THREE RAILROADS UNITED.

FORMED INTO THE UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

The Terms of the Agreement Between the Union Pacific Railroad, Kansas Pacific Railway, and Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Companies as Signed and Filed.

The articles of union and consolidation between the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Kansas Pacific Railway Company, and the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company, forming the Union Pacific Railway Company, were filed in the Department of the Interior on the 24th inst., the day they were signed. The preamble sets forth that, as under the acts of Congress of July 1, 1862, July 2, 1864, March 3, 1869, and June 20, 1874, and various amendatory acts, the three railroads may unite and consolidate their respective organizations, "the three companies, by corporate action, have resolved to unite and consolidate their respective organizations into one company." The agreement was made on the 24th inst. by the three companies, and the articles were agreed upon.

Article I. says that the three companies, "in consideration of the premises, do hereby unite, form, and consolidate their respective organizations, properties, and companies into one consolidated company, which shall succeed to, possess, and be entitled to receive from the Government of the United States, all and singular, the grants, benefits, immunities, guarantees, acts, and things to be done and performed, and be subject to the same terms, conditions, restrictions, and requirements which the aforesaid three companies respectively at the date of this consolidation are or may be entitled or subject to under the acts of Congress in that behalf, in place and substitution of said constituent companies so consolidated respectively; and the said consolidated company assumes to and for itself all of the provisions of said acts of Congress, so far as applicable, relating, or in any manner appertaining to said constituent companies, or either of them, and all of the provisions of the aforementioned acts of Congress, and each of them, so far as in their nature applicable to the company hereby formed, shall apply thereto; it being the intent of the parties hereto, and of these articles of union and consolidation, to organize the company hereby formed under the said acts of Congress, and to make the said acts of Congress the charter or constituent acts of this company as fully as if the same were incorporated herein at large."

Article II. says that the name of the consolidated company shall be the "Union Pacific Railway Company," and Article III. says: "The capital stock of the said Union Pacific Railway Company shall be $50,762,300, being the total aggregate amount of the outstanding stock of the three constituent companies, which shall be divided into shares of $100 each, and it shall be issued in lieu of the stock of the said constituent companies on the surrender thereof for that purpose by the respective holders thereof. Every stockholder in the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company and in the Union Pacific Railroad Company shall receive in place of every share of $100 surrendered a share of $100 in the new company; and every stockholder in the Kansas Pacific Railway Company, in shares in which are only $50 each, shall receive in place of every two shares of the stock at the time held by such stockholders in such company a share of the capital stock of the new corporation, upon surrendering to the new corporation the certificates of stock held by such stockholders."

Articles IV. and V. provide for the issuing and transfer of certificates of stock and the election of fifteen directors, a President, a Vice-President, and a Treasurer and Secretary, and Article VI. says: "The following-named persons shall be the first directors of said corporation: Fred. L. Ames, Ezra H. Baker, Elisha Atkins, T. Gordon Dexter, Sidney Dillon, Russell Sage, Jay Gould, Sidon Humphreys, David Dows, William L. Scott, Silas H. H. Clark, Thomas T. Eckert, John Sharp, Grenville M. Dodge, Carlos S. Greeley; and the following-named persons shall be the first officers of the said corporation: President, Sidney Dillon; Vice-President, Elisha Atkins; Treasurer and Secretary, Henry McFarland."

Article VII. says that unless otherwise provided the annual meeting shall be held in New York city on the first Wednesday following the 4th day of March of each year; and Article VIII. provides for the transfer of all the rights, privileges, exemptions, franchises, leases, leasehold interests, branches, and property of every description of the three companies to the new company.

Article IX. says that nothing in the agreement shall affect any right of the consolidated company to increase or restrict the amount of stocks or bonds, nor shall anything affect the right to issue all unissued bonds under the Kansas Pacific consolidated mortgages of May 1, 1879, wherein Jay Gould and Russell Sage are trustees. "And it is expressly agreed that the stockholders of the consolidated company shall have all the powers which would have been possessed by the stockholders of each constituent company if this consolidation had not been effected, to ratify, approve, and carry out any contracts made by either constituent company and requiring the ratification or approval of its stockholders thereafter. The power of the Union Pacific Railroad Company to issue all unissued bonds under the mortgages of July 1, 1879, wherein the Union Trust Company is trustee, is fully and completely reserved."

In Article X. the new company does not assume any separate or individual liability for the outstanding debts, obligations, and liabilities of the respective constituent companies. But it is agreed that nothing in the agreement "shall prevent any valid debt, obligation, and liability of either constituent company from being enforced against the property of the proper constituent company, which by force of these articles becomes the property of the consolidated company. The corporate existence of the respective constituent companies shall not absolutely cease eo instanti on the consummation of the union and consolidation herein provided for, but shall remain and continue so far as necessary to carry out the intent and purposes hereof."

Article XI. says that the articles shall go into effect and the consolidated company shall come into existence upon the day on which a copy is filed in the Department of the Interior; and in Article XII. the by-laws of the Union Pacific Railroad Company are provisionally adopted until changed and repealed.

Articles XIII. and XIV. says that all books, records, documents, &c., of the three companies shall be deemed and taken as far as necessary as the records and books of the consolidated company, and that the articles may be amended and modified as the holders of two-thirds of the stock of the consolidated company may direct or approve.

Article XV. is the last, and according to its provisions the respective corporate seals were affixed to the agreement, and it was signed as follows: "The Union Pacific Railroad Company, by Sidney Dillon, President. Attest, Henry McFarland, Secretary." "The Kansas Pacific Railway Company, by Sidney Dillon, President. Attest, A. H. Calef, Secretary." "The Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company, by D. M. Egerton, President. Attest, D. H. Moffatt, Jr., Secretary." "The Union Pacific Railway Company has signified and hereby signifies its assent to and acceptance of the foregoing articles of union and consolidation. Jan. 24, 1880. The Union Pacific Railway Company, by Sidney Dillon, President."

PACIFIC MAIL AND THE RAILROADS.

What is Said Regarding Contracts Between the Several Companies.

There were various rumors afloat about the Stock Exchange, yesterday, relative to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and its contracts with the Pacific Railroad Companies. They were in the main to the effect that the contract for maintaining rates between the two interests had been broken off, or a renewal of the contract had been refused.

An officer of the Union Pacific Railroad said that there was no contract between the companies in which he is interested and the steamship company. The contract expired some months ago, and since then the general terms of it had been kept up from day to day. No communication has been received from the steamship company within a week. As to the probability of a contract, he declined to speak.

The counsel of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company said in substance that there has not been a contract between the company he represents and the overland road since May last, except some relating to passenger traffic, which, in a subsidiary way, was not much importance. According to the terms of that agreement the railroads pay the steamship company $5 per passenger carried to San Francisco by the latter for transporting rates from that office. Since the contract was made the steamship freight contract lost spring, he said, the steamship company has continued to maintain freight rates to San Francisco, but no allowance has been made by the railroads. But no subsidy has been received from them for doing so. "Manifestly," said he, "this has given the railroads the advantage, but Pacific Mail has submitted to the delay, as its business other than to San Francisco has increased rapidly and been very remunerative. In the absence of the contract there is no reason for maintaining rates equal to those of the railroads. Pacific Mail, under its contract with the Panama Railroad, can carry cabin passengers to San Francisco for $75 and steerage passengers for $40, and make a little by it."

A prominent stockholder of Pacific Mail said, in substance, the following: "Since last May not only has the floating debt of the company been liquidated, but the debt to the Panama Railroad has been materially reduced, and this has been done notwithstanding the mistaken policy of the company in awaiting the conclusion of a contract, and thereby discouraging the San Francisco trade. The company now proposes to increase that trade by liberal contracts with shippers of first-class freight, making rates high enough to be remunerative, and yet so low that the railroads cannot cut under them. Such additional facilities as any increase of business may demand will be furnished."

About a week ago the Pacific Mail gave notice to the Pacific railroads that present arrangements were so unsatisfactory that unless changed at once, it would not continue the old contract rates.

MURDERER GREENFIELD'S MOUTH.

A Respite—What the Prisoner Says he Heard Through a Hole in his Cell.

SYRACUSE, Jan. 29.—The news that the Governor had respited Orlando Greenfield, who was sentenced to be hanged to-morrow, until Feb. 27, did not reach here until midnight last night. Greenfield had given up all hope, but he was cool and collected, and said that he was prepared to die. He was measured last night for a new suit of clothes which he was to wear on the fatal day. The gallows had been prepared and was to have been tested this afternoon. Yesterday Greenfield made a final statement, which he swore to before a notary public, charging the murder upon George Hinds and Alden and Royal Kellogg. It is as follows:

"I, Nathan Orlando Greenfield, being duly sworn, do depose and say, that in the fall of 1877, during the examination of Royal and Alden Kellogg in the court house at Pulaski, before Justices Fenton and Watson, upon the charge of the murder of my wife, I heard J. J. Lamoree, in conversation with the Kelloggs, say to them that unless they told the truth, the facts as they existed, he would be unable to clear them on the charge preferred against them. He said, 'I know you stole the grain, and Judge Huntington knows the other facts much better than I do.' Subsequently, after some additional conversation, Alden Kellogg said that he, Hines, and Royal Kellogg intended to rob Greenfield on the Saturday night, but that Jim Bloodgood was there, and they could not do the job. He further said that on the night of the murder George Hinds came over after them and told them that I (Greenfield) would be at home that night. Hinds knew that I had been on a collecting tour to raise money to make a payment on my place. Hinds said that Alice had been over at his house on the evening previous, and would stay all night, as she expected to go the next day where Grinnells was. Alden further said that he and Royal came down to my barn with Hinds, and that they took thirteen bags of oats. This was done early in the evening. Hinds knowing I would not be at home until later. Hinds drove the oats around the road and Royal and Alden went across lots to Hinds's house. The night was very dark. They got to Hinds's between 8 and 9 o'clock, and Hinds with the oats arrived there a short time afterward. About midnight Royal, Alden, and Hinds went to my house. They went first to the barn, and, finding no horse, they concluded I was not there. They went into the house and talked with Alice. She told them that I had been there with Mr. Hilton, or his hired man. They asked her if she had told them, and she said she had told them all about the matter, as they were her friends, and that they had told Greenfield all about it. She said Orlando has been here with Mr. Hilton, and she wanted them to take her away with them, as they had agreed to do. After talking with Alice a short time longer, they left and went up into the road to the point where the tracks were discovered, when they stopped and talked further. Alden further said that Alice knew of the Platt burglary about two weeks before, and that they were afraid she would be the means of sending them up. After standing and talking in the road a few moments, Hinds said they must do something with her; they must shut her mouth. Hinds said that if one of them would go back with him he would fix her. Alden said that Hinds and Royal went back, and he stayed in the road, and after they had been gone a few minutes he saw Greenfield come out of his father's house and go toward home. He then followed down into the slade of the tracks, intending to follow Greenfield into the yard, but when Greenfield got to the bars he saw the light, and immediately turned toward his father's. Alden said he was so far back he could not intercept Greenfield, and he then went into the house and told Hinds and Royal to run, as I (Orlando) had been there. Alden said that he grabbed the gun, and Royal had Greenfield's pants and vest, and Hinds said, 'Hold on a minute.' Hinds then took Greenfield's knife, which he had found in the buttery, and went to the bedroom with it, and stuck it into the crack of the floor, the blade being closed. The blood got on the ears, and that is the way the blood came on the ears and none inside of the handle. Hinds then took the knife and left it inside the buttery. The business was done with Royal's knife. Alden said that they all ran. The light that Greenfield saw was that of Hinds's lantern. Lamoree then told them that they would be held at Pulaski, but he thought he would get them off before the Grand Jury. Lamoree then asked what made them give up the gun, and they said they thought they would give it up and get the reward, and then deny ever having given it up, but that Grinnells went back on them. This is about all, and is the substance of a conversation I heard between Lamoree and the Kelloggs.

"I heard the above conversation through a hole, about six inches in diameter, running through the wall between my cell and the one occupied by the Kelloggs. When I saw Lamoree go into the Kelloggs' cell, I went to the hole and listened attentively, and heard the conversation in the above manner. I heard plainly and distinctly, every word that was said. The Grinnells above referred to is the Chas. Grinnells now in confinement in Auburn prison on the charge of burglary.

"NATHAN O. GREENFIELD."

PIGEON SHOOTING.

The Second Day of the Tournament in Dexter Park, East New York.

At the second day of the pigeon-shooting tournament in Dexter Park, East New York, the shooting was begun at 10½ A. M., and it lasted, with very little intermission, until 4.23 P. M. The birds were "trained birds," and they so puzzled some of the amateurs that they were often at their wits end, but the professional shooters knocked over their birds in good order. The first sweepstakes was open to all; $5 entrance; 5 pairs of birds each, 21 yards rise, 80 yards boundary; ties decided at 3 pairs of birds each. There were thirteen competitors. Messrs. Brewer and Height each killed 9 birds out of the 5 pairs, and divided first and second money. Five of the contestants killed 8 birds, making a tie for third money. In the shooting off at 3 pairs Dr. Talbot killed all of his birds and won the prize. The score was: Brewer, 9; Height, 9; Dr. Talbot, 14; Vanderveer, 11; Smith, 10; M. Johnson, 9; W. Shearer, 7; Col. Butler, 6; C. Hance, 5; Creed, 4; Barker, 3; Madison, 1; and Hever, 0.

The second sweepstakes was open to all; $5 entrance, at 10 single birds each, 25 yards rise, ties decided at 27 yards rise, miss and in out. Twenty-three shooters faced the traps. Messrs. Townsend, Johnson, and Brewer, all of New Jersey, captured the first three prizes by killing 9 birds each. Five men tied for the fourth prize by killing 8 birds each. After attempting to shoot off the tie Messrs. Jones, Golderslee, Bell, and Brewer divided the money. The score was: Townsend, 9; Johnson, 9; Brewer, 9; Golderslee, 8; Jones, 8; Bell, 8; Hear, 8; Greenwood, 7; Dr. Talbot, 7; Mallory, 7; Smith, 7; Leffingwell, 4; Watson, 4; Atkins, 3; Hance, 2; Hill, 2; Shearer, 2; Height, 2; Saunders, 2; Kochel, 2; Col. Butler, 0, and Hever, 0.
