer. Soon after the breaking out of the rebellion he was commissioned, and at the close of the war was placed on the retired list with the rank of Colonel, since which time he has not been engaged in any business. He is spoken of by those who know him as a man quiet and unobtrusive demeanor, and one of the last to make an enemy or to provoke such an assault.

Gen. Ross, the accused, is about the same age as Sutton. He is five feet ten inches in height, of good build, gray hair and whiskers, and of quick, nervous temperament. He, too, is on the army retired list, with the rank of General. He has not been engaged in business for some time until his recent venture in the billiard room, which was opened a few weeks ago. He is quiet in manner, and proved by his demeanor yesterday that he is a man of nerve.

FRIGHTENED AT A SHADOW.

PENSACOLA, April 9.—The Hon. Geo. M. Robeson's steam yacht Despatch left here yesterday for Washington direct, after having run from said port to New Orleans for the purpose of conveying the Senatorial party to Mexico.

She touched at Key West en route from Washington to New Orleans, and on her arrival at the latter port reported two cases of yellow fever as having occurred at Key West.

This unwelcome news brought the said Senatorial party to a sudden halt. It would never do to expose other valuable lives wantonly to such a destroyer as yellow fever. So after a week spent in telegraphing to Havana, Key West, and Vera Cruz, they decided to retreat toward Washington by way of Pensacola.

The Despatch anchored off the navy yard at Pensacola about 4 P. M. on the 7th inst. Commodore Cooper, now commanding the station, soon went on board to pay his respects to the distinguished visitors and extend to them the hospitalities of the yard.

They heard incidentally that yellow fever had raged here some time, with unprecedented violence last fall, only about three per cent of all the officers stationed here at that time having escaped it. The Despatch, with all her honorable freight, disappeared with the first dawn of the following morning in the direction of the Pensacola and Louisville Railroad depot, where a special car took the party northward at 8:15 A. M. as fast as steam could carry them over aforesaid rickety road to Pensacola Junction. Not one of the honorable party cheered the lonely denizens of the Pensacola yard with the light of his beaming countenance. Still this yard is retained as a Botany Bay for any member of whom a bureaucrat may conceive a personal pique. Said officer, when ordered here, must await in lonely solitude the sure approach of the fell destroyer, while all the honorables and bureaucrats enjoy the cool breezes of the Northern watering places. Though this yard was long since regarded as useless for all the real purposes of a naval station, it still serves a twofold purpose:

First, as a place of exile and death to all officers who may be so unfortunate as to incur the personal displeasure of a chief of a bureau or a department. Second, as the useless station at New London is retained to elect a member of Congress, so this yard must be kept up at any cost of life and money to send a carpet bagger to misrepresent the people of this State in Congress.
