MURDERERS TO BE HANGED.

THE KILLING OF MISS RICHARDS AND OF OLD JOSEPH RABER.

Both Crimes Confessed—Murder to Hide a State Prison Offence—How the Facts Came Out—Murder for a Man's Life Insurance.

SYRACUSE, Nov. 13.—Myron A. Buell, convicted of the murder of Catharine Mary Richards of Plainfield, Otsego County, having been denied a new trial by the Court of Appeals, and Gov. Robinson having declined to interfere with the execution of the sentence on Friday next, has made a confession of his crime to the Rev. W. M. Hiller, who has been his steadfast friend since his trial and conviction.

On Tuesday, June 25, 1878, Catharine Mary Richards, aged 14, daughter of William Richards, was found dead in the cow barn of her father's farm at Plainville, Otsego County. Her parents were absent at the time. A seamstress was sewing in the house, and Myron A. Buell and another farm hand, named Bowen, were at work in the hop field near by. These men discovered the body of the girl in the stall of a young bull, and the report was first given out that the girl had been gored to death. Further examination showed that she had been outraged, and a mark around the neck and on the shoulder indicated that she had been choked by a ligature of some kind and forcibly held by a hand that left the impression of the thumb upon the shoulder. In the afternoon Buell had absented himself from the hop field a while, for the reason, as he told Bowen, that his rubber boots blistered his feet and he desired to change them. He was gone longer than was necessary, but when he returned he told Bowen that he had been chasing Mr. Richards's mare and colt out of the lot on the opposite side of the road from the house. When the two were returning to the house they found the young bull loose, which had usually been kept tied. After the body had been taken into the house Buell drove to West Winfield to inform Mrs. Richards and her young son of the death of the girl, and then came back to the farm. He remained about the house doing chores, assisted about the work the next day, went to the church and viewed the remains with others, and expressed great grief over the girl's death. He was known to have been very much attached to Catharine, and had often expressed great regret when she would not favor his attentions.

While sleeping with Bowen a short time before the murder Buell told Bowen that a relative had succeeded in outraging girls by choking them with a cord and then carrying out his intentions while they were partly insensible. This agreed with the theory regarding the murder of the girl after it was ascertained that she had been outraged, and it was impossible for the bull to have made the marks upon her neck and shoulder. Buell was kept under surveillance, and the Coroner's jury held him for the crime. At the time of the murder Buell was about 20 years old.

Buell says that he did commit the murder as charged, and that when he left the hop yard where he was at work he had no intention of killing the girl. He outraged his victim first, having tied a cord around her neck. Finding that he had killed her, he threw her body into an empty stable with the bull, in the belief that her parents would suppose that the bull had gored and trampled her to death.

A special term was ordered for the trial of Buell, which convened at Cooperstown on Feb. 17 of this year, Judge Murray presiding. The trial lasted until Feb. 27, at 8½ P. M., when the jury found him guilty. The following day he was sentenced to be hanged on April 18. A motion for a stay of sentence was denied. In Chambers, on March 17, Judge Murray granted a stay and writ of error to the General Term at Ithaca in May. The General Term refused a new trial and remanded the prisoner back for sentence. He was then sentenced to be hanged on Friday, Nov. 14. A motion for a new trial was argued in the Court of Appeals a few weeks ago, and was denied.

From the first discovery of the crime Buell preserved a stolidity that puzzled even his counsel, and declared his innocence in solemn terms. Sheriff Clark of Cooperstown is making all preparations for the hanging to-morrow. On Tuesday Sheriff Hill of Norwich shipped to Cooperstown the gallows used for the hanging of Felix McCann. It was erected in the jail yard to-day. No permits will be granted to see the hanging, except to the officers, jury, and others named in the statute.

TWO OF THE RABER MURDERERS.

LEBANON, Pa., Nov. 11.—Preparations for the double hanging here on Friday were begun on Tuesday. The culprits are Charles Drews and Frank Stichler, who killed old Joseph Raber, in order that Hummel, Brant, Weis, and Zechman might obtain the money on the insurance policies they held on his life. All the six men were found guilty of murder in the first degree. Zechman obtained a new trial, Weis turned State's evidence, and has not yet been sentenced. Brant and Hummel obtained writs of error. The four last named planned the murder, and hired Drews and Stichler to do the deed. Gov. Hoyt has declined to grant a reprieve.

Stichler is 21 years of age. He occupies the iron cell in which Patsida Huber was confined prior to his execution last July. The Rev. Ezekiel Light of the United Brethren Church attends to his spiritual wants. Stichler has a small dark moustache, dark blue eyes, fair skin, dark hair, and is below the medium height. He is a brave and daring young fellow of the backwoods type. He freely admits that he seized old man Raber, and, alone and unaided, threw him off the small plank bridge crossing the creek and held him under the water until he was drowned. Stichler expressed a wish to be baptized by immersion; but this afternoon he told the Lutheran correspondent that he simply desired to be sprinkled, as in the sight of God a few drops of water were as good as an entire stream. He says that he will go to the gallows bravely, and make another statement that will be the truth and which will be a startler. He has just finished a full confession, which he has given to the Lutheran correspondent. Prior to his death, he says, Mrs. George Merrill, mother of his mistress, wrote him a mysterious epistle. When she was ill Mrs. Merrill sent her to Bishop Bacon. He visited her every day for three days. Mrs. Merrill said that Cardinal McCloskey and her lawyer told her will, and that if she died they knew what to do with it. Mrs. Merrill spoke of meeting Archbishop Corrigan and Cardinal Manning while she was abroad. It was in the Church of St. George in Rome. Several were in a car near Mrs. Merrill. She said that he introduced himself as Archbishop Manning. When she was ill Mrs. Merrill sent for Bishop Bacon and for Mother Catharine (Miss Seton) of the Sisters of Mercy. She said that if she died she wanted the fact made known to Archbishop McCloskey. Among her visitors while she was ill were Bishop Bacon, six Sisters of Mercy, Vicar-General Quinn, and Father Vallois. No third person was ever present when any of these persons called.

ROBBED IN A RAILWAY CARRIAGE.

Murderous Attack by Italian Brigands on an American and his Wife.

From the Italian Press.

For the third time within two years a very lamentable event has occurred on the railway from Ala to Verona, and it is high time that the authorities should at length seriously take the matter up. On the evening of the 19th inst. three passengers changed carriages at the Ala station from the Austrian train into the direct train for North Italy. They were Mr. and Mrs. Bacon, from America, and Sig. Costantin Romiello, an engineer from Naples, who all entered the same second-class compartment. In this compartment there were already two male passengers, cleanly attired in country fashion and wearing broad rimmed hats. They were just speaking with one of the railway officials, who, it was noticed, wore the No. 7 on his uniform. They were asking him whether they had got into the right carriage, showing their tickets. On being answered in the affirmative, they took their seats, one on one side of the door, and the other on the opposite seat, but at once got up and spoke to each other rapidly and in a low voice, but in such a manner as to rouse the suspicions of the American, who at once determined to be on his guard. The Neapolitan engineer sank into one of the further corners of the coupé and prepared for a nap.

About half an hour after the train had started one of the two individuals above mentioned let down the window and leaned out of the carriage, turning the door handle as he did so. Immediately after this the two men, the one armed with a pistol and the other with a formidable knife, attacked the three other inmates of the compartment, demanding their purses and valuables and menacing them with death in case of refusal. A desperate struggle now ensued between the two desperadoes and the American and his wife, in the course of which the pistol was discharged, without, however, doing any one injury. Instead of attempting to help his fellow travellers, the engineer cowered trembling into his corner, and pulling his purse, which contained about 150 lire, out of his pocket, offered it to the robbers.

In spite of all the efforts of the American and his wife, the brigands got the upper hand, and obtained from them their travelling bag, containing thirty napoleons d'or. Without attempting to possess themselves of Mrs. Bacon's jewelry, the robbers now got out of the compartment, locking the door and placing themselves on the steps of the carriage. As the train at this time was increasing its speed, they had not the courage to jump off. From time to time they looked in at the window, threatening the inmates so that they did not venture to give an alarm. The train soon approached the hermitage of Ceraino, where the great curve of Peschantina commences; the speed began to slacken, and the robbers jumped from the carriage steps when the speed was slowest, and then ran from the line across the fields. These latter facts were witnessed by a gentleman who was in another compartment, but who had no means of giving an alarm. In their confusion the robbers had left behind them on the seat of the compartment the Neapolitan's portemonnaie, with its contents of 150 lire. This latter gentleman, when subsequently asked by the police why he had not attempted to resist the attack, after the energetic example shown him by his companions, answered: "I dare say! Fight them with that long weapon (the knife, which they pulled out)!"

The American lady showed the greatest courage, and it was to her that was due the fact that the pistol was discharged without hurting any one. The robbers held her fast, and in the struggle one of her kid gloves was torn and her skin beneath suffered a scratch—"the first gift of Italy," as she called it." Otherwise the American lady and her husband were not hurt. The two robbers spoke in the Venetian dialect. One of them was tall and dark complexioned; the other of short stature and blonde. Besides the money, the robbers carried off from the American a silver breastpin and a silver watch. A certain Francesco Pattaro, known as a smuggler of Peschantina, has been arrested under a strong suspicion of having been one of the two robbers—the one, namely, described by Mrs. Bacon as the dark-complexioned man. The prisoner, who has a bad reputation and is regarded as a dangerous character, has already been convicted a number of times for theft and violation of the laws, and had only shortly before been let out of prison when the attack on Mr. and Mrs. Bacon was made. The prisoner denied any knowledge of the affair, but was immediately recognized by Mr. and Mrs. Bacon as one of the two men. Pattaro is described as a man of tall stature and powerful build, with black hair and dark eyes. The police have orders to arrest another man who is strongly suspected of having been Pattaro's accomplice.

Thieves in Yonkers.

Sneak thieves entered Mr. R. J. Douglass's house in Warburton avenue, Yonkers, on Tuesday evening, and carried away a lot of silverware and a black silk dress, trimmed with point lace, that were kept in a second story room. That evening Mr. Douglass's daughter, Annie D. Douglass, was married to Mr. William H. Fox, and the bride received many presents. But before the festivities were ended the room in which the presents were exhibited was locked, and the thieves made no attempt to force an entrance. They took fifteen silver teaspoons, marked "R. E. D.;" twelve silver teaspoons, marked "R. E. D.;" twelve silver teaspoons, marked "R. E. D.;" twelve silver teaspoons, marked "R. E. D.;" eleven silver-plated forks, marked "R. E. D.;" one silver pickle fork, two silver-plated dessert spoons, two silver butter knives, and a gold locket containing photographs. The same evening burglars attempted to enter a house near Mr. Douglass's, but were frightened away.

Dr. Kohn's Marriage.

George R. Kohn, M. D., of Brooklyn, and Miss Mary E. Hussey of Fourth avenue and Twenty-third street, were married yesterday in the Roman Catholic Church of the Sacred Heart at Clermont and Park avenues, Brooklyn. The church was filled to overflowing. The bride wore a garnet silk velvet dress with close neck and sleeves and long train. Around her head, on which was a wreath of orange blossoms, flowed a long, gauzy, white veil, looped slightly at the waist. The bridesmaid was Miss Lizzie Rooney of Yonkers, and the groomsman was Mr. John J. McGuire of Brooklyn. After the marriage the bride and groom and their two friends were given seats at the foot of the altar stairs. Then a solemn nuptial mass was celebrated. After a reception in the bride's parents' home, the couple started for Washington.

HOW A LIFE WAS SAVED.

THE LIFE OF CHAS. S. PRENTICE SAVED BY THE USE OF WARNER'S SAFE KIDNEY AND LIVER CURE.

The following letter proves that BRIGHT'S DISEASE, in its worst form, IS CURABLE:

Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 25, 1879.

Messrs. H. H. WARNER & CO., Rochester, N. Y.

Gentlemen: Having escaped death from Bright's disease by the use of your Remedy, I feel it a duty not only to acknowledge my gratitude to you personally, but also to bring my case before the public, and have those who are suffering similarly to judge whether a medicine not prepared by the "regulars" will cure this frightful malady or not.

In the summer of 1872 I was first taken ill with symptoms which, I was informed, were those of Bright's disease. I went to Marquette, Mich., and called to my aid a physician of noted ability. After remaining a considerable time under his care, I found no improvement; on the contrary, my disease was considerably aggravated. I next placed myself in charge of one of the first physicians in Toledo, Ohio, with no better result. I was then induced to try the skill of an eminent medical man in New York, and remained under his care six months. Finding myself growing steadily weaker, with no abatement of the kidney derangement, I began to despair of ever getting well.

In the summer of 1875 my friends intended me to go abroad, thinking that the sea voyage, together with the superior skill of foreign medical men, might effect a cure. I succeeded in gaining an introduction to the celebrated Dr. Declat of Paris, and remained under his care fifteen months. He used in my case what is known as the carbolic treatment, and then every method which the most scientific men of the profession on the continent were known to employ. No improvement being apparent, the services of Dr. B., a gentleman of equal eminence, were next solicited. Seven months of careful treatment by this kind gentleman brought me to the beginning of the most aggravated symptoms of the disease. With swollen limbs, disordered liver, impaired digestion, and setting irregularities of the heart, I proceeded to Manchester, Eng., and for five months my case baffled the skill of Dr. Roberts, one of the ablest men of his profession in England, and author of a work on diseases of the kidneys. His great knowledge did not avail in my case, and, finally, despairing of any improvement, much less a cure, I returned to my native land in the belief that I must soon die.

When I reached home two physicians were summoned who, on subjecting samples of the urine to the test of heat and acid, discovered the presence of albumen in large proportion, while the microscope showed numerous casts. All this, together with the despairing look of my physicians, forced the agonizing conviction that death was inevitable. I then dismissed my medical attendants, with the intention of letting nature struggle on unaided to the end; for my confidence in the ability of medical men to cope with disordered kidneys had become, to say the least, greatly lessened. At this time I weighed myself in the presence of several friends in the wholesale grocery establishment of Emerson & Co., Toledo, O., and turned the scales at 212½ pounds, 67½ pounds more than my ordinary weight when in health; in other words, the tissues of my body were saturated with 67½ pounds, or almost 8½ gallons of water.

Finally, while listlessly lingering in pain and anguish, I was informed by a lady residing on Plymouth avenue, Rochester, N. Y., that one Charles Craig of Charlotte had discovered a remedy for Bright's Disease, with which he had cured himself and many others. I immediately repaired to his residence by the lake, and after a treatment of five wee
