THE NATIONAL DEMOCRACY.

Mr. Montgomery Blair Shows How Workingmen May Rally to the Old Standard.

TO THE WORKINGMEN: The issue of 1880 is whether the great corporations and moneyed interests, which have controlled the Government since the war, and applied it to accumulate the wealth of this country in the hands of the few, shall perpetuate this power and policy, or whether the people shall now assert their right to control the Government in the interests of the many.

The Democratic organization, while under its proper leaders, successfully withstood all attempts to make prey of the people, overwhelmed and crushed the monopolists, allowed the wealth of the country to be widely diffused, the workingmen to enjoy the fruits of their labor, and prevented them from being robbed by the artfully contrived legislation which, by appropriating the labors of the many to enrich the few, has created in our country during the few years of Republican rule the richest aristocracy in the world.

But when the Democratic organization passed under the control of the slave interest, the leaders who were in sympathy with the workingmen were proscribed. The fact that Silas Wright resigned his seat in the Senate of the United States to elect the National ticket in 1844 by being a candidate for Governor in New York, did not prevent the oligarchy from defeating his reelection in 1846 through the defection of their adherents that as they defeated the reelection of Lucius Robinson in the last election. The power of the Democratic National organization was thus brought into direct affiliation with the opposing organization, to proscribe the uncompromising leaders of the true Democracy, and force to the front those who would be subservient to the Southern leaders.

The effect has been most disastrous to the country. The war of secession, with its untold miseries, was not the worst evil which has resulted. The degradation which has been reached in American politics, which is so discouraging to the lovers of free institutions throughout the world, is all due to this baneful influence. It was the power of slavery to proscribe the representative men of the Northern Democracy and replace them by its subservient tools, which has substituted for a large and extent Ring rule for popular government.

The Tweed Ring, which has become so famous, was but one most conspicuous illustration of this. The Philadelphia Ring has been less notorious, only because there that Ring, composed, like Tweed's Ring, of the political leaders of both parties, put the city Government in the hands of the Republicans; and these examples have been followed by nearly all the municipalities in the country. There is a class of ulcerations in all of them who work the machine in the interest of the Ring in whose pay they are. This is the explanation of the enormous increase of municipal indebtedness within this period and of the proportionate increase of the wealth of the Ring masters.

Nor is this system of Ring pillage and Ring government confined to the municipalities. It extends to the State and national Governments, and its crowning iniquity was its installation of the present Chief Magistrate of the nation, in defiance of the will of the people.

From 1844 to 1876 the Southern leaders and the Democratic Ring politicians of the North, which they had created, either controlled the Democratic nominations for the Presidency, or so loaded them with obnoxious platforms as to secure their defeat, except in 1860, when the Convention divided and separate candidates were nominated. But in 1876, the masters of the party, in defiance of John Kelly, Tweed's successor, and Boss of Tammany, and Belmont, the nephew-in-law of his Uncle John Slidell (who was really the master spirit of secession, and put Belmont at the head of the Democratic Executive Committee), then defeated this combination and nominated and elected Tilden, who had signalized himself in life as an anti-slavery man and as a smasher of the Tweed Ring. But the Ring was still master in Congress, and counted him out and put Hayes in his place.

Hayes openly recognized his obligations to the Democratic Ring masters by putting a Southern Democratic leader in his Cabinet and putting his patronage at their disposal. Until they were forced by public opinion to the adoption of the Potter resolution, it is notorious that the so-called Democrats in Congress had quite the White House for more than the Republicans; and it is as certain that they did not go there for nothing as that Hayes did not adopt the extraordinary course of giving them a member of his Cabinet for nothing. On its face the transaction is the work of a corrupt Ring. Nor would any one hesitate to pronounce the Electoral Commission as corrupt a job as any ever put through by Tweed at Albany, but for the connection with it of Thurman and Bayard and others of high standing in the country. But this circumstance should not weigh against the plain and undisputed facts of the case. Tweed and other Ring masters have secured the cooperation of men of equal character and ability, not by giving them a share of their plunder, but by paying their subordinates. And it was so manifest in the interest of the ambition of these gentlemen to defeat Tilden, because of their relation to the slave oligarchy whose régime would end with the consummation of Tilden's election, that I openly challenged in the Union newspaper that Senatorial conference, because of Thurman's personal interest to him, to be members of the joint committee which reported the Electoral bill.

The declaration of Lamar, the old secession leader, the chairman of the Democratic caucus and of Tom Scott's subsidy committee, made at the outset, of the session that Ferry, the Republican President of the Senate, had the right to count the vote, meant exactly what the Union newspaper declared to be the fact, on the 14th of December, 1876, that the President-elect had been sold out. And the rivals of Mr. Tilden who reported the Electoral bill giving to Ferry the power to set aside his election, could only have intended to carry out the bargain announced by Lamar at the beginning of the session, for they had never heard of a politician deciding a political question against himself, and certainly they had no right to expect that any Radical would be an exception.

Judge Black, in his characteristic way, charged this upon them when, in speaking of this Electoral contrivance, in his speech in the South Carolina case before the Commission itself, he said: "Usually the fowler sets his net in view in sight of the bird; but this fowler of the contriver of the Electoral Commission, set his net in sight of the bird that went into it."

Undoubtedly many timid persons were driven into this Electoral Commission net, although they saw it plainly enough. It was a net, Ben Lamar and his crowd and Tilden's rivals were not of that class. They were the drivers, not the driven; and Thurman even, had the audacity to attempt to hector Senator Eaton into the support of his scheme in the open Senate.

They knew that more than two-thirds of the Republican Senators, with Conkling at their head, were on record against the right of the Vice-President to count the vote, and Mr. Frelinghuysen expressed his great elation at what he called "the liberality" of the Democratic Senators in surrendering by the Electoral bill the right of the Democratic House to exclude the fraudulent votes, when, as he said, the Republican party was estopped to deny that right; and hence the conspirators knew that the Republicans could not venture to endanger the peace of the country by denying that right if they were brought to the test, and accordingly they did not hesitate to arrest the count almost at the last moment, and until their confidence in Hayes's promises, which was temporarily shaken by an article which appeared at that time in a Columbus paper, was restored by the assurances which Messrs. Garfield, Sherman, and Matthews gave at the Wormley House conference.

Revolutions never go backward. The Democratic masses who cast off secession and Rule in the party, by the nomination of Tilden in 1876, will not be driven from that position, because the Ring masters and secessionists in Congress, causing themselves Democrats, sold out the President-elect to their allies in the opposing party, and have pursued him since with vindictiveness. The effect has been only to vindicate the man who for the time represents the people's cause and to assure them of crushing their enemies if they attempt in 1880 as in 1876.

The time has come, therefore, when all workingmen can make common cause with the Democratic masses, and avail themselves of their historical organization to rescue the Government from the great corporations and corrupt Rings which have prepared the way for the impendingness which now seems imminent, and restore it to the people.

MONTGOMERY BLAIR.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20, 1880.

MERE MENTION.

One thousand men will begin work to-day on the new hotel on Rockaway Beach.

In 1874 there were 750 mortgages in Suffolk County, Long Island, and in every township of the county being a mortgagee.

Mrs. Mobile, convicted of robbing and beating Mrs. Mobile, was on a visit in Atlanta, Ga., and was sentenced on her own testimony to ten years' imprisonment.

There is a case of death in one of our tramps near the river. The Post Office Department in New York has received a letter addressed to the farmers of Rockaway, Long Island, from the Rev. J. A. Mutchlach of Greenpoint.

An old tramp at Acton Canada, named Archie McDonald, died in a barn that he had set on fire after the cattle in it had been driven out. The Rev. Mr. Bailey of Woburn, on whom he prayed for "the minister of Woburn," died last week.

In digging for the foundation of a three-story house on Grand street, Brooklyn, the bones of human beings were found in a large quantity. The Times Square Stores are the fashionable resort of the ladies of R. H. Macy on the ladies' side.
