IE CLEOPATRA DIAMONDS.

CIDED THAT MRS. HASCY IS NOT THE WOMAN WHO PLEDGED THEM.

s Long and Curious Suit that has Been Be-ore the Courts for Months—Mrs. Hascy Still Held, However, on a Criminal Warrant.

he suit of John Fay and Edward B. Rog-, Fulton Market fish dealers, against Mrs. io S. Hascy, alleging conspiracy to defraud a diamond transaction, which has been on l in the Supreme Court Circuit, before Judge rett, resulted yesterday in a verdict for the ndant. Mrs. Hascy and John T. Lynch, a mond broker, were charged with having federated together for the purpose of cheat-the plaintiffs out of $5,000 by inducing them dvance that sum upon diamonds claimed to orth $10,000, when their actual value was $1,500. Lynch did not appear, and he will ried separately.

he defence of Mrs. Hascy was that she was the person charged by the plaintiffs to e confederated with Lynch. A Dr. Baker fied that on the 11th of March he attended . Hascy at 78 West Twelfth street. Her sis-Mrs. Perkenpeine, testified that Mrs. Hascy at her house in Philadelphia on March 15, that on the evening of March 19 a party, uding Mrs. Hascy, attended a performance Pinafore." Mr. Ramsey of 268 West Forty-nd street, where the plaintiffs claim to have summated the transaction with Mrs. Hascy, er the name of Mary Schoonmaker, on ch 17, testified that a woman calling herself . Schoonmaker was temporarily at his house that day, and that two men called upon her. he was confident that Mrs. Hascy was not person. J. K. Collins, storekeeper at Sixth nue and Seventeenth street, testified that . Hascy was in his employ up to the time of arrest, but that she was away on a week's ation to visit her friends in Philadelphia n the 15th of March. A nephew of Mrs. ey testified that he saw her in his mother's se in Philadelphia on St. Patrick's Day. ther young man, an acquaintance of the ily, said that he saw her on the 16th of March ng at a window in her mother's house.

rs. Hascy testified that she was married in ladelphia in 1864, and that she came in that r to the city with her husband, who is now ng, though she has not lived with him for at five years. She first went into business herself here about twelve years ago. She e the names of the several places where she been employed as saleswoman before going e store of Mr. Collins, where she had been ut eighteen months. She denied positively she had ever known Mr. Lynch, and she rted that she had never had any business of kind with him.

The gentlemen, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Fay, e said that you were the lady with whom had this transaction; are they mistaken at that?" asked her counsel, Mr. Spencer. They are mistaken," she answered.

Did you ever have any diamond transaction that kind in your life?" she was next asked; her answer was an emphatic "No, sir." ed that she was never at Mr. Roussey's, West Forty-second street.

dge Barrett, in charging the jury, said that defendant conceded, by not putting in any lence to the contrary, that the plaintiffs were cauded by Lynch and a woman named oonmaker. The question of identity was, efore, the only one before the jury.

he jury, after having been out about fifteen utes, announced their verdict for the de-lant, and Judge Barrett granted an allow-e of $150 besides the costs. Mrs. Hascy fully thanked the jurors as they left their seats. hough released upon the order of arrest, she till held upon a criminal warrant.

BIG THEFTS OF COTTON.

e More Men Arrested by the Detectives of the Cotton Exchange.

etective Field of the District Attorney's e and Detectives Mooney and Boland, yes-day, arraigned before Justice Otterbourg, in Tombs Police Court, Patrick Farrell, cotton ler; Martin McNally, cotton marker; Bor-d Fallon, cotton handler; Lawrence Bowe, cman, and Henry Muller, who keeps a bar-n at Watts and Greenwich streets.

he men had been arrested by order of the Y York Cotton Exchange. Detective Field d: "President Murdoch of the New York on Exchange estimates that the cotton kers are subjected to a loss of over half a lion dollars a year by an organized system blevery. At a meeting of the Exchange it determined to employ detectives to shadow ringleaters. Farrell's business takes him all the large cotton warehouses, bonded ehouses, wharves, and other places where on is stored. When a newshipment arrives has been in the habit, for months past, of g to the places where the new cotton is re-ed. With his cotton knife he slashes open ton bale; then he cuts out a large quanti-f cotton. This he throws on the ground, merely keeps a little, which he puts in his et. McNally, who follows Farrell, picks up otton, which he puts in a bag. Fallon car-the long away.

he cotton thus picked up is taken to Law-e Bowe's junk shop, which is in the base-t under Henry Muller's liquor store, at ts and Greenwich streets. Bowe, on re-ing the cotton, handed Fallon, who gener-brought it, a piece of pasteboard, to which d drew a number of cards from an envelope, ed by Lawrence Bowe. "There, your or," said Field, "are the receipts for yes-ay's stealings. I got them from behind a r bowl last night, in Henry Muller's or store." That one day's stealings by e men amounted to $55.50. The facts these counts based on stealings," added Field, e familiar to the District Attorney, who has red me to bring these prisoners here and them committed, pending the arrest of y more, which will shortly be made."

stice Otterbourg, at the request of the Dis-Attorney, held the prisoners for trial in de-t of $2,000 bail each.

Fishing for Wallets.

ATTSBURGH, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The Knights ar held their annual conclave in this place on the st October last, and in the afternoon went on an ex-on to Montreal. Among them was Sir Knight Paul h of Plattsburch, who at a late hour retired to his in the Ottawa House, and, upon going to bed, left reeches in a chair near the middle of the room. In ockets was his wallet. At about midnight a thief eans of a high stool, reached through the transom the door and, with a fish line and short pole, fished rowers through the window and lifted the pockets e was found unclaimed recently a man was detected in tempt to rob the room of a guest in St. Lawrence Montreal. He confessed that it was he who robbed mith's room.

Search for a Missing Steamer.

ORONTO, Nov. 26.—No tidings have been re-d of the steamer Waubano. Three tugs are making etul search among the islands fringing the eastern of Georgian Bay; but owing to the rough weather were not expected to reach any port before to-day. e is great excitement in Collingwood over the prob-ate of the vessel, as all the officers and crew were ents of that town.

nay Sound, Ont., Nov. 26.—The tugs Millie Grew and ne have returned. They found no trace of the Wau-'s passengers, but picked up large quantities of kage.

THE EIGHTH AVENUE FIRE.

More than 200 Car Horses now said to have been Burned to Death.

A heavy cloud of black smoke hung over the ruins of the Eighth Avenue Horse Car Company's burned stables, at Fiftieth street, yesterday. Occasionally columns of white steam mingled with the smoke as the water from the engines still playing upon the ruins reached tongues of flame that shot up from heaps of smouldering hay and straw. On the Fiftieth street side lay the bodies of over two hundred horses. Eighth avenue and Forty-ninth and Fiftieth streets were thronged by spectators, who peered at the ruins, and, when the policemen were not looking, gathered closely around the heaps of bricks and charred timbers. Hundreds of boys climbed upon these heaps and looked over at the ruins within, often at the danger of being pushed over, and falling upon masses of smouldering grain and hay, or hot bricks. It required the vigilant efforts of an extra detail of policemen to keep the streets cleared so that traffic was possible. Workmen were busy in Forty-ninth and Fiftieth streets throwing out the bricks, some of which in falling went completely across the street and into the front yards of the Fiftieth street dwellings. For 500 feet from the avenue these dwellings showed how hot had been the fire and how narrow their escape from burning. There was hardly a house that had not broken windows. The paint was blistered in great blotches on front doors, window cases, and cornices, and within there was a strong smell of the smoke which the day before had completely filled the houses. It is estimated that these houses, or eighteen or twenty of them, are damaged from $100 to $300 each.

Three engines, "spares" as they are called, from the First, Third, and Seventh Battalions, remained—two in Forty-ninth street and one in Fiftieth street—and five or six streams of water were constantly poured upon the ruins. It will be several days, the firemen say, before the ruins will be cool enough to permit the removal of the dead horses. Mr. Wilson, the Superintendent, now believes that there were at least 260 horses burned. There were about 1,100 horses owned by the company, for they had insurance on 1,080.

"We can't tell just how many are burned," said Mr. Wilson, "for those we got out are scattered around in many different places, and I haven't got a correct count yet. There are about three hundred stabled in the Ninth Avenue Horse Car Company's stables at Ninth avenue and Fifty-fourth street, about the same number at the Sixth Avenue Company's stables, some in the Seventh Avenue Company's stable, some are with the Tenth Avenue Company, and some in livery stables. We have arranged for them wherever we could. We have carpenters at work putting up extra stalls in the stables I have named, and we will put up temporary sheds for the horses on some property owned by our company at Eighth avenue and Sixty-third street."

Mr. George Law, Jr., whose father, the President of the company, is still ill, said that there had been no meeting of the directors of the company yet.

"But we shall rebuild our stables just as soon as possible," he said. "I can't say, though, whether on the old site, where the fire occurred on our property at Sixty-third street. Of course it will take some time to come to a decision on such an important matter. Already a large number of estimates have been received from builders anxious to erect new buildings for us, but we are not ready to decide yet. No, we haven't the remotest idea how the fire originated, nor have we formed a theory. We are quite content to leave the investigation of that matter to the Fire Marshal. But I don't believe that the building was set on fire. I think the hay or straw on the fourth floor caught fire accidentally, and smouldered for some time before the flames broke out. That accounts for the rapid progress the flames made after they were discovered. It was reported last evening that three of our men were lost in the burning building, and as the three named could not be found there was some excitement. This morning, however, they turned up all right. No, I can't tell you what our losses are now. I think now that our losses are more than we thought at first. There are more horses burned than we thought, and a vast quantity of feed. When we do build we shall take extra precautions to make our buildings fireproof. We thought we had pretty safe stables as it was. The partitions upon all the floors were of brick, and were thought to be capable of stopping flames. But when such a mass of combustible matter gets burning, nothing will stop it."

The fact that 100 more horses are lost than was yesterday reported changes somewhat the estimate on the loss made in THE SUN yesterday. The horses were insured for $100 each, and so $26,000 will represent the loss there; $11,000, the amount for which the buildings were insured, is said by builders to be a very liberal estimate of their value. A prominent official in the Fire Department said that $40,000 would cover the loss on buildings. There will undoubtedly be some salvage on the hay and feed. The vast heaps of corn and oats are simply charred on the outside, and within will doubtless be found much grain unharmed. So to a less extent, probably, with the hay. Estimating the loss on buildings at $81,000, on horses $26,000, on feed, hay, &c. at $40,500 (the amount for which they were insured, and on uninsured property $15,000 is very liberal estimate), the total loss to the company will be $162,500. The total amount of insurance was given yesterday at $270,000.

At 12½ yesterday the cars on the Eighth avenue line, which stopped running entirely at 11 o'clock the day before, began their regular trips from Vesey street to Central Park. Thirty cars were sent out, with a headway of about three minutes and a half. Others will be added as the company gets its matters in shape. The offices of the company, which are in the building directly opposite the burned stables, on Eighth avenue, were not disturbed. All the cars not in use are run on the track above Fifty-ninth street. It will be some days before the company sends cars above the Park.

The injured firemen, Mount and Regan, are in Bellevue Hospital. It is feared that Mount has sustained a concussion of the spine. Regan is doing well.

Activity in the Lumber Market.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Nov. 24.—The lumber interests of this city, the third largest lumber market in the United States, are in a very flourishing condition. On Sunday, the 16th inst., no less than forty-two lumber barges, each laden with an average of 120,000 feet of lumber, were waiting for a favorable opportunity, when they could legally begin unloading their cargoes. The large manufacturers here are greatly embarrassed by the inability of the Central Vermont Railroad to furnish a sufficient number of cars.

AT HALF-MAST ON EVACUATION DAY.

Trustee Brennan Intended no Disrespect for the Anniversary.

Residents of the Sixth Ward were surprised by seeing on Evacuation Day (Nov. 25) the flags at half-mast over the four school houses in the ward. The flags were put at half-mast on the responsibility of one member of the Board of Trustees, Timothy Brennan, the Chairman, who went to each school house in the morning and ordered the janitors to half-mast the flags. The impression was somehow created that this was done as a tribute to the memory of some friend of the Chairman who never had anything to do with the public schools. That, and the erroneous impression that the public property was being used for the display, invited a good deal of remark, and stimulated one gentleman to write to THE SUN about it.

Hugh O'Neill, clerk of the Board of Trustees, said: "The flags were half-masted on account of the death of P. G. Geraghty, a trustee in this ward for at least one five years' term, some twenty-five years ago. There was a meeting of the trustees on Monday evening, but the matter was not then spoken of, for the reason that the death of Mr. Geraghty was not then known to the trustees. Mr. Brennan only learned it on Tuesday morning. It has always been the practice in this ward to put the flags on the school houses at half-mast on the occasion of the death of any trustee or teacher, or any person who was known to have formerly held either of those positions. Perhaps the only people who have any right to say how the flags shall be displayed are the teachers. The flags were paid for by the teachers. The halliards, I believe, are public property, as the trustees paid for them. Flags were first put on the school houses throughout the city in the early days of the war, and were then purchased by contributions from the teachers. Ever since then, as the flags were worn out, they were replaced by the same means."

Mr. Mullany, a teacher in Grammar School No. 23, said that Mr. Geraghty was an efficient trustee in this ward nearly twenty-five years ago. He was then a wealthy liquor dealer and a bachelor. About ten years ago he quitted the Sixth Ward, the liquor business, and bachelordom, moved up to the Nineteenth Ward, and lived there in comfortable retirement till his death.

William Wichterich's Suicide.

The body of William Wichterich was found yesterday in a small back room in the upper story of the tenement at 106 Greene street, suspended by a rope from a hook screwed into the door. In the dead man's pockets were found his naturalization papers, a few cents, and an account book, in which were scribbled many entries of indebtedness for beer. On the door, above the dead man's head, were other entries of a similar nature. He was last seen alive on Monday, when he went into his room intoxicated.

The deceased man was 64 years old. He was a dwarf, and for the past six years has worked with a gang of street sweepers. On his election day he was drunk, and he was so nearly all of the time till his death. It is said that his father was a wealthy man in Germany; that he himself was once a wealthy man, and was once burgomaster of the town in which he lived; that he lost his social position through dissipation, and was disheartened. The body will probably be buried in the Potter's field.

Wandering to his Death.

PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Isaac Lyon of this place died on Thursday, the 13th inst. He attended a "chopping bee" at James Johnson's on the afternoon of the 12th, and in the early evening started for his home. The railroad track passed within a few feet of his own door. He followed the track in the darkness, in a blinding rain storm, until the sudden rumbling of an approaching train gave him no alternative but to leap through a culvert into the brook below, where he lost his axe and hat. From this point he wandered until he reached the Lake road. He stopped at the home of Thomas Johnson and dried himself, and was urged to remain all night. This he declined to do, and, having been given a hat and a pair of boots, he set out for his home, but he lost his way. He was found on Thursday evening, at 4 o'clock, near an old deserted house, near the lake shore. He was unconscious, but life was not wholly extinct. He died five hours later.

A Hunter's Sudden and Lonely Death.

BELLEFONTAINE, Ohio, Nov. 26.—Dr. John A. Brown of this city died of heart disease while out alone hunting on Monday evening. Returning from performing a surgical operation, he hitched his team by the roadside and with his dog and gun started for a tramp through the woods. He was last seen at about 4 P. M., and the report of his gun was heard about the same time. Not returning, his wife and friends organized a search. At about midnight they found his wagon, and after a long hunt in the darkness they came upon the body about half a mile from his wagon, toward which he had evidently been making his way. He had fallen upon his face, grasping his loaded and cocked gun with both hands, and had died apparently without a struggle. His dog had remained by his side, and had worn a path around the spot in his vigilant guard over his master's body.

A Cripple Killed by a Lunatic.

PERTH, Ont., Nov. 26.—Last night Benjamin Mitchell, a young man of unsound mind, attacked a lame man named William West, at the latter's house, with an axe, striking him several blows and crushing in his skull. West lived for an hour afterward. Mitchell, who had been drinking, was arrested and lodged in jail.

Archbishop Purcell's Coadjutor.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 26.—Advices from Rome received by a prominent Catholic clergyman of this city say that the long talked of coadjutorship of this archbishopric has been settled, and that Bishop Elder of Natchez will receive the appointment, with the right of succession upon the death of Archbishop Purcell.
