SIDEWALKS TO BE CLEARED.

RICKETTY VEHICLES VANISHING FROM THE CURBS DOWN TOWN.

Practical Joking at the Expense of the Officers of the Bureau of Encumbrances—The Washington Market Stands to be Removed.

War has been declared against the sidewalk stands around Washington Market and in the streets adjacent. A raid is contemplated, and, before the week is out, will probably be made, with disastrous results to the stands. The signal for the declaration of this war was given by Judge Van Vorst, in a decision delivered in Supreme Court, Chambers, on Tuesday.

This decision disposes finally of a motion to make perpetual an injunction secured last fall in a test case to restrain Commissioner Allan Campbell of the Department of Public Works from removing a sidewalk stand near the market.

Mr. Joseph Blumenthal, Superintendent of the Bureau of Encumbrances, is out of town, but his representative said, yesterday:

"Our understanding of Judge Van Vorst's decision is that it applies particularly to the sidewalk stands around Washington Market. The stands at the outer side of the sidewalk, extending almost to the middle, and the stands that are strung half way across the side streets near Washington Market will have to go.

Commissioner Campbell said that he will avail himself of the decision to clear away the obstructions upon the sidewalk about Washington Market, and in the adjacent streets, without other than necessary delay. Notices to the owners of the stands will be issued as soon as possible, and they will be followed up with the unsparing removal of the stands.

"All of this commotion," said Gen. Joshua M. Varian, Superintendent of Markets, "has been brought about by a desire to make political capital. There is no other reasonable ground for it. Several years ago booths were built around Washington Market, and Commissioner Campbell looked upon them as an obstruction. He directed Superintendent Blumenthal to remove them, and no definite action was made. The booths were torn down and carted away, and that was the last of Commissioner Campbell's zeal for a while. Then he set about driving away the keepers of the stands at the edge of the sidewalk in Vesey street. The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund took the matter up as an encroachment on the city's revenue, and sued out an injunction against Commissioner Campbell in a test case. A motion that the injunction be made perpetual was argued in the Supreme Court, Chambers, in December, and Judge Van Vorst gave his decision in regard to this motion on Tuesday. This decision is to be appealed from.

"In West and Vesey streets, outside of our limits, and the other side streets, the sidewalks and streets are almost impassable. This is due to Superintendent Campbell's Bureau of Encumbrances. This bureau pays no attention to merchants who let their cellars to dealers in country produce, who overflow the sidewalk and a large part of the street with boxes, barrels, and crates. Nor does it heed merchants there and elsewhere who block up the sidewalk and street with their goods. But it is ready to fall, tooth and nail, upon the poor creatures who try to earn a scanty living near the market. This is not fair or manly."

"The sidewalk stands," said a Vesey street storekeeper, "are a very serious annoyance to storekeepers in this street and in the other streets near the market. They crowd the sidewalk, leaving little room for would-be customers to move. This annoys the customers, and they make all the haste possible, unless they are looking for an article that they cannot easily buy elsewhere, to get out of the throng."

"It is very hard," said the keeper of a sidewalk stand in Vesey street, near Washington Market, "that poor folks like us should be driven away from where we are trying to make an honest living for ourselves and our families. Why don't Commissioner Campbell look at almost any square in Broadway, and make a clean sweep of the rubbish? The merchants have big signs over the sidewalk and crowd it with show cases, bales, bags, and boxes? We only want a few inches of the edge of the sidewalk down here, but, because we are poor and friendless, we must be hustled away. Even if we are allowed to sell our little stock of goods, it is hard work to make any kind of a living."

Mr. Thomas F. Hart, Deputy Superintendent of the Bureau of Encumbrances, had a busy day yesterday in the absence of Superintendent Blumenthal. Commissioner Campbell and he were closeted together for some time in the morning. Then he returned to the office, and set all the clerks to work upon notices to the keepers of sidewalk stands in West Washington, Greenwich, Fulton, Vesey, and Barclay streets, and Park place. The notice is to the effect that the keeper of the stand to which it is directed must remove the stand within twenty-four hours after the receipt of the notice. If it is not removed, the notice continues, the stand will be torn down by officers of the Bureau of Encumbrances, and the remnants will be taken to the public yard at the foot of Gansevoort street. The authority cited in the notice is that of a direction from Commissioner Campbell, reënforced by Judge Van Vorst's decision.

Mr. Hart said to a reporter that under the law the officers of the bureau might begin the work of destruction at the precise moment of the expiration of the twenty-four hours specified in the notice. The bureau, however, has no desire to proceed arbitrarily, and ample time will be given for the removal of the stands. The raid therefore may not be begun until Saturday next. But when it is begun, it will be prosecuted determinedly. To guard against possible resistance from the keepers of the stands, an ample force of policemen will accompany the officers of the bureau.

Mr. Hart made the first move yesterday in fulfilment of the purpose of the bureau to clear the streets below Canal street of permanent encumbrances. Inspectors Bryce and Bryce and Mooney to obtain a truck, go with it to New Chambers street, seize every vehicle that was uncared for by the owner, and have it fastened to the tail of the truck and taken to the public yard at the foot of Gansevoort street. The inspectors entered New Chambers street at Chatham, and soon discovered a rich prize in a dilapidated wagon and two rickety trucks. Inquiry was made for an owner, but none was found. Then they were lashed one to the other behind the inspectors' truck, and the jingling caravan moved on. But the alarm had spread. As far as the eye could view down the street there was a hubbub. Horses of sorry aspect were produced from rear yard stables and hitched to vehicles that had rotted and rusted at the curbstone for months. Then the rattling vehicles were driven out of the inspectors' way. Some of the more zealous residents of the street determined to thwart the inspectors in every way, and they unscrewed the nuts securing the wheels of two wagons whose owners have been lost to their former neighbors of late. When the inspectors reached the wagons, they were brought to a stand still. Their truck was not large enough to carry off the wagons, and the unscrewed wheels of the wagons made it impossible to drag them. So they were abandoned for the moment, the inspectors resolving to return for them this morning with a sufficiently capacious truck.

Shoe-wae-cae-mettes Winning.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 28.—The four-oared race in the open-to-all regatta, which the umpire yesterday decided should be rowed over on account of the fouling of the Shoe-wae-cae-mettes by the Wyandottes, was pulled this morning, the Shoe-wae-cae-mettes and Wyandottes participating. The Excelsior four, who were first over the line in yesterday's trial, refused to pull, saying that the umpire's decision was unfair. The race was won easily by the Shoe-wae-cae-mettes in 7:56, distance one mile and a half, with the current.

He Got a Breakfast.

LOWVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 28.—A youth entered D. Dunsmore's kitchen and asked the servant whether breakfast was ready. She answered yes, and he walked into the dining room, sat down with the family, and ate a hearty meal. The girl took him to be some friend of the family, while the family supposed he was the servant girl's friend. He proved to be a tramp.
