THE NATION'S PHYSICIANS.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED REPRESENTATIVE MEDICAL MEN IN COUNCIL.

Discussing their Art by Day and Permitting Themselves to be Entertained in Divers Light and Delightful Ways After Dinner.

The American Medical Association began its thirty-first annual convention at Association Hall, in this city, yesterday. About 1,500 delegates were elected to represent the different States and Territories, and at least 1,000 had arrived yesterday. It is many years since the annual meeting of the Medical Association was held in this city, and the local Committee of Arrangements, headed by Dr. T. Galliard Thomas, have striven to make this meeting a memorable one. No pains have been spared. Each delegate as he arrives is presented with a whole batch of tickets of invitation to various entertainments, and these tickets are so large, and so beautifully engraved and colored, that doubtless most of the delegates will take them home and preserve them as mementoes.

The annual meeting, which is to be in session four days, was opened at 10 A. M., with President Lewis A. Sayre in the chair. The hall was full of doctors. There was a remarkable resemblance among them. About three-fourths of these disciples of Hippocrates were bald headed, and at least nine-tenths of them were dressed in black, although chemists say that black fabrics are most apt to take up the germs of contagious diseases, just as they absorb with greatest facility radiated heat and light. The gold-headed cane was remarkably scarce. All of the doctors showed the unmistakable signs of hard work, and almost every one had a care-worn expression on his face. Some of them really looked as though they slept in their clothes, to save the trouble of dressing when called up in the middle of the night. A spectator having spoken of this to a delegate from Michigan, the Doctor said: "How can you wonder at it? Our hardest work is often done in the small hours of the morning, after being roused out of a sound sleep. It is the same as if a lawyer were called up in the middle of the night, obliged to tackle a most difficult lawsuit and have his brief ready by daylight. That's the kind of life we have to lead."

The convention was opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Morgan of St. Thomas's Church. Dr. T. J. Thomas then made the address of welcome in his usual happy way. "It is sixteen years since the association met here," said Dr. Thomas, "and sixteen years now are equal to a cycle in the olden times. This is the representative city of America, and it has acquired a true appreciation of science. Every charitable institution rests upon a tripod—the gold of the wealthy, the Christian faith, and the science of medicine. The characteristic of the present period is the intermingling of thought. In the past ages brain force was the same as it is now, but the printing press, the railroad, and the telegraph are the three great agents that have made our civilization superior to that of the past. Take these away, and men would be as sluggish as they ever were. What glorious havoc they have made with the theories of the schools!"

President Sayre in his annual address alluded to the remark of a recent English writer who had asked: "What has America done for the advancement of the arts, of literature, and of medicine and surgery?" In answer to the latter part of the question it was only necessary to mention anæsthesia, ovariotomy and orthopedic surgery. He thought it was time that the metric system of weights and measures should be adopted by the profession in this country.

A resolution by which the members of the association were to agree to adopt the metric system in writing prescriptions was subsequently introduced and referred to a special committee.

Dr. Montrose A. Pallen, Chairman of the Judicial Committee, announced that 184 papers had been submitted to be read before the association, and that the committee was busy day and night examining them and determining which ones out of this great mass should be accepted.

The association was in session up to 1½ P. M. A recess was then taken, and at 2 o'clock the members met in sections. There was the Section of the Practice of Medicine, Materia Medica, and Physiology; the Section of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children; the Section of Surgery and Anatomy; the Section of State Medicine, Public Hygiene, Medical Jurisprudence, Chemistry, and Psychology, and the Section of Ophthalmology, Otology, and Laryngology. Three of the sections met in different rooms in the association building, and the other two met in the two lecture rooms of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. One or more papers were read and discussed in each section. To-day, again the association will meet as a whole in the forenoon and divide up in sections in the afternoon. This will be the programme also for all four of the days during which the convention is to last, with the exception of Friday.

Last evening the association was given a reception at the Academy of Music by the members of the profession in this city and other citizens. This evening a complimentary entertainment will be given at Booth's Theatre, when Mr. Booth will appear as Iago, in Shakespeare's "Othello." To-morrow evening the members will be received at the New York Academy of Medicine and at the private residences of Mayor Cooper and Mr. August Belmont. On Friday afternoon they are to be taken on an excursion up the North and East Rivers, and down the bay to Coney Island.

Princeton Beats Dartmouth.

A match for the college base ball championship was played yesterday on the St. George Cricket grounds, Hoboken, between the Princeton and Dartmouth College nines. The two nines were out in their full strength, and the contest was close from first to last. Play was called shortly after 3 o'clock P. M., when the Princetons went to the bat, with the green-stockinged Dartmouth team in the field. Not a run could be scored on either side until the fifth inning, and very few of the batsmen could earn a base, so effective was the pitching of Rundlett and Horton, and so well was it supported behind the bat by Vram and Schenck. The field support, too, was first class, the errors being very few. In the fifth inning the Princetons got two men on earned bases, and after two outs were out an unlucky throw by the Dartmouth short stop let in the only runs of the match. In the last inning the Dartmouths made a plucky rally at the bat, but they could not score a run, and the result was the success of the Princetons by 2 to 0. This places them at the head of the championship list, but it does not give them the championship, as they have yet to play Brown and Amherst.
