SHOT DOWN AT HIS DOOR.

A MYSTERIOUS TRAGEDY IN PATERSON ON TUESDAY NIGHT.

Old Joseph Fuchs, a Supposed Miser, Found Dead—Neighbors who Probably Saw a Murder Committed without Knowing It.

In a little, old, red one-story house at 23 Ward street, Paterson, for the past five years lived an old man named Joseph Fuchs. He was a scissors grinder and saw filer by occupation, going out in the morning and gathering up the implements from his customers and sharpening them in the room where he lived. The neighbors could hear him at work until late at night, filing and grinding away. He lived all alone, and, although constantly having work, he never seemed to have any money to buy the ordinary necessaries of life. He slept on a box, on which was spread the remnants of what was once a blanket. He cooked his own meals in the room where he worked and slept. The floor was strewn with old rags, bits of metal and rubbish, like a junk shop. Joseph Fuchs was a Saxon by birth. He was reticent and taciturn, and the children shunned him. He was looked upon as a hermit and a miser, for, despite his appearance of poverty, it was believed that he had plenty of money. Children frequently reported that they had looked in through the windows and seen him counting over many pieces of silver.

Some weeks ago, a fellow countryman of Fuchs's named John Uster of 10 Division street loaned Fuchs a monkey wrench. Yesterday morning Uster wanted to use this wrench, and he went to Fuchs's house for it. Knocking at the door, he received no response. He knocked again, and the door rattled, showing that it was not locked. Uster tried to open it, but there was some obstacle that prevented, and it took considerable force to push it open far enough for him to get his head in and look around. To his consternation he saw the dead body of Fuchs lying on the floor against the door with his face covered with blood, and froth on his lips. Uster alarmed the neighbors, who said they had better not touch the body until the police came, and so Mr. Uster went to the police station. A policeman went immediately to the house, and as it was apparent that it was a case of either murder or suicide, Coroner Hurd was sent for.

The Coroner found that the cause of death was a pistol shot. The bullet had entered the left breast, passing through the lungs, and lodging in the back bone. Death, the Coroner said, must have been instantaneous, from such an injury. That it was not a case of suicide was inferred from the fact that there was no weapon near, as there must have been had Fuchs shot himself dead on the spot. The body lay against the only door of the house. Uster was at first arrested, but was soon after discharged, as it was proved that he had been at home all the night before, after 6 o'clock. He says the last time he saw Fuchs was about a week ago, when he (Fuchs) came to borrow a quarter to buy something to eat. Uster did not have the money. Uster had often loaned Fuchs money to buy food.

Inquiry among the neighbors elicited the fact that Miss Emily Swartz and her sister and mother, the family of a German minister living opposite Fuchs's house, heard four pistol shots just before 11 o'clock on Tuesday night, and, looking out, saw three men running up the street as fast as they could go. They say that Fuchs and the other men were having a quarrel, and one of them yelled out, "You come here and I will shoot you." A moment later the shots were fired. They did not think any harm had been done, and did not say anything about it outside of the family.

Miss Mamie Chiswell, a teacher in one of the public schools, says she heard the first two shots, and looking out could see plainly what was going on in the brilliant moonlight. There was a man quarrelling with Fuchs, who stood in the doorway of his own house. While she was looking the man outside drew a revolver and fired two shots at Fuchs, and then ran away. The door was slammed shut at the same time, so that Miss Chiswell supposed that Fuchs had escaped injury. The door was probably slammed shut by Fuchs falling against it after he got inside. Several other neighbors testify to having seen and heard about the same things, although the majority say that they saw three men, and not one, running away from the house after the shooting. All supposed that no one had been hurt. Street fights are frequent in that part of the city.

Coroner Hurd impanelled a jury, and the inquest is to be held this morning.

The police have as yet discovered no clue whatever to the murderer or murderers. The Coroner could find no money in Fuchs's house. There were nine cents in a leathern purse in the pocket of the dead man.

EUROPEAN CONTROL IN EGYPT.

Austrian Opposition that May Compromise the Acts of England and France.

PARIS, Oct. 29.—The Telegraphe (newspaper) says: "The mission at Vienna of Messrs. Baring and De Blégnieres, the recently appointed comptrollers of Egyptian finances, has failed. The failure may seriously compromise the acts of France and England in Egypt. Thus the first result of the recent Austro-German alliance is opposition to the settlement of Egyptian affairs. The resistance of Turkey to a reasonable arrangement of the Greek question is attributable to the same cause."

The object of the mission of Messrs. Baring and De Blégnieres at Vienna was to induce Austria to accept the commission of control in Egypt. Austria insists that the commission's operations must be subordinated to the prior claims of creditors who hold mortgages on the estates surrended by the Khedive's family to guarantee the recent Rothschild loan. As the Rothschild loan was negotiated with the aid of the French and English Governments, Austria's opposition on this point really affects the whole question of European interference in Egypt.

A Farmer's Fight with Footpads.

OSWEGO, Oct. 28.—Abram Mover, a farmer of Schroeppel, drew a load of wheat to Fulton, sold it for cash, and in the evening started for home, a distance of about ten miles. On the way he overtook a man and woman trudging along, who solicited a ride. Mr. Mover stopped his team and they got in, the woman taking a seat beside him and the man standing up in the rear part of the wagon. They had not proceeded far before the woman threw her arm around Mr. Mover and thrust her hand into his trousers pocket. It flashed across him that he was beset by footpads and he struck the woman, who proved to be a man disguised, a blow which knocked her out of the wagon. Instantly he received a blow from the other one which knocked him out. The team ran away, and they both set upon him, beat him and took his pocketbook, after which they threw him down a steep bank. The team was stopped by men who recognized it, and who found Mr. Mover stunned, badly hurt, and covered with the blood of his wounds.

A Black Prophetess in Bladen County, N. C.

LUMBERTON, N. C., Oct. 25.—Fannie Baker, a negro woman of 65, was arrested in Bladen County today on a charge of some trifling criminal offence. It was afterward ascertained that she is at the head of a band of forty or fifty of the most respectable colored people in the county, who believe that she is possessed of supernatural powers. She claims to have the keys to hell and heaven, and when any of her band commits any act that displeases her, she threatens them with eternal destruction. They unanimous believe in her power to do what she threatens, and in this way she exerts a powerful influence over her followers. They worship twice a week, and on Fridays are forbidden to speak to any one. She made every one of the band vote for Zeb Vance for Governor three years ago.

Double Suicide at a Hotel.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 29.—At the Nicoll House, Oakland, at 8:30 last evening, Herbert Benton and Frances Woodward committed suicide by shooting themselves with the same pistol, the man killing himself first. It was a premeditated deed, as both had threatened to kill themselves. Nothing is known of the cause of the act.
