WILLIAM BUCHOLZ'S FRIEND.

THE RELUCTANT TESTIMONY OF THE WITNESS WHO FAINTED.

Conversations in Jail—Bucholz Talking about Escaping from Custody—The $20,000 that was Found on the Murdered Man's Body.

The black marks that have been deepening around William Bucholz's eyes were very apparent yesterday, as he took his seat in the Bridgeport court room. He was, as usual, neatly dressed, and he paid the closest attention to the evidence. Yet, haggard as his appearance was, he looked more at ease than Paul Hirscher as he went upon the witness stand. Mr. Hirscher is the witness who on Thursday fainted, and he did not seem yesterday to have entirely recovered. He was once a warm friend of Bucholz, and he was very nervous when he first went upon the stand to testify against him. He was able yesterday to tell all he knew, but he did so with apparent reluctance. He is the proprietor of a barroom in South Norwalk, and Bucholz was one of his customers.

Paul Hirscher testified that on the morning after the murder of Schulte Bucholz went to his saloon and showed him $200 in $20 notes. Before doing so he said, "Isn't it a terrible thing?" alluding to the murder of Schulte, whose body had been found. The witness replied that it was, and, in allusion to some story that had obtained currency with regard to Bucholz and Schulte having been attacked by tramps as they walked home on the preceding night, asked him whether he got hurt. "Oh, I got off with this," replied Bucholz, pointing to a slight scratch on his face. He then drew the witness behind a partition and showed him the money. The witness was surprised to see him in possession of so much, and said: "The old man must have given you this last night." "Oh, no," replied Bucholz, hastily. "It is my own money." He did not say where he got it, but he asked the witness to keep it for him while he went to the Coroner's inquest. Bucholz owed Hirscher a bill for cigars, and he told him to take the amount due out of the $200. The witness did so, and changed one of the notes to pay his rent. He did not notice whether that note had any private mark on it, but the others were marked thus: 380 | 159. In the evening Bucholz again entered the barroom, bought some cigars, and gave the witness another $20 note similarly marked. He told the witness to keep all the money for him until he asked for it. Subsequently he sent two of the notes to New York, thus leaving seven in Mr. Hirscher's possession. When search was being made for Schulte's lost watch and money, Bucholz again went to the witness, and asked him to swear that he received the notes some three or four months before the murder. Hirscher refused to do so. Bucholz told the witness that he might keep the seven $20 notes. Mr. Hirscher kept them for some time, and then handed them over to the State's Attorney.

The notes were offered in evidence. They have been identified as the property of Schulte, and the State claims that they were taken from his person by the murderer. The mark 380 | 159 was a private mark used by Schulte.

After the arrest of Bucholz the witness went to the jail and told him that Schulte's watch had been found, and it was said that he, the prisoner, had been seen standing near the spot where it was discovered on the night of the murder. The prisoner said, "My watch is just like Schulte's," and he pulled out of his pocket a little open-faced gold watch, and showed it to the witness.

Charles La Croix, the keeper of an oyster saloon, identified a $50 note, marked like the $20 notes already shown, as one that he had received from Bucholz. Several other witnesses were examined to identify bills of various denominations, once belonging to Schulte, and having passed through the hands of Bucholz.

Edward Burgher testified that he had received two $20 notes from William Bucholz, with instructions to pay them, to his former boarding-house keeper in New York, and to bring away all letters that arrived for the prisoner, and especially one from his sister in Germany, which, he believed, contained money.

George H. Graff, a German lad, born in South America, said he was a prisoner in Bridgeport jail with Bucholz. They were often together, and spoke in German so that nobody within hearing could understand what they said. The witness once asked Bucholz if he would like to get out of jail, and the prisoner replied that Graff was a fool to make such an inquiry. Graff then asked him some questions about his own affairs, but Bucholz said his counsel had instructed him not to say anything about his business. He told Graff to follow instances. The witness said: "If you will help me to get out of jail, I will help you. If I had any money I could get out." Bucholz replied that if Graff had spoken sooner he could have helped him, but he had given all his money to his lawyer. He offered his watch to Graff, and he told him to dispose of it and buy some saws, but the witness refused to take it, saying that he had one of his own. "Well," said Bucholz, "it doesn't matter. They couldn't keep me here long if I wanted to get out. I shall wait for my trial. I shall get off, and then I shall come back and get you out." The witness thanked him, and the prisoner went on to say that when he was out of jail it would be necessary for him to procure himself a lawyer, dyeing his hair and getting a set of false teeth. Soon after the Hayden trial the witness, Bucholz, and two or three other prisoners were sitting together talking, generally about murder cases. They had been speaking in English, but Graff turned to Bucholz and said, in German: "Bucholz, couldn't you have got the money without killing the old man?" "Oh, they can't convict me of that," replied Bucholz. "They would never have supposed me if I had not been a fool and given the seven $20 notes to my creditors." Bucholz, the witness said, did not warn him of the probable results of repeating what he had said to him. "But," said Graff, "his looks spoke more than words." Once the witness asked Bucholz why he did not quit the country, and he replied, "Well," said the prisoner replied: "Why didn't you mention that before? Good advice always comes too late." He afterward told the witness that had he not been arrested he would have gone to Australia.

David Dayton was again called to the stand, and he testified that when the body of Schulte was found it had on two coats, both open, and with one pocket turned out. A paper parcel was found in another pocket, and, on being opened, it was found to contain money, German and American, to the amount of nearly $20,000. It was given to the foreman of the Coroner's jury. The witness identified two coats shown to him as the garments that he saw on Schulte's body. The inner coat, an old black frock, was one stained with blood. The witness said it had been taken off, rolled up, and placed under the dead man's head. The wounds were bleeding slightly, and the blood rolled upon the coat. The witness described the bringing home of the body.

The trial was adjourned till Monday.

ROBBED OF HIS WIFE.

The Story that a Song-and-Dance Man Related to a Brooklyn Justice.

As Justice Courtney, in the Third District court-room in Brooklyn, was yesterday conversing with John Dwyer, the ex-prize fighter, who is now the Court Clerk, a man whose head was marked with cuts and bruises, partly bandaged with a towel, asked him for a warrant for the arrest of one Henry Whitley for assault.

"My name is Pargeter," said the man, "Henry Pargeter of Selby, West Riding, Yorkshire, England, and I am a song-and-dance artist. Three years ago, when I was working on my father's farm, I visited Liverpool on business, and while I was there I heard Elvina St. Clair sing ballads in a variety theatre. I was fascinated by her, and in a few months I managed to make her acquaintance, and we were married. She persuaded me to run away from home, and to go upon the variety stage with her. We were happy and played always to big business. At a little variety theatre in Loughborough, Leicestershire, where we were playing, my wife became acquainted with Henry Whitley, a handsome horizontal bar performer. At the end of the second week of our engagement they eloped together, and I did not see them again until last night. I was broken-hearted for a time, but I continued to dance. Six months ago I came to America, partly to try my luck, but also to look for my wife, who, I heard from Signor Ferranti, the ventriloquist, was travelling here. I had $500 when I came here, but I spent it all looking for engagements. I haven't done much in my profession since I have been here. I got so far down that I actually tried to get work in the Navy Yard, and as I failed in that also, I was at my wit's end to keep from starving.

"As I was passing Fort Greene Park last night I suddenly came upon Whitley and my wife. I was so reduced in money and dejected in spirit, that I was glad to meet any one who knew me, and I shook hands with them and told them about old times. Whitley gave me some money when I told him my condition. I asked him why he had run away with my wife, and he said that she told him that she was not married. I asked my wife why she had said that, and she replied because she wanted to. I then threatened to have them arrested for bigamy, and Whitley gave me several blows on the head with his cane, knocking me down. Both he and my wife then ran away. I don't know where they live."

LATEST FROM CALIFORNIA.

Kearney Excluded from the Assembly Chamber—Accused of Intimidating a Member.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 27.—To-day the seat of war has been removed from this city to the Assembly Chamber at Sacramento, where it has assumed a serio-comic aspect. Since his return from the East, Denis Kearney has been making himself very officious about the Legislature, loafing, &c., inside the bar. This led to a motion yesterday, evidently aimed at Kearney, to exclude all but privileged persons from the floor of the Assembly. After the adjournment Kearney approached Mr. Adams of Sonoma, in the House, and used threatening language toward him on account of his action on the motion. To-day Mr. Tyler of Alameda offered a resolution to exclude Kearney from the Assembly Chamber and from the galleries, lobbies, halls, committee rooms, &c., under the control of the Assembly.

The resolution was referred to a special committee, who, after hearing the evidence, decided to report that Kearney had been guilty of an attempt to intimidate Mr. Adams. Besides this, there was a very lively passage in the Assembly to-day over another matter. A few days ago Mr. Kingman, a member of the Assembly from San Francisco, telegraphed to Kearney:

We hear you are erecting gallows on the Sand Lots. There is more need of erecting gallows in Sacramento. Come up immediately, and bring some hemp.

The telegram found its way into some of the papers to-day, and a resolution to inquire into the matter was introduced. A lively discussion ensued, during which Mr. Braunhart (workingman), from San Francisco, flatly refused to obey the order of the Speaker to sit down. He was brought to the bar of the House and suspended for three days. Subsequently, when the Kearney question came up, Braunhart appeared on the floor and demanded the right to vote, but the Speaker ordered him to be removed as an intruder.

PROBABLY A FATAL PRIZE FIGHT.

A Jersey City Pugilist's Skull Fractured and his Recovery Doubtful.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27.—A prize fight took place in this city at an early hour this morning, in a room at 1,229 Vine street, between Edward Douglass of Philadelphia and Frank Harris of Jersey City.

Both men were terribly punished, Harris having his skull fractured in the last round. He has been insensible all day, and it is thought he cannot recover.

ENJOINED FROM RECEIVING LETTERS.

The Alleged Swindle by Brooklyn Men in Brussels—Justice Gilbert's Order.

In behalf of Eugene Zellenkoff, the Russian Councillor of Marine, who, it is claimed, was swindled by John and Henry Collins of Brooklyn out of 83,000 francs in Brussels, Belgium, last December, counsel for the Belgium Government yesterday appeared before Justice Gilbert, in Brooklyn. The counsel asked for an injunction restraining all of the members of the family of John Collins of 374 Franklin avenue, Brooklyn, from demanding, accepting, or receiving seventeen registered letters in the Post Offices of this city and Brooklyn, which are supposed to contain proceeds of the alleged swindle, and are addressed to the father, mother, and sisters of the Collins brothers, who are now in prison in Naples. In the affidavits accompanying the application was one from Charles Mali, the Belgian Consul and agent of the plaintiff, who swears that from information based on telegrams from the Department of Foreign Affairs of the kingdom of Belgium, telegrams from the Russian Legation at Brussels to the Consul-General of Russia in New York, and other authentic communications to various periodicals of New York, a commission rogatory issued by the Judge d'Instruction or Examining Magistrate of the Tribunal of the First Instance of Brussels he knows the following facts:

In December, 1879, John Collins, under the name of Duncan Everett, John Joseph Collins, under the name of J. H. Cleveland, and Henry Collins, under the name of John Collins, obtained by false and fraudulent means from the plaintiff at Brussels 83,000 francs in the currency of Belgium, which in the currency of this country would be $16,600; that John Joseph Collins and Henry Collins represented that they were the owners of a valuable process for the manufacture of wood, and they induced him to require an interest in such supposed invention and to advance large sums to erect a factory. After having obtained these advances John Joseph Collins and Henry Collins represented to the plaintiff that the machinery necessary to put said supposed process in operation was owned by John Collins, then known as Duncan Everett, and that John Collins had a lien of 83,000 francs upon it, without the payment of which sum the machinery could not be procured from St. Louis, Missouri, where it was represented to be, and that the operations under the process invented could not be carried on without the machinery; that John Collins corroborated these assertions, and the money was advanced. The money thus obtained, it is further alleged, was seen by the sentence registered letters to Betsey Collins, wife of John Collins, Maggie Collins, and Mamie Collins, said letters being addressed to Mrs. John Collins, Mr. John Collins, Miss Mary Collins, Mr. J. Collins, Miss Mamie Collins, Miss Lizzie Collins, Miss A. Collins, Miss M. J. Collins, and Miss Maggie Collins. Fourteen of these letters are in the New York Post Office, and three are in Brooklyn. The letters have not been delivered. If they are delivered, the plaintiff claims that he will suffer irreparable loss and injury.

Andrew D. Mellick, Jr., who swears to having examined the letters, says that they purport to be forwarded by D. Henry, from Metz, Germany; D. Everett, from Frier, Germany; J. Henry, from Luxembourg, and D. Everett, from Antwerp, and Dureu. They are postmarked within four days of each other, at different places.

Justice Gilbert granted the injunction restraining John Collins, Betsey Collins, John Joseph Collins, Maggie Collins, Mamie Collins, and Henry Collins from demanding, receiving, or accepting any registered letters from the Post Office authorities, and especially from receiving those mailed between Dec. 26, 1879, and Dec. 29, 1879. Charles Mali and C. C. Frenkhousen became sureties to the undertaking on the injunction in the sum of $500.

MOLLY MAGUIREISM IN TROY.

Employees of the Bessemer Steel Works Threatened with Assassination.

TROY, Feb. 27.—Trouble is apprehended in the lower part of the city, in consequence of the foolish acts of several ex-employees of the Bessemer steel works. These would-be Molly Maguires quit work of their own accord, and, angered at the readiness with which their resignations were accepted, sought to induce other workmen to quit. Failing to do so by fair means, they resorted to threats, and the authorities were surprised to-day by seeing a number of placards, ornamented with coffins and skulls and crossbones, posted in the neighborhood of the works, of which the following are samples:

(Coffin.) TAKE NOTICE. (Death's head.)
Peter Kearns, his ——, and Moscow Hertzer, the bootblack, are in scabbing. Mose Laundry likewise. Mose is a brother to Louis Laundry. Let them beware.
NOTICE. TAKE NOTICE.
Everybody are forbidden to go near the mill as the strikers are against those who go in and scab, and will punish those who go in, especially Joseph Laundry. He will be killed, the first chance the boys get at him. By order of the strikers.

The authorities have taken the matter in hand, and the persons threatened have armed themselves, and declare that they will shoot any one who molests them.

Wife Murderer Hanged.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 27.—James Howard was hanged in Ozark, Franklin County, to-day. In January, 1879, Howard's wife was dancing with a man of whom he was jealous. He seized her by the hair and dragged her from the room to his home, where he further maltreated her until she died from the effects of her injuries.

Late last night Gov. Miller remitted the death sentence of Thos. Edward, who was to have been hanged to-day, to await consideration of his appeal to the Supreme Court.
