ONE MURDERER'S CAREER.

ENDING IT YESTERDAY ON THE GALLOWS WITH "COLORADO BILL."

Born in the Choctaw Nation; Studying Medicine in Yale; Surgeon on Pacific Coast Steamships; At the Earthquake in Arica; Practising Medicine in Indian Territory.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 29.—Henri Stewart and William Elliot were hanged in the Court House yard at Fort Smith to-day, for murders committed in the Indian Territory. Stewart was convicted of the murder of Dr. Jones at Caddo, Indian Territory, on Aug. 9, 1878, and Elliot, alias "Colorado Bill," whose real name is said to be Wm. E. Wilder, of the murder of Mr. Cunningham at Muscogee. The hanging was conducted privately, although crowds of people assembled near the Court House to get a glimpse of the awful spectacle. The gallows from which the doomed men were hanged has a remarkable history, as, previous to these two, twenty-five murderers have been launched from it into eternity. Stewart and Elliot were in the prime of manhood, and took their fate very coolly. They were sentenced by Judge Parker, and when he asked Stewart whether he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him, the condemned man said he had nothing to say. Elliot said: "I have nothing to say, Judge, but if it was to do over, I would do the same thing again!"

The circumstances of the murder of Dr. Jones by Henri Stewart, as testified to by witnesses at the trial, are as follows: As Dr. Jones was walking up and down the railroad platform at Caddo, waiting for the Post Office to open, Henri and Wiley Stewart, cousins, rode up on horseback. Wiley, who was somewhat intoxicated, began cursing Jones, charging him with informing on Henri and himself for introducing whiskey into the Territory. Jones made some reply, which in the confusion was not understood by any of the witnesses, and Henri raised his revolver and fired on Jones, the shot taking effect in Jones's hand. Wiley immediately drew his shotgun, and lodged a whole load of buckshot in the Doctor's neck, and he fell dead. At the report of the gun his horse jumped and threw Wiley to the ground, but he caught and mounted his horse, and the two rode off, making a circuit around the town. Being reinforced by a desperado known as "Texas Dick," they came back to within forty or fifty yards of the scene of the murder, brandished their weapons, and defied the whole crowd to attempt their arrest. They then rode off in a westerly direction. Soon afterward an official of the Chickasaw Nation gathered a posse, followed, and coming upon them the next day, a fight ensued, in which one of the horses of the Stewarts was killed. The party, however, successfully resisted the officers and escaped. That night a horse was stolen in the neighborhood, and the same horse was afterward traced to Vinita, where Henri had sold it and then taken the train for Missouri. Wiley has never been apprehended. Henri went to Alba, Jasper County, Mo., where his family resided, and was soon afterward arrested, tried, and convicted of murder. The trial took place at the May term of the United States Court, and he was sentenced to be hanged on Aug. 29. His relatives and friends went to work to secure a pardon or commutation of sentence. They obtained the signatures of eight members of the jury which convicted him to a petition to the President for his unconditional pardon. The President, however, refused to interfere.

In an interview with THE SUN's correspondent Henri denied participating in the murder. He said he saw Wiley at the platform talking with Dr. Jones, and went there to get him to come away; that he was behind Wiley when he fired his pistol, and fired it into the ground to attract Wiley's attention, thinking that at the crack of the pistol Wiley would wheel his horse and then he could get him to ride away. He acknowledges that he accompanied Wiley in his flight, defied the crowd that had assembled about Jones's body after the murder, and that he resisted the Chickasaw officers who pursued them.

The condemned man gave to the correspondent a history of his career, which has been a remarkable one. He said he was born in Mayhew, Choctaw Nation, on Oct. 23, 1848. He was the youngest of four, the issue of a marriage between Charles F. Stewart, of Scottish parents, and Tryphenia Woll, one-eighth degree Choctaw blood, springing from the Fulsom family of Choctaws. His mother died in the spring of 1849, and his father afterward married Miss Juliet State, a missionary at Fort Towson, I. T. The living issue of this latter marriage are Arthur T. and Alice E. Stewart. The former is in business at Topeka and Atchison, Kansas, and the latter is living with her mother at Manhattan, Kansas. After his father's death, in 1855, his stepmother moved with the children to Connecticut, near Hartford, and Henri was placed in school with the ultimate object of being educated for the medical profession, which course was pursued at Hartford and completed in the medical department of Yale at New Haven. At the early age of 19 he obtained a position as ship surgeon on board the Santiago de Cuba, plying between New Orleans and Aspinwall. He was afterward transferred to the Oregonian of the "opposition line," running between Panama and San Francisco, continuing in that capacity until the spring of 1868, when he obtained a similar position with the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, then running a line of steamers between Panama and Valparaiso. His first few months were spent on the through line of steamers, which only stopped at Callao, Peru. Wishing to see more of the country of the Pacific coast of South America, he obtained a transfer to the "intermediate line," running between the same ports, but calling at all the seaport towns, and going up the principal rivers.

"While with this company," he continued, "my time was about equally divided between duty on sea and visiting the towns far in the interior of the South American republics. On one occasion I visited Sorata, beyond Lake Puna, and on my return to Arica, on the southern coast of Peru, I arrived in time to narrowly escape being crushed to death by falling buildings in the terrible earthquake of Aug. 13, 1868. Many people were killed on that occasion, among the number Capt. Doty of the United States steamship lying in that port. His wife was in the hotel, while he was playing billiards on the opposite side of the street. When the first shock was felt they both rushed out to meet each other, but were overtaken by the falling buildings, and buried in the ruins only a few feet apart. His ship was dashed to pieces in the harbor. Other vessels were washed ashore, among the number the United States ship Wateree, which was lifted bodily by the great tidal wave and carried over 1,000 yards north of the city, and landed on the plain. Soon after this I went to Valparaiso, and resumed my old position, continuing until the steamship Magellan started, in the fall of 1869, for Northampton, England, upon which vessel I took passage. That fine steamer's fate was to run upon a rock near the eastern entrance of the Strait of Magelan, and become a total wreck, but as we were not far from the main land all hands were saved, and in a few weeks I was on my way to Rio Janeiro. I remained on the Atlantic coast of South America long enough to visit all the towns as far north as Clara. I then went to the West Indies and visited many points there, among the different islands, on a vessel engaged in carrying merchandise to the Zaphiras, a business that was to me financially successful.

"In June, 1870, I returned to Hartford, but remained there a few days only. Then I went to New York and sailed on a vessel bound for Genoa, Italy, from which point I travelled north through Germany, and returned to New York again on Jan. 1, 1871. In four days more I was in Manhattan, Kansas, where my mother, brother, and sister had moved to. I remained there that year, and while there united with the Congregational Church. In the fall of 1872 I located in Kansas City, where I remained until March, 1873. Then I went to Oswego, Kansas, and while there married the widow of the late J. W. Gregg, an extensive cattle dealer of Illinois. In June, 1874, I moved to the Choctaw Nation, within thirty miles of where I was born, where I remained up to the time of the crime for which I stand convicted, with the exception of nine months spent in Texas after my family moved away. My wife moved to Alba, Jasper County, Mo., in May, 1877, where she still lives. I have no children; two were born to us, but both are dead. I have a sister living near Nashville, Tenn., and one at Holyoke, Mass. I practised medicine while living in the nation. I deny the circulated reports that I was led a wild and reckless life since coming West, and that I was one of the notorious Sam Bass's gang. I admit that I have introduced liquors into the Indian country contrary to law. I have been arrested three times on this charge, and escaped from the officers each time. Twice I successfully resisted the officers with a shotgun. This is the extent of my reckless career. The liquor I introduced into the country was for use in my practice as a physician."

John Sherman Defending his Appointments.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 29.—John Sherman said to a reporter of the Commercial in regard to the charges published that he had appointed Confederate soldiers and his own relations to office, that the charges were false. As for carriages and forage, he said he was able to pay for his own carriage and furnish his own forage. He declared emphatically that he had never appointed a relative of his, either by blood or marriage, to office since he entered public life. As to Confederates, he believed in appointing good Republicans, even if he had served in the Confederate army. He should certainly appoint them in preference to Confederate Democrats. No Union soldier had been discharged by him except for good cause shown upon the record, or for the lack of an appropriation.

Army Officers Unwilling to be Retired.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—It has been generally understood for some time that the de facto President intended in September to retire all officers in the army over 62. This would have included Adjutant-General Townsend, Quartermaster-General Meigs, and Paymaster-General Alvord. This proposed change has brought about an unusually eager competition for the places, but it seems that the de facto President is not inclined to retire these gentlemen against their wishes, and not a single officer eligible for the retired list is willing to be retired. So far there is a prospect for a time of this eager contest of claimants being set at rest.

THE ONEIDA COMMUNITY.

John H. Noyes's Message on the Abandonment of Complex Marriages.

From the American Socialist (Official Organ).

I hardly need remind the Community that we have always claimed freedom of conscience to change our social practices, and have repeatedly offered to abandon the offensive part of our system of Communism if so required by public opinion. We have lately pledged ourselves in our publications loyally to obey the new legislation which may be instituted against us. Many of you will remember that I have frequently said within the last year that I did not consider our present social arrangements essential parts of our profession as Christian Communists, and that we shall probably have to recede from them sooner or later. I think the time has come for us to act on these principles of freedom, and I offer for your consideration the following modifications of our practical platform:

I propose:

1. That we give up the practice of complex marriages, not as renouncing belief in the principles and prospective finality of that institution, but in deference to the public sentiment which is evidently rising against it.

2. That we place ourselves, not on the platform of the Shakers, on the one hand, nor of the world, on the other, but on Paul's platform, which allows marriage, but prefers celibacy.

To carry out this change it will be necessary, first of all, that we should go into a new and earnest study of the 7th chapter of 1 Corinthians, in which Paul fully defines his position, and also that of the Lord Jesus Christ, in regard to the sexual relations proper for the Church in the presence of worldly institutions.

If you accept these modifications the community will consist of two distinct classes—the married and the celibates—both legitimate, but the last preferred.

What will remain of our Communism after these modifications may be defined thus:

1. We shall hold our property and businesses in common, as now;

2. We shall live together in a common household and eat at a common table, as now;

3. We shall have a common children's department, as now;

4. We shall have our daily evening meetings, and all of our present means of moral and spiritual improvement.

Surely, here is Communism enough to hold us together and inspire us with heroism for a new career. With the breeze of general good will in our favor, which even Prof. Mears has promised us on the condition of our giving up the "immoral features" of our system, what new wonders of success may we not hope for in the years to come!

For my part, I think we have great reason to be thankful for the toleration which has so long been accorded to our audacious experiment. Especially are we indebted to the churches and people of our immediate neighborhood for kindness and protection. It will be a good and graceful thing for us to relieve them at last of the burden of our unpopularity, and show the world that Christian Communism has self-control and flexibility enough to live and flourish without complex marriage. J. H. NOYES.

The above message was considered by the Oneida Community in full assembly Aug. 26, and its propositions accepted; and it is to be understood that from the present date the Community will consist of two classes of members, namely, celibates, or those who prefer a life of sexual abstinence, and the married, who practise only the sexual freedom which strict monogamists allows. The community will now look for the sympathy and encouragement which have been so liberally promised in case this change should ever be made.

Facts about Peaches.

In Delaware, the past few days have been very busy ones. Good fruit is high at home, eighty cents being the average price per basket. Many country growers complain that the prices are so low in New York that the expense of picking, packing, freight, and commissions are barely paid. A speculator went to Felton last week, bought 80,000 baskets for $40,000, and shipped them to Cincinnati. One grower in Felton picked 800 baskets of good fruit from one tree, and is looking for 500 baskets more. The peach basket trade is immense, and in some districts the stock is exhausted, and prices have advanced from 8 to 4 thousand. One factory in Smyrna turns out five thousand a day. The canning factories are running night and day. The Milford and Frederica employ over 1,000 hands; the great Dover factory 200 hands. It costs $236 to ship a car load of peaches to New York from the lower part of Delaware.

An Indian Horse Thief Shot.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—A telegram from Agent Reiter, at the Crow agency, Montana, says: "On the 23d inst. seven civilians came upon the reservation, about forty miles from the agency, and arrested a Gros-Ventre Indian, who was on his way to the agency, charged him with stealing a horse. After taking him about 200 yards they shot and killed him, and then rode away."

Insurance.

ESTABLISHED 1787.—KNICKERBOCKER FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK, office 64 Wall st., New York, Aug. 29, 1879.—With the views to contradict the statements in some of this morning's papers, I would advise the public that the Knickerbocker Fire Ins. Co. has recently received a certificate from the Superintendent of Insurance that he found the condition of the company sound and its capital unimpaired. This company has not, nor does it intend, to discontinue business. PETER V. KING, President.

Financial.

LONG ISLAND CITY BONDS.—Interest on Long Island City bonds falling due Sept. 1, 1879, will be paid upon presentation of the coupons at the Marine National Bank, New York city, on and after that date. JOHN R. WOO
