RECEIVER WHITE'S PLAN.

A SALE THAT WAS STAYED BY AN ORDER FROM JUSTICE GILBERT.

Proposing to Dispose of Alleged Worthless Paper of J. Lloyd Haigh for the Benefit of the Grocers' Bank—Two Petitions Heard.

After the indictment of J. Lloyd Haigh, the wire rope maker, for forging securities placed as collateral with the Grocers' Bank, the receiver of the bank, S. V. White, put in the hands of District Attorney Phelps three forged acceptances. One of those was for $3,630.29 on C. Sidney Norris & Co. of Baltimore; another of $5,000 on David Haley, Haigh's father-in-law, and a third upon a Philadelphia firm. On the assurance of the District Attorney that these specimen forgeries would be all that was needed in the prosecution, Mr. White obtained an order from Justice Gilbert authorizing him to sell by public auction the claims of the bank against J. Lloyd Haigh, amounting to $70,163, and papers purporting to be bills receivable amounting to $100,482.75. These bills receivable were the remainder of the alleged forgeries. Mr. White had arranged with Anderson & Co. of Pittsburgh, who were J. Lloyd Haigh's principal creditors, that they should bid for the bills at the auction, and the price fixed is said to have been $42,000. Messrs. Anderson & Co. were willing to purchase the claims, to use them in the capitalization of J. Lloyd Haigh's debts and the formation of a corporation to carry on his business. On Saturday last, when the sale was about to be made, a representative of the firm of Anderson & Co. being on hand ready to bid for the claims and alleged forged papers, Receiver White was served with an order from Justice Gilbert staying the sale, and was ordered to show cause yesterday why the stay should not be permanent, why a referee should not be appointed to determine the genuineness of the securities collateral to the claim, and why the receiver should not be compelled to give notice to Mr. William Dean, the petitioner, of all proceedings hereafter had in connection with any matter affecting the interests of the bank, that he and his attorney might be at liberty to appear and summon and cross-examine witnesses.

Mr. William Dean is a lawyer, and is administrator of Thomas Dean, deceased, whose estate owns 140 shares of the capital stock of the bank. The widow, who is an administratrix, is seventy-seven years old, and lives in Tarrytown. Mr. Dean, in his petition, objects to the sale of the claims or collaterals, because, he says, the securities are tainted in the market, and the public are ignorant which of the securities are genuine and which are forged, or as to which have genuine endorsements by solvent persons; also because persons who might otherwise bid therefor fear to become purchasers of the forged securities, and render themselves apparently, or in fact, subject to the pains and penalties of the criminal law; and, furthermore, because only persons concerned in said forgeries will bid for the securities, and so obtain possession of them and of the whole evidence of such forgeries for the purpose of destroying the same, and so defeat justice and prevent the realization of any advantage to the bank from the genuine endorsements.

When the point was raised that the petitioner should have special notice of all future proceedings, Justice Gilbert promptly denied this part of the application.

The affidavit of Receiver S. V. White was submitted. In it he says, speaking of Mr. Dean: "I told him specifically that I was not selling any collateral, or anything connected with said Haigh, which I had reason to believe had any value, beyond such as attached to said Haigh's name. * * * I also explained to said Dean that said demands against Haigh were of value to one party, a prominent Pittsburgh manufacturer of steel and iron, not for any purpose of concealing the forgeries, but to enable him to get control of the business of manufacturing wire formerly conducted by said Haigh, and that aside from that consideration, I did not believe there was any one who was both able and willing to advance any money for the purpose of getting control of said forged securities. I explained fully to said Dean my motive for offering said demand for sale, and he appeared to be satisfied and to approve of my course. * * I am fully convinced that if I am prevented from selling said demand in the manner in which I have proposed to sell it, many thousand dollars will be lost to the bank which otherwise might be realized, and it will probably be impossible for me to pay the creditors without a resort to the liability of the stockholders."

Justice Gilbert said that it seemed to him that the sale of the forged securities could not be sanctioned, as it might be utterance of forged paper such as is prohibited by law. He, however, reserved his decision, and gave the receiver's counsel, Mr. Blair, permission to hand in authorities in favor of the other view of the case.

The counsel for Mr. Thomas Dean asked for another stay from Justice Gilbert, to prevent Receiver White from delivering to Joseph Scheider & Co., or any other person, 300 shares of the stock of the Grocers' Bank belonging to S. B. White (formerly President of the bank), and for an order to the receiver to show cause why the 300 shares of stock should not be held as security for the indebtedness of S. B. White to the bank. The claim of the bank against Joseph Scheider & Co. was the subject of a reference before Alex. Cameron in January.

The report of the referee recommended that upon the payment of certain cash and delivery of notes the receiver should deliver up all securities and evidences of debt in his possession, including 300 shares of stock belonging to S. B. White, excepting only 396 shares of the stock of the bank belonging to Scheider, which the receiver was directed to retain as part of the assets of the Grocers' Bank. The receiver was also authorized to compromise the claim of the bank against Joseph Scheider & Co., amounting to about $66,000, for $5,000 cash and $15,000 in notes, although it appears that the Bank of Montreal held acceptances made by Joseph Scheider & Co. for $21,000, which had been guaranteed by the Grocers' Bank prior to their becoming the property of the Bank of Montreal. Mr. Dean's petition alleges that while Samuel B. White and Joseph Scheider are directors of the Grocers' Bank, they are not mentioned in the testimony and report as being or having been directors, and that Samuel B. White owned 774 shares of the stock of the bank on Jan. 8, 1879; that he is brother-in-law of Charles Denison, the President and a director of the bank. The petitioner asks that the previous order, made Jan. 28, 1880, as to the settlement of Joseph Scheider & Co., be so far modified as to direct the receiver to retain 300 shares of stock belonging to Samuel B. White, and hold them as part of the assets of the bank, and to proceed to collect all the indebtedness of S. B. White.

Justice Gilbert reserved his decision on this also.

EAST SIDE RAPID TRANSIT.

A Falling off in Transfers at Chatham Square—Surface Roads Affected.

The experience that everybody had who crossed the elevated railroad bridge at Chatham square on Monday evening has had a great effect in reducing the number of exchanges in commission hours ever since. Last evening a not less conspicuous fact than the falling off in transfers was the approximation to equality in numbers going from the South Ferry line to the Third avenue road and those exchanging from the City Hall line to the Second avenue road. On Monday evening there were at least seven of the former to one of the latter. The City Hall Depot stairs were thronged during the commission hours, and every train that went out was full, some of them uncomfortably crowded. The Second avenue up trains were not so thronged on the lower end of the route, but were packed by the time they got to Fourteenth street.

The Second avenue surface cars show material falling off in patronage, especially during the commission hours, and there is also a decrease in the travel by the Third avenue horse cars, but not to such a marked extent, especially during those hours in which the fare on the elevated roads is ten cents. There is a rumor afloat that the Third Avenue Railway Company have been favorably considering the reduction of their fare to three cents in the event of the cutting down of the elevated tariff to five cents by legislative enactment. That they are not alarmed by the prospect of cheaper fares on the steam roads seems shown by the announcement that it is purposed to put twenty more cars on this line on the 1st of April. Experience has demonstrated that they will still get their full share of the profitable short-trip travel. On the Second avenue surface road a reduction of cars is already talked of.

The boldness with which pickpockets have been operating recently at the elevated railway stations, and the entire absence of any precautions to protect the public against them, has caused a great deal of complaint. The Manhattan Elevated Railroad Company employs no detectives. Two English women are now "working" the elevated trains, in the commission hours particularly, with remarkable success, and, although they are known, it does not seem to be anybody's business to catch them. The manner in which they relieved a gentleman of his valuable watch yesterday at the Chatham square station, affords a good illustration of their boldness and skill. They stationed themselves near a gate as an up-town Second avenue train stopped, and one of them glided ahead of the gentleman upon the car platform, while the one behind jostled him rudely, as if excited by haste. In the same instant, the foremost one turned, exclaiming: "Oh! This isn't the Harlem train," and pushed by him to get back to the station platform, while her accomplice exclaimed: "Oh! No. I forgot. We must go across the bridge." Their haste and excitement seemed perfectly natural in the prevalent confusion, and in a moment more the train was off. Then the gentleman casually noticed that his chain was out and his watch gone. The robbery had been effected in that instant of jostling at the car door.

POLICEMAN MORAN'S WIFE.

Her Charges Against Him of what She Deems Unbecoming an Officer.

"Policeman John Moran of the New street squad is accused of conduct unbecoming an officer, in this, to wit," said Vincent Clark, clerk of the Police Central Office Court, reading from a document yesterday, "that on the 5th day of November, 1879, between the hours of 6 and 9 o'clock in the evening, he threw the complainant, Mary Moran, from the bulkhead of a pier on South street, near Fulton, into the East River. Second, that on Feb. 17, 1880, he did stab and beat the complainant at 30 Thompson street."

"Is this charge true?" asked Commissioner Nichols of the complainant, who was the accused policeman's wife.

"It is, your Honor, every word, only there's not enough. It was on the evening of election day, and he was on his beat, on South street. I went to him for money. He gave me two $20 bills, and when I asked him for more, he tossed me into the water," was the rapid reply, "and that's not the worst. Once he poured kerosene oil all over me and set fire to it. Then he locked me in a room, and kept me nine days without a drop to eat or drink; and he broke my fingers (exhibiting two fingers whose nails were black), and only this morning he cracked my skull with the heel of his boot because I wouldn't buy beer for him."

When Mrs. Moran paused for breath, Commissioner Nichols asked: "And notwithstanding all this, you still continue to live with him?"

"Ah, your Honor, I can't help it," said the woman, shaking her head as if she had been declared guilty of a crime.

"Well, what have you to say?" asked the Commissioner, turning to the husband.

"It's all false from beginning to end. She's jealous of me on account of her 13-year old sister, and if you give me time I can prove I never threw her into the water," he replied.

"Let me show your Honor where he stabbed me," shrieked the complainant. "I'm striped like a zebra."

The case was adjourned.

Drs. Hardy and Jackson, in the City Prison, yesterday dressed the wounds of Harry Ryan. There was a deep cut extending from the left temple to the right eyebrow and down to the bone; another, quite as deep, but not as long, on the forehead; and a third, which divided one of his eyebrows. These injuries were made by Policeman Edward McCabe's club. John Boyle had three scalp wounds, besides contusions of the face, made by Policeman Sage's club. Ryan is a fireman aboard the steamer Niagara, and was drunk. Boyle is a truckman, and lives at 93 Greenwich street.

High Prices for Celery.

Celery has been sold at higher prices this spring than ever before in the history of Washington Market. From thirty-eight cents a dozen bunches in November last the price has advanced during winter until last week, when $4.50 was obtained for a dozen bunches. To advance the price to $4.50 it was said that the celery growers had combined to keep their stock of celery in the trenches until late in the winter, and thus force up prices. "That is an absurd theory," said market gardener James Kirkman, in Greenville, N. J., yesterday. "There are fewer celery growers near New York," he said, "than is generally supposed. The mass of celery sold in Washington Market is grown on this neck of land between the Morris Canal and Communipaw, and around the city of Newark. Farmers in eastern Long Island, however, have gone into celery growing of late years. From the nature of the plant no 'corner' could be arranged among celery producers. If the growers hold their produce too long it decays in the ground. The plants are harvested as late as possible in order that they may be kept as late as possible in spring. Sometimes the gardeners who are a little late get caught, and the better stalks are mown down by frost. Last fall, you remember, an early frost came. It strangely neglected the Neck while it cut the celery of the Newark growers clean. There are nearly 250 acres of land on the Neck, solely used for growing celery. The Newark gardeners have sifty as much, and, together with the celery land on Long Island, there is well on towards 500 acres of celery land around New York. It was because the Newark plants were witted by frost that our celery became so valuable. Some of our gardeners have taken in from $7,000 to $8,000. Less than $1,500 a dozen bunches wouldn't pay the farmer."

An Actress of the Last Generation.

Mrs. Mary Chapman, whose recent death in San Francisco, at the age of 67, is announced, retired from the stage in that city a few years ago, after playing old women for a long period there and in other cities of the Union. For many years she was attached to the companies of Manager John T. Ford in Baltimore and Washington. She was a woman of quick wit and great exuberance of spirits. In early life she was popular as a soubrette. Her appearances in that class of characters were mainly confined to the West, in the primitive days when railroads were scarce and dramatic companies travelled in wagons and played behind oil lamps. Mrs. Chapman was born in England, and in 1830 she married Mr. Trowbridge, a travelling manager, who came soon afterward with her to this country. After a few years of Western travel he died, in 1836. She then formed for years part of Sol Smith's company. In 1845 she married John Silsbee, a star personator of Yankee characters. In the following year she played Elsa during a long run of the "Cataract of the Ganges" at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia. Silsbee died in 1855. In October, 1858, she married William A. Chapman, an English low comedian, who died about 1861. He was not related to Blanch and Ella Chapman.

Maul's Story of a Robbery.

Antonio Maul arrived in Jersey City on Tuesday night, having come from Illinois with the intention of sailing for Germany. He got drunk and flourished a pistol in the street, for which he was arrested. When arraigned before Justice Davis he said that he had been robbed of $1,100, and showed that one of his pockets had been cut out. But he had $15 in another pocket, and that the thieves had failed to find. Justice Davis fined him $10 for carrying a pistol, and told him that if he could substantiate his story the fine would be remitted.

Driven from his Work.

Edward Carr, a painter of this city, who had been out of work for some time, yesterday obtained a job in Jersey City. At noon his wife took his dinner to him. While he was eating, a number of Jersey City painters gathered around the couple and told them that unless they returned to New York at once they would suffer for it. The police took Carr and his wife to the police station for protection, and in the afternoon they went home.
