OUTLAY ON THE BIG BRIDGE.

COMPTROLLER STEINMETZ DEMANDING PAY FOR AN ENGINEER.

Mr. Kingsley Styling the Engineer's Bill the Most Outrageous he Ever Saw—Mr. Steinmetz Averring that the Great Structure Could have been Built for $7,000,000.

The special meeting of the trustees of the East River Bridge, yesterday, was attended by the President, Henry C. Murphy, the Vice-President, Wm. C. Kingsley, and J. S. T. Stranahan, William Marshall, Gen. Henry W. Slocum, John T. Agnew, J. G. Davies, Comptroller W. G. Steinmetz, James M. Motley, William Taylor, Herman Uhl, A. W. Humphreys, A. C. Barnes, and Robert B. Roosevelt. A resolution was passed that the route of the New York and Brooklyn Bridge through the city of New York between Rose and North William streets be laid out 140 feet in width by taking 70 feet on either side of the centre line as now located, and that a map of such altered location, with proper certificates, be filed in the office of the Register in New York.

President Murphy explained that the safety line on each side of the bridge approach has been extended to twenty feet beyond the floor line to save splintering of the granite in case of fire. This action was taken some time ago, and was coupled with the authorization to the trustees to make the necessary purchases. There having been a failure to agree on the price of two lots between Rose and North William streets, it became necessary to take the action contemplated in a resolution to condemn the property. The requisite map was signed by two-thirds of the trustees.

President Murphy reported for approval the action of the Executive Committee in awarding $400 to the family of Patrick Murphy, who was killed in July last, and $250 to E. W. Stewart, a carpenter, who, in falling from an arch centre in the masonry on the New York side, in July last, broke his shoulder, collar, and breast bones, so that, although he has recovered from the fractures, he is crippled by the paralysis of his arm. The Executive Committee had also voted $100 to two young ladies whose dresses were ruined by concrete, which was dumped by accident upon them as they were passing under the work. The action of the Committee was approved.

Comptroller Steinmetz desired to make a personal explanation in connection with the refusal of the Trustees to reimburse him for $600 which he had paid to Engineer Hill to testify as an expert in the recent investigations concerning the engineers, conducted by the committee of which the Comptroller was Chairman. He paid the bill when it was presented, and then forwarded it to the Trustees, who unanimously refused to repay him the money. Vice-President Kingsley saying that it was the most outrageous bill ever presented, as Mr. Hill was engaged by Mr. Steinmetz, without any authority, in an attempt to prove that the engineers were dishonest. Mr. Steinmetz said yesterday that the committee of which he was Chairman heeded expert testimony, and he got Mr. Hill to help present the facts. Mr. Hill charged $600 for three months work, and the bill was not unreasonable.

"I maintain to-day," said Mr. Steinmetz, "that the specifications were not drawn in the interest of the bridge, and the proof of it is, that at the last minute they were amended by a suggestion from Mayor Cooper, which exactly met one of their defects. So Mayor Cooper was taken as authority where my engineer and myself were taken as not being competent. Those specifications to-day permit the engineer to make alterations at an expense of $500,000 without any plans. Still I maintain that if you were going to vote away half a million of dollars on a contract that the specifications should be true. If you voted that sum away so freely, why should you object to paying the small bill of an expert. This bridge should have been built for seven millions. It will cost from nine millions before the work is finished. I only wish that the taxpayers had had the benefit of such rigid economy from the time the bridge was started as in the instance of this bill. The same gentleman (Mr. Kingsley) who opposed this bill voted himself 15 per cent. on the cost of the structure until the taxpayers made him stop. There were experts for the bridge, and there should have been expert testimony in the investigation to meet that which was given in the bridge's interest. I say that I think that bill ought to be paid, and that is all I have to say."

On Mr. Stranahan's motion the Board adjourned.

WESTCHESTER DEMOCRATS.

One Orderly Convention in Tarrytown—S. W. Johnson for Senator.

Westchester and Rockland Counties had, yesterday, a remarkable Democratic Convention—remarkable because it was quiet. It was called to nominate a candidate for Senator of the Twelfth District, and Lawrence's Hall, in Tarrytown, was designated as the place for the delegates to assemble in. The disturbance at a similar Convention in Nyack two years ago, when ex-Alderman Purroy, excited in a discussion, rushed across the floor to where Delegate Jones stood, and damaged Delegate Jones's jaw with his fist, was remembered by many, and there was a vague impression that yesterday's Convention would not be thoroughly harmonious. But the cooler-headed politicians were confident that the Convention would be what it was, and they gave as a reason that, by the new apportionment, the "heelers" from the annexed district, which was then in the Twelfth Senate District, had been left out in the cold. Putnam County had also been taken off, and the complications were not so puzzling.

Five delegates from Rockland County crossed from Nyack to Tarrytown early, and waited in the hotels near the depot for the arrival of the fifteen delegates from Westchester County. At noon time all had arrived. After a few visits to a place where an active young man in his shirt sleeves stood behind a long counter very well with some sticky liquid, the delegates walked across the street to Lawrence's Hall. On the floor was a layer of sawdust. It was intended to absorb tobacco juice, and not what naturally follows a hand-to-hand encounter. Benches lined the sides and weak-legged chairs were placed in two rows. Two wires directly under a tear of the cracked ceiling that was held in place by narrow slats. A rusty billiard cloth covered the Chairman's table. Outsiders were in the majority, but they were orderly. Among them were several Wall street brokers from New Rochelle and Rye, and several candidates for county offices. Delegates were whispered to for the last time and then Jacob Odell, as Chairman of the Convention two years ago, called the Convention to order by rapping with a gavel that had had its edges damaged by being used as a faucet mallet. The routine business of electing Lawyer W. H. Pemberton as Chairman, an honor, he said, that was "unexpected," and calling the roll of the delegates was quickly finished.

On an informal ballot, A. E. Suffern of Rockland County, Col. S. W. Johnson of Rye, and Col. Richard Lathers of New Rochelle were nominated. On seeing that Col. Johnson was the favorite, the Rockland County delegates withdrew the name of their candidate, and on the formal ballot voted for Col. Johnson. Sixteen delegates voted for Col. Johnson and four for Col. Lathers, and then the nomination of Col. Johnson was made unanimous. Delegates Miller, Myers, and Couch were appointed to conduct the Colonel to the platform, and they went across the street to find him. On entering the hall he was cheered, and after he had delivered his speech he was cheered again, and then he invited the delegates to dinner.

Judge Robertson is spoken of as the Republican candidate who will probably be Col. Johnson's opponent, but the Democratic leaders say that with Putnam County and the annexed district, which gave him majorities two years ago, out of the way, he cannot carry the district.

REPRESENTATION DEMANDED.

German Democrats in Brooklyn Claiming Certain Rights in the Party.

For twenty years an organization, started by conspicuous German citizens of Brooklyn, and known as the German Democratic General Committee, being composed of delegates from the different ward clubs, adhered to the regular Democratic organization of Kings County. Last fall this organization was dissolved, because of the treatment its members received from the party leaders. One portion was afterward organized into the Independent German Citizens' club. Another portion of the old organization has recently been formed into a Robinson and Potter Campaign Club, which has resolved, under no circumstances, to meddle in county or city matters. Another organization similar to the old General Committee has just been started in Williamsburgh, comprising about 40 of the active German politicians in that part of Brooklyn.

At a meeting of this organization yesterday afternoon resolutions were passed which, in effect, declare that although these committee men have been regular Democrats, and will do their best to help elect the regular Democratic ticket, yet they have no faith in the former disregard of their rights as the Democratic leaders. Believing that, although they are a minority in the county, if the party does not recognize German voters hold the balance of power let their candidate alone this fall, in the coming Presidential election they will have a Democrat to insist upon their rights, and to award no ticket as the regular Democratic ticket which does not contain the names of some of their candidates, proposed by them, both for the county and the city tickets.

Capt. Bull Discharged.

Capt. W. H. Bull, the Englishman who was arrested on police suspicion of having taken $18,000 worth of diamonds and English bank notes from the apartments of Dr. Norman C. Mcleod on Oct. 10, was formally discharged in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday. There was no case against him, and he showed a clear alibi. Dr. Mcleod was present, and said that he was sorry Capt. Bull was arrested, as he was satisfied of his innocence. He also said, in regard to the bank notes which had been stolen, that their payment had been stopped at the Bank of England.

EUGENE M. AMANTON'S WIFE.

The Curious Application a French Husband has Made to the Courts.

Judge Barrett granted a writ of habeas corpus, on Friday last, upon the application of Eugene M. Amanton, requiring Henry B. Livingston to produce in court Mrs. Elise Boitaud Amanton, wife of the applicant, who, it was charged, was illegally kept in restraint in an unknown place by the said Livingston. The writ was made returnable yesterday, but was without effect, as service of the writ upon Mr. Livingston could not be effected. Therefore Mr. Louis Mathot, attorney for the applicant, procured a new writ, made returnable on Friday next, and an officer was sent to the country seat of Mr. H. B. Livingston, in Strasburg, Dutchess County, to effect service upon him there, the understanding being that he could not be found in his city mansion at 17 Washington square.

The story of the husband, Amanton, as told by his lawyer, M. Mathot, is as follows:

"Mrs. Amanton was, in 1876, employed as chambermaid by Mr. Johnston Livingston—uncle of Henry B. Livingston—who was then, and I believe is yet, a resident of Paris. Mr. Henry B. Livingston was over there in 1877, with his wife, who expected shortly to become a mother, and, in anticipation of the necessity for a nurse, he engaged Elise B. Amanton to enter his service in that capacity, and she travelled from Paris with the family. In due time Mrs. Livingston's expectations were realized, in Dieppe, I believe. At all events, Dieppe was the place whence Elise wrote letters to her husband, father, and brother, which are now in the hands of the husband. She wrote asking his consent to her coming with the Livingston family to the United States, and he readily assented, because he contemplated coming to this country, and he requested her to be certain to inform him where he could find her in New York upon his arrival, which she promised to do. Several amicable letters passed between them, accepting the necessity for a temporary separation, but looking to a reunion at no distant day.

"But at the same time the wife wrote to her relatives that she was very happy with her new employer, and did not care about returning to her husband, whom she characterized as 'a lazy fellow,' which is not true, for he is a sober, industrious mechanic, now employed in Noel's glass factory in South Fifth avenue. From the time those letters passed between the husband and the wife, in September, 1877, he has been unable to hear anything further of her or from her. He wrote repeated requests for information, but without any result. He was assured, however, that Elise had come over to this country with Mr. Livingston. That Mr. Livingston denied, telling him that Elise took her departure at Dieppe, and had returned to Paris.

"Mr. Amanton sought the Prefect of Police in Paris, and after the careful and thorough inquiry practicable to the Parisian police, became satisfied that she had not returned to Paris. Then he sought her in Dieppe and in Havre and elsewhere, and at length became satisfied that she had come to New York. So, six months ago or thereabouts, he followed her to this city. Meantime—about a year ago, I understand—Mr. H. B. Livingston became a widower. In response to Mr. Amanton's letters of inquiry to him, that gentleman assured him that Elise B. Amanton had not come from Dieppe with him, but that he had brought in her stead an unmarried woman named Clemence Bourg, who had since returned to her parents in Ferte la Gauche, Seine et Marne. In a subsequent letter Mr. Livingston said that he had left for inspection in the office of the French Consul-General in this city a certificate of the Transatlantic Steamship Company, that there was one Clemence Bourg shipped back to France in the steamship Canada, bound for France, on the 19th of February, 1878.

"Still Mr. Amanton had a conviction that his wife was in this country, and that Mr. Livingston knew where. He tried repeatedly to make personal search for her, but at Mr. Livingston's city mansion and at his country seat in Dutchess County, but no was as often met at the door with a rebuff, and at length he appealed to the courts."

Just the Man they Wanted.

Representatives of Jordan L. Mott & Co., Archer, Pancoast & Co., Wasfelaer & Duyster, E. P. Gleason & Co., Miller & Coates, and other firms, sat in the Tombs Police Court yesterday, and joked each other on being victims of the same simple game.

By the side of a policeman was a weazen-faced, flashily-dressed young man, with hair parted in the middle and much jewelry about him. In May last this young man called on Jordan L. Mott, and introduced himself as the son of Thomas Day, a wealthy gasfitter in San Francisco, whose acquaintance Mr. Mott had made while in that city. He said that he was in New York on business for his father, that he wished to telegraph for a remittance of money, and that he was compelled to request a small loan. Mr. Mott advanced him $20. The young man made several other visits, and on the same representation borrowed money. His victims became suspicious, and other firms in the trade were notified of his operations. Mr. Mott in the mean time having ascertained from his San Francisco acquaintance that the young stranger was an impostor.

Yesterday the bogus Mr. Day called on Wasfelaer & Duyster of Beekman street, and said with perfect assurance: "I am Thomas Day, Jr., of San Francisco."

"Just the man we want," replied a member of the firm, clutching the young man by the lapel of his coat.

Justice Otterbourg held the prisoner for trial.

He Leeb's Perplexities.

Ho Leeb keeps a laundry in Hester street. A strip of paper pasted on the wall informs all customers that no linen will be returned except on the presentation of a check that they take when they leave their linen to be laundered.

Mrs. Cohen of Orchard street carried two of her husband's shirts to Ho Leeb's laundry, and after she got home her babe swallowed the paper check. Yesterday she went to get the shirts. She does not speak English, but Ho Leeb does speak Chinese. She pointed to a shirt and held up two fingers. Ho Leeb, who does not speak English, pointed inquiringly to one of his cheeks. Mrs. Cohen said "baby." Ho Leeb looked confused, showed a chair toward his customer, and pointed to the check—meaning that she should wait for somebody to come along who could supply the missing link in their efforts at communication. Mrs. Cohen did not understand this. She became angry and called in a policeman, who arrested the Chinaman.

Lee Yong, who has learned to speak English, explained the case to Justice Morgan, and Ho Leeb was discharged. He Leeb paid $10 to a lawyer, and his interpreter cost him $2. Mrs. Cohen got the shirts without paying for doing them up. Ho Leeb has his opinion of American institutions.

The Haslan-Courtney Race.

MAYVILLE, N. Y., Oct. 13.—The arrivals, confined mainly to the sporting fraternity, report little or no betting on the Haslan-Courtney race. An offer of $5,000 to $1,500 on Haslan found ready takers, and was promptly withdrawn. The men took single practice pulls in spirit of the rough water. The weather is colder. There is little perceptible difference in the condition of the men, although the Haslan party still claim that their man is out of condition. The arrangements for the accommodation of the crowds are progressing favorably. The course was buoyed to-day. A slight fall is reported in Courtney's stock.
